The project cost has doubled from $200 million to $400 million in less than six months. This lack of budgetary discipline raises serious concerns, particularly when funded through opaque private donations that may create conflicts of interest. The American people deserve full transparency regarding who is financing alterations to the People's House and what access or influence they may receive in return. Proper congressional oversight would ensure accountability to taxpayers and future generations.

At 90,000 square feet—larger than the 55,000-square-foot White House itself—this addition risks overwhelming the architectural balance and historical character of our nation's most symbolic residence. Even if event space is needed, surely a more appropriately scaled solution could meet functional requirements while respecting the existing structure's prominence.

The circumvention of normal review procedures sets a troubling precedent. Projects of far smaller scope have undergone years of environmental study, public consultation, and commission review. Rushing this massive undertaking undermines the careful stewardship processes established to protect federal landmarks. Meaningful public input cannot occur after demolition is complete and foundations are poured.

I would encourage the Commission to consider whether:

- A more modest expansion could meet legitimate functional needs
- Existing temporary solutions, while imperfect, remain adequate for the limited occasions requiring large-scale entertaining
- Resources might be better directed toward pressing national priorities
- A slower, more transparent process would better serve our democratic values

The White House belongs to all Americans, across generations. Any modifications should reflect our collective judgment, not expedited timelines that foreclose meaningful review. I urge the Commission to ensure this project receives the rigorous scrutiny, public input, and careful deliberation that our national heritage has been built on.

Respectfully,
Jill Doran

First off, there should never have been a question that Trump could destroy the East Wing. The destruction of the White House's history is just egregious.

The construction needs to be approved by a process, not by Trump who uses his ego to push forth its building. He should never had been allowed to tear it down. The financing should be controlled by Congress and should be transparent. The system for funding appears more like bribes from the rich but ultimately, we the people will end up footing the bill. Trump has already taken billions from us one way or the other. I just give this building of the ballroom a BIG FAT NO!

No to Trump and his fanatical fancy to placate his lost mind and NO to the ballroom.

The East Wing should be reconstructed in keeping with the scale and proportion of the White House as a whole and should not be so large as to throw off the proportions of the entire building. I am still grieving the loss of the East Wing of the Whitehouse and Jacqueline's rose garden. I feel as if a significant part of our national history has been stolen and carelessly erased. None of us, the people, were given a choice in the destruction of the People's house. I really want it built back the way it was!

This hideous, 80'000 square foot, gilded monstrosity of a "ballroom" is meant to flatter, and make indelible, someone that this country would rather forget! He has wrought so much desecration on this country, devastation that will take many years to recover from.

Please don't allow this project to go forward. Trump is a very immoral and antagonistic human being who has hurt so many people. He deserves to be impeached and convicted not exalted and enshrined!

Thank you for this opportunity to submit my feelings and opinion. Sincerely, Tracy E. Cohen

My name is Shea Mizuno, and I am a 32 year old American citizen. The East Wing Modernization project, specifically the large ballroom, is entirely unneeded, excessive, and a waste of the American taxpayer's money. Rather than elevate the official residence of the President, the new proposed building is disproportionate, and takes away from the majesty of the White House mansion.
Lavish parties and events that would take place in the ballroom do not serve the needs of the American people. The millions of American dollars that would be allocated to the construction and decorating of this new ballroom could be used in a plethora of different ways more beneficial to Americans, instead of satisfying the egotistical wants of the few. I understand that some modernization to failing structures was needed, but the proposed plans greatly overtake that need. On another note, there was no warning before the demolition of the historical wing, and the Jaqueline Kennedy Gardens occurred, and it is a tragic loss of about a century of American national heritage. I call for a more modest plan and reconstruction, nixing the ballroom entirely, with new plans created more within the style and size of the former East Wing. I also call for the replanting of the historical Jaqueline Kennedy Gardens in the area they were originally located.

Dear NCPC Members:

With the White House campus being a national icon, for any one individually to mandate such a major intrusion as the new East Wing is unconscionable. Now the question is, if all the required reviews determine that it is inappropriate, and Trump proceed anyway, what remedy do you have? None that I know of.

In addition to the illegal act itself, the current design is vastly out of scale, and the proposed east entry portico competes directly with and overwhelms the scale of the White House portico. As only Trump would want it, for this/his building to be grander than the White House itself. And, of course, the name of the project is now incorrect, there is nothing left to "modernize"

I urge you to do all possible to stop the project or significantly redesign it as a more subservient addition.

With anguish,

"The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. It has been home to our presidents since 1800 and is perhaps the most significant historic site in the United States. Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to be heard and to help shape decisions that affect our shared national heritage."

As is stated on the NCPC website, WE, the American people, own the White House, not the sitting president.

The White House is not a hotel. It is not a convention center. It does not need a ballroom. There are many venues in DC that are suitable for any president to host a large event.

The White House is not a palace for the sitting president. The occupant of the White House is not a king. The occupant of the White House is supposed to work for us. The occupant of the White House lives there only as a temporary guest, a guest of the American people.

The sitting president destroyed the East Wing, as well as the Rose Garden, without our consent. He permanently altered the White House without permission, without permits.

Now, a new East Wing must be built. It should be built to resemble the original East Wing, destroyed by the sitting president, as much as possible -- in style, size, shape, & location. The new East Wing should look like the original East Wing & should fit in the same footprint.

Finally, part of OUR house was demolished by the sitting president. That sitting president should be forced to pay all of the costs associated with the demolition of the original East Wing & the construction of a new East Wing with his own personal funds. I know that, unfortunately, this is probably not within the purview of the National Capital Planning Commission,

Thank you for your consideration of my comments.

I believe that the East Wing should be rebuilt within the current footprint. That's very important to me. I suggest a national contest should be run open to professional architects and building designers and judged by a non-partisan commitee of architects and designers. All control should be out of the hands of politicians. It needs to be considered useful, tasteful, and even beautiful to both the people of the United States and to the rest of the world, as this is the wing most presented to visitors.

It should follow the historic architectural design of the current White House and include gardens and terraces, where appropriate in design. There shall be no gilded gold fixtures of any kind. The interior should be elegant, not ostentatious and follow the beautiful design of the present White House. The building could have a ballroom that would accommodate guests at State dinners and include a fountain, and stage. The White House, as the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical and should be kept that way.
The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it, but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

I write to oppose the plan to replace the East Wing of the White House with a grotesque palace-sized ballroom. The demolition of the existing wing was performed unlawfully. A ballroom monument to Donald Trump, who fancies himself an American king, emulates Saddam Hussein's Palace in Baghdad. When Trump is no longer president, the American people, much like the free people of Iraq, will have to spend millions in taxpayer money to remove what was built.

The entire process of demolishing the old east wing of the Whitehouse without the required due process is beyond belief. The proposed replacement now that demolition is fait accompli is likewise beyond belief..

Our Whitehouse belongs to the people and renovations to it need to follow the proper process. Personally,

I am not in favor of the proposed humongous replacement proposed. People are being imprisoned and/or deported. Others cannot pay their rent or properly feed their families. Many do not have healthcare.

A 90,000 sq ft monstrosity is going to dwarf the Whitehouse and after gaudy decoration will not send the right message.

A commission of the public should be created to come up with a tasteful structure that is architecturally consistent with the rest of the Whitehouse (and not overbearing).

All interiour designs should be consistant with the historical nature of the previous building which was illegally torn down. There should be NO GOLD ORNIMENTATION anywhere.

If a ballroom is needed, there should be another location within Washington DC which would be more appropriate, and available for the public to use. It should NOT be on the gounds of the White House. This is the People's House, not a location for Current Administration to entertaini only the top donors or followers of their agenda.

The White House has been one of the symbols of the United States and with that the Democracy that is the chosen form of government. The process that has been used to remove the East Wing and plan a Ball Room represents everything but democracy. The input of the public for this major change to the peoples house has been painfully absent. This cannot be accepted policy. It is too late to save the destroyed building. The images that are proposed show an addition the will dominate the original architecture of the building. I do not argue that an update to the building is not needed. The addition of a larger ballroom capable of allowing for larger groups is a fine idea but this design goes far beyond this at a very unnecessary price.

I find it hopeful that there is a call for public input even though it is too late to save the demolished history.

I am not in favor of the proposed modification to the East Wing of the White House in Washington, D.C.
This project is just another self appointed tribute to our current POTUS, who never tires of patting himself on the back, putting his name on everything he possibly can and having another monument to himself.
The POTUS that we have in 2026 blatantly disregards the rules and laws of this country. He has already finished the process of tearing down the East Wing, with zero authority. It is disgusting that anyone would act on his word to perform the disfigurement of our Nation's center for the office of the POTUS. The destruction of the East Wing, already finished, should never have been performed.

I refuse to be in favor of anything other than the painstaking reconstruction of the East Wing, as it was before the POTUS destroyed it. Further, the POTUS should be held 100% responsible financially and legally for the deconstruction and reconstruction. Personally responsible - no getting donors or being bailed out by anyone. Certainly, the tax payers/citizens of this country should never be held accountable financially or in any other way for this disaster, created by the POTUS and no one else.
The POTUS needs to face charges in a court of law for this flaunting of his disregard for the laws of the land - the land, the United States of America, that the POTUS is supposed to represent, and to care for.
This is my opinion.

I agree with Commissioner Mendelsohn's comments that the overall height/mass of the addition/renovation is too much. An interior space that is 38-40' high is not necessary and may even feel cold. Lowering the overall building height is my first comment. And then the footprint could also be reduced to lessen the visual mass of the building.

I also agree with the commissioner that it seems the project is being presented in a piecemeal fashion when it should be reviewed as a whole, showing all of the elements that are being incorporated or master planned including the visitor center, proposed addition to the west wing, site changes etc.

While it should go without saying, incorporation of features that make the building fully compliant (and beyond) with the ADA are essential.

I'm a bit offended that the proposed lower level office space is labelled "First Lady's Offices", which presumes there will always be a male president with a female wife. There are many possibilities that make this labelling old-fashioned, most likely the election of a female president with a male spouse, but also possibly a male president w/ a male spouse. Something more neutral / inclusive should be used.

Whatever is built should be in the design, scale, and historical period of the West Wing. It should not be larger than the West Wing, but complement it.

The space should be multi-purpose. To build a ballroom to seat 900 people is ridiculous. There are no state dinners where there are that many guests.

Space must be set aside for offices. The space that would be used as a ballroom should be flexible to accommodate multiple size gatherings.

Most importantly, the interior and exterior designs should be respectful of a dignified and sacred place. No opulent gold fixtures. No outsized portraits of the current occupant of the White House.

What was destroyed cannot be replaced. But the new space can be appropriate, dignified, and reflective of the historical space that was torn down.

No giant ballroom. No tribute to one person. Just a tasteful and historically accurate and sensitive addition that pays homage to that part of our history that was destroyed.

Thank you.

Having finally gotten to live a lifelong wish of visiting the White House during Christmas two years ago during the Biden administration, the history that that building encompass and held for even a small girl from a rule town meant so much to me as an American and as an American voter. I am completely against the building of a ballroom. I do not think it is something that was done through the appropriate channels, and I believe the Eastwing should be built back in the manner that it was when it was torn down

The East Wing of the White House should be restored within the previous exterior dimensions and architectural style, while updating wiring, etc. and making it ADA accessible where possible. It should be comparable in size to the West Wing and the main house. Only needed and historically sensitive changes should be allowed. Restore the Rose Garden fully.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.
The White House is the people’s house, and was never meant to be a palace. It is also not a hotel or a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby.

The White House is the People's House and does not need a ballroom. It is not a Palace, having been designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure.

I appreciate that there is a review process for all construction around the Capital. It’s too bad the damage has already been done. I don’t care that this is supposed to be privately funded. Not that it matters because this review process is taxpayer funded. And no doubt taxpayer money will be used at some point because sooner or later people will quit donating to this boondoggle. Maybe it will be cheaper in the long run to have totally dismantled the old building and build a modern one in its place. I understand the rationale. I just do not like the way this was handled by the Trump administration.

I am vehemently, totally opposed to this project. It was started illegally, in my opinion, and It is ridiculously enormous and unsightly. There is nothing aesthetically appealing about it. It would be an eyesore. It would ruin the White House property. But you have said it best:

"The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. It has been home to our presidents since 1800 and is perhaps the most significant historic site in the United States. Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to be heard and to help shape decisions that affect our shared national heritage.

Why This Moment Matters
This is a legally required federal review process, and public participation is essential. Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must be reviewed by the NCPC and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), and receive congressional approval. These safeguards exist to ensure transparency, accountability, and meaningful public input."

Thank you.

I am angry and disturbed that the President has overstepped his authority and demolished the East Wing without going through any of the proper steps to initiate such an act. I want all activity on the site to stop until proper procedures are initiated and completed. The White house is not the personal property of the President; it actually belongs to the country. Therefore the owners are the people of the United States. This means that US citizens, or their duly elected representatives in Congress, must be consulted before taking such drastic and unjustified actions. At the very least, established procedures and approvals must be followed. Therefore I call for all construction to stop immediately, and a proper plan to be submitted and approved before any further action is taken.

The demolition of the East Wing (and removal of historic trees) was both horrifying and infuriating, but we can only move forward now. It is my opinion that the replacement be in line with the current size and style of the White House with appropriate symmetry, style, and taste; essentially restoring what was once there. If the current occupant of the White House still wants an ostentatious ballroom, he can build one off site somewhere and raise the money from a non-taxpayer resource. Maybe from his own crypto account.

White House East Wing Modernization Project
NCPC File Number: 8733

Applicant: Executive Residence at the White House

The destruction of the East Wing of the White House was a shocking act of vandalism. A historic section of "the people's house" was razed with blatant disregard for any input from agencies charged with safeguarding this National Historic Landmark.

The proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom should not be built. It will be grossly out of proportion to the remaining structure. To echo Prince Charles' comments in 1984 on a proposed addition to the National Gallery, the ballroom would be a "monstrous carbuncle on the face of a much-loved and elegant friend."

The ostentatious style shown in building drawings would be more appropriate to a royal palace than to the official residence of the president of a democracy. The purported need for a space for official events larger than the White House can accommodate can be met by holding such gatherings at other locations in Washington. Official events of 500 or 1,000 people don't have to take place in the White House, especially at the expense of destroying the grace and beauty of the building.

The East Wing should be rebuilt as closely as possible to its original appearance, restoring the White House to its status as a cherished iconic symbol.

The final design of the proposed East Wing ballroom must match the materials of the existing White House and West wing and its mass, architectural design and features, and foot print cannot overshadow the existing White House. I had high hopes when I read in the 2025 Plan and the Administration's official notice in the Federal Register both called for all new and updates to federal buildings to adhere to Classical architecture features that have defined the built environment and beauty of our nation's capital.

I urge the National Capital Planning Commission to ensure that the proposed ballroom follow these Classical architecture guidelines. You have your job cut out for you, given the crass and bulgar changes that this Administration has made to the interior of the White House. Stay the course and make sure this new, and totally unnecessary addition, sustains and enhances the beauty of the People's House.

In my opinion, the recently demolished East Wing needs to be replaced using National Park Service guidelines addressing historic structures. I am against the new White House ballroom because it is historically, aesthetically, and financially impractical, essentially overpowering the existing Executive Mansion. Construction needs to be approved by a process, not on a whim by a president ... and its financing should be controlled by Congress and also be transparent. The donor system of funding seems more like bribes than anything else and as we've seen it also means there is no cap on costs since the price of the ballroom has doubled in the last few months. Additionally, the current administration is destroying the history of this country. Demolishing the East Wing before consulting with the appropriate authorities is another example of this administration's contempt for the rule of law. A 90,000 sq' ballroom has no business near the White House. A larger building for that purpose can be built on property away from the people's house, if and when a project of that size fits into an approved budget. We do not want "donors" paying for anything that will then obligate political favors and attempt to bypass established procedures and protocols.

As an American Citizen who reveres our nation's historical treasures, I feel compelled to submit my opinion about the destruction of the East Wing of OUR White House. Only twice, on January 6, 2021, and then seeing the East Wing destroyed, do I remember crying because of what was happening to our National landmarks.
Even months later, I cannot believe that the East Wing could have been so carelessly levelled with the intent of replacing it with a gargantuan "ballroom" that would dwarf the remaining White House. A gilt ballroom which perhaps a miniscule portion of the population might ever have occasion to attend. The idea is totally appalling.
If opinions are being surveyed, I would hope that my comments would clearly be in opposition to any hideous, oversized ballroom. The East Wing should be rebuilt in its former architecture and size with only interior modifications.
Thank you for the opportunity to offer a comment.

The White House, or “the people’s house” as it has been called, has been a symbol of our democracy, iconic in form, design, and proportion. It has also evoked dignity, with a classical beauty that Americans have loved and respected through the years. As the people’s house it should remain a structure we can be proud of. The ill-guided notion that the White House should double in size for the purpose of a Trumpian palatial ballroom is abhorrent for a multitude of reasons. Size matters - to build a ballroom equal in size to the White House itself suggests that holding immense balls and parties for the elite and privileged is of equal importance as the real work of government that has always taken place in the existing White House. Moreover, for a president to make the decision to demolish the East Wing of the people’s house without the permission of the people is NOT the democratic way of doing things. President Trump seems to have forgotten that he will not be a permanent resident and that he is not the owner of this historic landmark. If the embellishments Mr. Trump has already added to the White House are any indication of what is to come in his mega ballroom it will only further serve to cheapen and tarnish the people’s house. I urge you to preserve the historic and architectural integrity of our White House!

I appose the proposed banquet facility where the East Wing used to stand. The destruction of the East Wing is an abomination and sadly can not be reversed. Our beautiful, historic landmark has been irreparably damaged. However the building of the proposed banquet facility can and should be stopped.

We should honor and respect our history and heritage. Any changes to our landmarks should be be approved and in keeping with the structure and the design of our White House. The scale of this structure is far too large to be built adjacent to the White House. The plan is for a design much more flamboyant than our neo classically designed structure.

Allowing this to move forward would set a dangerous precedent. Others may be as embolden and believe they can destroy landmarks and build structures in the architectural style they prefer. There is good reason these actions require PRIOR approval. Actions outside of these established standards will result in our historic structures looking inconsistent and lacking symmetry.

The proposed structure is unbecoming of our White House, and is unnecessary. As importantly the proposed funding of this project is inappropriate and appears as a bribery. If taxpayers have to cover the cost of this it would be an undue burden and significantly increase our national debt. Please do not allow this inappropriate structure to move forward.

We are living in a period of time when average Americans are struggling and the Gini coefficient has reached French Revolution levels. Nearly all Americans are a single medical emergency away from destitution, which makes the conversion of the people's house into a bloated, gaudy ballroom for the rich is beyond an insult. The fact that public comment is occurring well after the haphazard destruction of the East Wing only emphasizes the complete disrespect the administration shows for public heritage and public opinion.
Even more concerning are the funding sources for this project. Given the blatant pay-to-play corruption that this administration has encouraged – from donations in exchange for pardons, and foreign cryptocurrency investment in exchange for proprietary technologies – how can anyone trust that donations to this project will not further compromise the integrity of our government? How much more will the administration and its inner circle profit off the people's resources and heritage? And what, if anything, is this going to do to help everyday Americans?

This process has been rushed, with little to no transparency, showing no respect for the White House as a shared legacy for the country. This is a pure vanity project designed to further enrich the wealthiest administration in history, at the expense of working Americans. I can think of no better symbol of the shameless, extractive excesses of this administration than taking a place of work, a place of history, a place of struggle, and turning it into a gilded bubble for the Epstein class.

I respectfully submit this comment in opposition to the proposed large ballroom addition to the White House complex.

While I recognize the need for functional event space, constructing a 90,000-square-foot ballroom would significantly alter the historic character and visual balance of the White House grounds. The White House is not only a working facility but also one of the most recognized historic landmarks in the United States, and any expansion should be carefully scaled to preserve its historic setting.

Instead of a large ballroom, I encourage consideration of rebuilding or modernizing the East Wing with a modestly sized addition designed to accommodate smaller gatherings of a few hundred people. A thoughtfully scaled expansion could meet operational needs while minimizing long-term impacts on the historic site and maintaining the architectural integrity of the White House complex.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide public input on this important matter.

Sadly, the wing was illegally destroyed prior to any approvals. I would like to see the restoration of the wing to match the size and style of the previous, iconic structure. Internal structure should be ADA accessible, as the White House belongs to ALL the American People. The style of the interior should match the historical nature of the building, and avoid excess.

I would also like to see the grounds restored to their previous state. The only "modernization" would be to make them accessible to all.

If the current administration wishes to create something to fit their personal tastes, I do not want my tax dollars spent on something that is not intended for all Americans. I am sure there are many off-site locations that would be appropriate for such a construction.

Dear Sir or Madam:

Please consider the scope and architectural esthetic of this original structure as you determine appropriate size for any new building.

Trump originally assured we the people that the original East wing would not be touched. Then it was demolished. This beautiful historic structure already had the Rose Garden paved over. The Oval Office looks like a bordello with gaudy gilded statues and hideous gold paint.

Trump's tastes are certainly not reflective of we the people, and he is thankfully but a temporary resident.

If the east wing were actually to be modernized, simply replacing the wiring, and perhaps redoing the inside would have been more appropriate than demolishing this historical structure.

Please put the East Wing back to its original form. The American people have never requested a ballroom that the vast majority would never even set foot in.

Respectfully,

Heidi Arbury

The travesty of the current administration demolishing the East Wing should never have happened. There is nothing but blatent disregard for the People's House, its property and history, or the future generations who will look upon it as the center of our nation's government.
Stop the ballroom construction. Stop the continuing demolition of My House, My Neighbors House, My Country's House. Drmand that restoration be approved and conducted according to set standards and rules. This so called expansion project is an embarrassment and a snub to all Americans.

Thank you.

Any addition to the White House should not overwhelm the current building. Determination should be made - in advance - whether the renovation is necessary or beneficial. Plans should be submitted by qualified and experienced architects, approved by qualified personnel, and funds raised before any demolition begins. Qualified contractors should bid on the project using normal processes. Nothing should be demolished until a plan is drawn up and qualified contractors are prepared to go. Demolition should be conducted carefully, by qualified professionals, with a view towards preserving historic and significant parts of the old building. Funding should be provided by the U.S. government or by anonymous donors so as to avoid bribery or even the appearance of it. The funding should be overseen by an independent commission and the President should have no access to any of these funds. These suggestions should all be obvious.

As an historic building that belongs to the American people, the White House should have sought feedback before the demolition began. I have no doubt that areas of the building need upgrades and modernization. And I agree that such necessary upgrades should be pursued. I am not in favor of a ballroom however. The plans as currently rendered look completely out of proportion to the rest of the White House. I'm dismayed that taxpayer money would go to such a project. We the people should have greater input.

NO TO A WHITE HOUSE BALLROOM!

Tearing down the East Wing was a crime. Replacing it with something larger than the main White House building would be a slap in the face of all respected architects and anyone who respects architecture. Filling that building with bling would make it a butt of jokes for its entire existence.

Please put the reconstruction of the East Wing under the aegis of historic preservationists and people with a sense of aesthetics, not real estate magnates.

It's a travesty that the East Wing was demolished. This is the people's house and Americans should have been consulted before anything happened.

While expanded event space may be needed, additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure. It must follow the historic design and not change any other elements of the building site. It should absolutely NOT be filled with gold embellishments or monuments or references to the current occupant of the White House. It needs to include offices for the first lady which were lost in the demolition and may have a respectable size ballroom/dining area for state dinners and other events. We should be able to see the final plans before any construction begins. There are laws regarding official federal building construction and renovations and these need to be followed.

What has happened to the East Wing is an abomination. The White House, as a historical building is subject to rules and regulations that must be abided by in order to preserve our country's history. Any remodelling that involves changing the facade should be carefully considered and have its final plans approved by the Historical Society before a single brick of the building is touched. The wanton destruction caused by Donald Trump must never be allowed to happen again. Moving forward, care should be taken to rebuild the East Wing as soon as possible, so that the facade matches the West Wing and symmetry is restored. If, in the judgement of the Historical Society, a ballroom is needed, a competition should be announced, and architects should be invited to submit plans which the Historical Society should judge and then award the contract for reconstruction to the winning architect. In the meantime, all artifacts removed or reclaimed from the East Wing should remain within the Societies care, so that history can be preserved and they can eventually be redisplayed. Thank you for giving me the opportunity to express my thoughts on the disgraceful destruction of the East Wing by Donald Trump.

First, I believe it is a shame the entire East Wing was demolished, seemingly without the proper permissions. Second, since that historic part of the White House has been destroyed, I have a few suggestions on how to best move forward with this part of what I consider The Peoples' House.
The East Wing should be a place not merely for the super rich but for occasions for all groups of Americans; it should show the country's fealty to the American people. Rather than appearing gaudy and ostentatious, it should be decorated with high style and quality in keeping with other American institutions like Monticello or the White House itself. The space should be built at a scale in keeping with the White House throughout history.

The White House is the People's House. Bypassing the orderly review process for making alterations is an affront to the people. Expertise should not be trashed in favor of the "taste" and wishes of any single citizen. This project needs to be halted and the tried and true design and review process reinstated and followed. Otherwise, the People will undoubtedly choose to bear the cost of tearing it down and replacing it as soon as possible.

As a tax paying US citizen, I ask that:
- the project exterior, from ground level up, design and appearance be restored to year 2024 aesthetics, and size;
- the structure interiors tastefully compliment the White House primary building;
- modernized facilities and infrastructure making judicial use of funds are provided befitting a publich governmental building; and,
- most importantly, the project is paused in its entirety (safety concerns only addressed for now) until a new administration is in place.

I am appalled by the destruction and exorbitant expense of the East Wing. I strongly feel it should be restored to it's original condition with only necessary upgrades for example utility improvements. There are many unoccupied buildings in our Nation's Capital that would serve as an ideal location for a ballroom. I feel if this ballroom is a necessity an alternative location should be the consideration.

It is grossly out of scale with the existing Whitehouse, and should not be built. This is an assault on one of the most recognizable buildings in the world, and an analogy for Donald Trump's attack on every institution both Americans and many others across the globe hold dear. This misguided project has demolished an integral part of the White House, filled with history of every sort related to the previous occupants of the Executive Mansion, in order to indulge the demands of an autocratic personage the likes of which this nation has never seen. Erasing history in this fashion is a crime that can never be forgiven or fixed. Though this message will undoubtedly be ignored by those in charge of this foolish endeavor (if someone ever does read it), I simply hope to go on record as one of countless other Americans who oppose every action taken by this administration, which shows no interest in acting for the good of the people and is only concerned with inflating the ego of a sad old man and targeting those who would dare oppose him. This is a transparent effort to distract from the failings of this administration and the murder of American citizens and immigrants alike at the hands of what has become an effective secret police force. I pray that the future will find a better use for this new space than a tacky gold plated ballroom.

At a time when Americans are struggling, when over one third cannot cover a $400 emergency expense and over 40% no longer believe in the American dream, the conversion of the people's house into a bloated, gaudy ballroom for the rich is beyond an insult. The fact that public comment is occurring well after the haphazard destruction of the East Wing only emphasizes the complete disrespect the administration shows for public heritage and public opinion.
Even more concerning are the funding sources for this project. Given the blatant pay-to-play corruption that this administration has encouraged – from donations in exchange for pardons, and foreign cryptocurrency investment in exchange for proprietary technologies – how can anyone trust that donations to this project will not further compromise the integrity of our government? How much more will the administration and its inner circle profit off the people's resources and heritage? And what, if anything, is this going to do to help everyday Americans?

This process has been rushed, with little to no transparency, showing no respect for the White House as a shared legacy for the country. This is a pure vanity project designed to further enrich the wealthiest administration in history, at the expense of working Americans. I can think of no better symbol of the shameless, extractive excesses of this administration than taking a place of work, a place of history, a place of struggle, and turning it into a gilded bubble for the Epstein class.

I strongly object to this now massive project as it's planned now. President Trump should have consulted with the proper parties involved prior to demolishing the East Wing. The White House is meant for a president to live in, no t to make any major changes to the historic building. Now that the entire east wing is gone, it is still possible to block and revise the grandiose plans for the now 90,000 square foot ballroom. The seating of 500 guests complete with tables could easily have been done from the building and completely avoid the demolition that has been done. I've frankly been against and certainly discouraged by this entire project

Tearing down the East Wing of the White House without the opportunity for public comments is indefensible. The administration must be held accountable for the destruction of this national treasure and must take full responsibility for repaying taxpayers for the damage that has been done and for replacing the structure and all the contents, furniture, artwork, carpeting, etc. to look as nearly like the originals as possible. No expense should be spared and the damages should be fully paid from the responsible individuals' private accounts. Each responsible government official found to be responsible should be charged with the same criminal offenses that any other civilian individual would be charged with if they destroyed all or part of any comparable national monument or national park structure.

Although utilities and materials can be updated, decor and aesthetic considerations of all kinds should be replaced with items as true to the original designs as possible. The White House is the people's house and a historical structure that should have been preserved as a public museum, housing artifacts and furnishings of past presidents since the founding of our country.

Many laws have been ignored and broken in the past year by the current administration, but after the heartbreaking detention of innocent immigrants and citizens, the destruction of a section of the White House is one of the most deplorable.

Any proposal for a structure of this magnitude should begin with a full accounting not only of construction costs but of long-term operational obligations. This should include staffing, maintenance, security, utilities, equipment, and event support, along with clear identification of how these ongoing expenses would be funded. If federal resources will ultimately bear these costs, the public deserves transparency about the long-term fiscal impact of adding a major new facility to the White House complex.

The case for such a large addition should also be supported by clear, publicly available evidence demonstrating that existing facilities are consistently inadequate for their intended functions. Without documented need, a project of this scale appears driven solely by preference rather than necessity.

Even if additional event space were justified, any expansion should remain subordinate to the original structure and respect the White House's historic scale and architectural character. The reported demolition of portions of the historic East Wing without prior review by the National Capital Planning Commission raises serious concerns about compliance with required federal planning processes and, by extension, the legality of the broader proposal. In addition, large privately financed additions to major public institutions create unavoidable perceptions of donor influence and pay-to-play access, which can erode public confidence. No comparable facility of this size has ever been required for official functions, making it reasonable to question whether any legitimate operational need exists for a project of this cost and magnitude.

At a time when many Americans face rising food prices, persistent inflation, and high healthcare costs, advancing what appears to be a vanity construction project risks sending a message that national priorities are misaligned with public needs. Major symbolic investments of this kind - without a clearly documented need for them - appear disconnected from the realities facing working families and taxpayers. Public projects at the seat of government should demonstrate clear civic purpose and broad public value, yet this proposal highlights a structure from which the average American would never see any direct benefit.

The new East Wing of the White House should be larger than the current White House. It should be scaled in size appropriately to match the current remains of the White House. Modernization of its infrastructure is ideal with the architecture remaining consistent with the existing structure.

It should not be used for a massive ballroom. Another property can be built for a ballroom of such a magnitude proposed currently that does not interfere with the people's house or property.

My impression of the current iteration of drawings to alter the former east wing area of our White House is the east wing addition overtakes the current building significantly in height and heft and appears as a sports complex or airfield hanger.
The current scale and style of this world famous institution should be followed in designing any replacement or additions using good taste and grace.
A stately event room (aka ballroom) for governmental entertaining does not need to be a behemoth space to allow for a reasonable number of attendees most likely at the majority of events.
It should not be designed to accommodate a thousand people for a once in a blue moon event. There are other large facilities in DC to use if needed. Bigger is not better. It’s just bigger.
Dignified events call for tasteful design without meaningless accoutrements or an overwhelming scale of the room.
Regardless of who pays for it, this building is owned by we the people and any changes or additions should be a compliment to what still exists today after the past 250 years of protecting it.
Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

My thoughts regarding the East Wing.
It should not be decided on solely by the president. Solely by ANY president.
It should not be financed by companies to hope to gain favor from the administration.
Our federal buildings and monuments are for and represent all the people . Yet, this building would be used mainly (if not solely), by the powerful and the wealthy . With our taxes paying for these events. So yes, we have the rights to have a say in the process.
It's extravagant in size and design. I believe nothing should overshadow the White House. Our house.

Thank you,
Ms. Joan Kelly

To: National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC)
Re: Public Comment on the Proposed East Wing Modernization (White House Ballroom)
To the Commission,
I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed White House ballroom project. This expansion represents an inappropriate intervention in our nation's most iconic historic site for the following reasons:
• Architectural and Historical Incompatibility: The White House is a symbol of neoclassical restraint and historical continuity. The aesthetic direction of the proposed ballroom does not harmonize with the existing structure. Introducing an architectural style that clashes with the Executive Residence undermines the integrity of a building that belongs to the American public, effectively eroding its historical character.
• Disproportionate Scale: The sheer size of the 90,000-square-foot addition is fundamentally flawed. At nearly double the square footage of the original Executive Residence, the proposed ballroom would physically overwhelm the historic building. A federal monument should not be overshadowed by a modern addition that prioritizes event capacity over the preservation of the site's original proportions.
• Ethical Concerns Regarding Private Funding: The decision to fund a major expansion of the Executive Mansion through private donations is deeply troubling. Accepting hundreds of millions of dollars from corporate interests and wealthy individuals for a permanent federal structure creates a significant appearance of impropriety. This model feels less like a gift to the nation and more like a thinly disguised form of bribery or "pay-to-play" influence, circumventing the traditional Congressional oversight intended to protect the neutrality of the People's House.

I urge the Commission to reject the current proposal and prioritize the preservation of the White House's historical scale and ethical standing.
Respectfully,
Marilyn Hale

We The People never gave permission to ANY POTUS to literally knock down a big (historical) part of OUR White House!!! We do not want a "big ballroom" for any reason, and especially not a gaudy fake gold trophy for a Pedophile POTUS!!! While the damage is done and a replacement building may be considered, perhaps a conference room large enough to accommodate the visitors to the White House may be a current option...the ridiculous 90,000+ sq foot atrocity he demands is highly inappropriate! He broke all of the rules, like a bully does, by doing the destruction so suddenly and bypassing proper channels.

We The People demand an appropriate review panel be assembled, by people chosen by the US Parks Service and NOT by the Pedophile, not any of the current fascist regime, but the appropriate panel.

We The People also demand an accountability of the "donated monies" of over $400,000 that he allegedly received. The funny money situation is disgusting and is not acceptable!!! Where is he pocketing these monies, why is there no accountability?

We DEMAND that this administration DO THE RIGHT THING!

The proposed scale is way, way too disproportionate to the White House. Current renderings show an overuse of excessively gaudy, gold decorations that are more befitting to the Kremlin than the usually more conservative and traditional designs used in the White House (before ugly, ill-fitting gold decorations were littered throughout). The process to determine the design should be done through the usual means of allowing architects and designers to submit ideas for review without prejudice to their political affiliations and without any consideration for any financial or material contributions to any party, group or individual-including the President.

A ballroom larger than the remaining White House is unnecessary and a waste of resources, a perfect example of not only waste, fraud and abuse but blatant corruption in which this administration continues to engage.

Dear NCPC,

The East Wing "modernization" project exemplifies so much that is wrong about this Administration. It desecrates The People's House, turning it into a vanity project that has no meaning for the American people. It was done with no regard for the laws, history, or architectural design. The size overwhelms the Whitehouse and creates a barrier to viewing the People's House, the symbol of service to America and its shared history. This is a project that should never happen, and if it does, it should be torn down as soon as the Administration is gone.

Replicas of this facility should be built in every State in the Union.

The facility which is White House adjacent needs to be named in honor of Alex Pretti and Rene Good.

The isn't just another building—it's a National Historic Landmark, a National Park site, and the people's house since 1800. Major changes to a property like that are supposed to go through formal reviews, environmental analysis, and congressional oversight.

Instead, the East Wing was demolished to make way for a proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom—larger than the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence itself. Preservation experts are already raising alarms about the scale and lack of proper review.

No president, including Donald Trump, should be able to tear down part of a historic national landmark without transparent process, oversight, and respect for the site's history. The people's house deserves better than rushed, oversized projects that ignore preservation standards.

As a United States citizen, registered voter and taxpayer I do not approve of this project. The White House belongs to the American people. A renovation (destruction) of this magnitude and importance to the Country should have gone through a rigorous review and approval process rather than the whims of one erratic old man on a vengeance tour. I hope that your Committee will stop this development and put forth a transparent plan to restore the People's House to something we can be proud of rather than that monstrous proposed ballroom addition.
Thank you.

The East Wing should be restored to its previous state with updated systems and modernization. The 90,000 square foot ballroom should not be built. It would dwarf the presidential residence and would not add to the beauty of the existing structure.

This country does not need a government owned ballroom.
The East Wing of the White House, constructed in ca. 1904, served several functions that benefited America and Americans. It is now gone.
In its place should be constructed a more modern structure to provide space for most State events, and for events that include ordinary Americans. These might include dinners, conferences, and opportunities for Americans to meet with governmental officials in one-on-one or group meetings.
But, absolutely NO GARGANTUAN BALLROOM as currently proposed. If the needs of the affairs of State require a large venue, there are other options in the District of Columbia that can accommodate them. Alternatively, those events can be sized to fit within more modest and affordable rooms within a carefully designed and affordable new East Wing. That new East Wing should be designed to be architecturally compatible to the White House and not overwhelm the White House in any way. Elegance and proportionality should govern the exterior, while purpose-driven functionality should be the goal for the interior, so that the new East Wing will serve a multitude of functions in service to and in honor of the PEOPLE of the United States.

I do not agree with the current plan to build a ballroom addition onto the White house for the following reasons;
1. The projected size—nearly twice that of the main residence—threatens to dwarf the White House, destroying the established classical symmetry of the East and West Wings.
2. The project required the demolition of the existing East Wing, this is the destruction of historic fabric.
3. The project broke ground without necessary oversight or approval from the National Capital Planning Commission.
4. The use of private donations for funding raises questions about corruption, and the project is an attempt to alter the "People's House" for partisan purposes.
5.The project has cited rapidly escalating costs (from $200M to $400M) and constantly changing designs.

Greetings,

I strongly oppose the ballroom project donald trump started without any regard for procedure or input from the people of the United States. The White House belongs to the people, not that tyrant sitting in it. He can build his tasteless ballroom elsewhere.

Restore the East Wing from the original plans and the restoration of 1940. Obviously build it to today's code. If trump wants to make changes to interior design, well I can't stop him using my tax money, but I'll be glad to pay for the next administration tearing it all down. And take down all the rest of that disgusting gold crap too. I want the rose garden restored to it's original design.

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to give my input on this matter. I sincerely hope you can stop this idiot from destroying the history of the White House.

As a US citizen I am appalled by what has happened with the East Wing. How were there not steps and clearances in place for there to be a completely reviewed and approved plan prior to this historic structure being torn down? How can this be piecemealed together with plans approved a little bit at a time without approval of the overall project and how it fits with other projects in the area prior to the destruction of property?

Do we need a larger ballroom? Maybe? Does it need to be as huge as Mr. Trump proposes? In my opinion, no. Could it have been a less involved project that expanded what was the existing East Wing to meet that need? My assumption is yes but now we don't have that option. And this rush to tear down the historic East Wing, before full process, before full approval, before a finalized plan for what would be there in it's place is reckless at best and should be criminal.
The planning for the rebuilding project should be returned to the National Parks Service, General Service Administration, and Committee for the Preservation of the White House, for the planning and architectural approval, including interior decorations, and to Congress to appropriate funds. This is still the people's house and any changes and redecorating must have full approval of the appropriately authorized committees and agencies prior to any changes. There is no need for the height of the ballroom to be 38 ft ceiling height, in addition to it overwhelming the White House in overall footprint. It could serve the same purpose and be just as impressive to be an 18 ft or so ceiling to be shorter and not over powering to the primary White House, and would look totally fine for the heights of the cornice to be different and in fact may be preferred to provide appropriate impact of the White House as the primary & more impressive structure. It is concerning there is not a set handicap accessible egress directly from the ballroom and the lower level. And to the point in the discussion of the presentation, it sounds like there will need to be an additional structure to provide for security clearance prior to entrance. This is overall disappointing and poor planning. Stop construction until all plans are finalized and approved.
It is also disrespectful and in poor taste for the office of the First Lady to be in the back corner of the building by the kitchen. How 1940s to think her place is by the kitchen. Let's reconfigure the first floor to place the First Lady's office in a more easily accessible and respectful location maybe toward the front of the building please. Thank you for your time.

Thank you for providing this information. My concern is first the size of the building. I do believe it could be scaled back in height and overall size. Second, I believe the other projects referred to should be included in a comprehensive plan. It seems that the White House will become a centerpiece to the final plan. Which is fine, however, those plans appear to be already in the works, as I'm sure other administrations had discussions also. It seems a full, complete plan should be made. I have been a visitor to the White House and I do see a need for a better public visitor entrance and experience. No doubt the age of the building and any modernization is difficult due to the original structure and additions.. Which is exactly why a full plan should be made now. And, please, no more demolition without prior disclosure. The comments about security are a very thin excuse. I'm of the opinion that perhaps the reason a ballroom hasn't been built previously might be because the expenditure for the number of occasions it is actually needed might not have been worth taxpayer dollars. (The inconvenience of catering and portable facilities included). And really, let's not compare our nation's rather brief history to a King being able to entertain in the family palace. Please carefully consider the size and overall additions carefully and openly. Thank you.

Yes, the White House needs a space adequate to host indoor state dinners, but not as outsized as proposed. And certainly not guilded. Seriously. Adding modern secure conference rooms/bunkers beneath is warranted, as is restoring office space and whatever other functional spaces the unpermitted demolition eliminated.

This cannot be a political influence project. Either fund it through Congress or make sure private sector/foundation gifts are handled with complete transparency. And do not name it after DJT.

It is important that we do not allow any president to destroy the people's house for any reason. In addition, this proposal does not make sense from a functional perspective either. We do not need a huge ballroom. This is the White House, not the Palais de Versailles, and the president is not a king. Moreover, as this project was begun under false pretenses and without going through any of the required permitting or notification processes, Trump should be forced to put everything back the way it was - and pay for it out of his own pocket. He destroyed the property of the United States, without authorization or precautions, purely to satisfy his own overweening vanity. At most, he should be allowed to make minimally impactful changes that will improve the usability of the space inside the East Wing - but no huge, tasteless additions that would overwhelm the historic fabric of the People's House. And he should absolutely have to go through every regulatory, permitting, and review process applicable to rebuilding and renovating such an important piece of our history, to ensure that all of the decisions made will be consistent with the historical fabric, design, and purpose of the space. If he wants to make a shabby, tawdry space to entertain his billionaire buddies, let him do it at Hock-a-Loogie and not the White House.

The President's Mansion (the "White House") should remain the focus - architecturally and symbolically - of the entire property. The replacement of the East Wing should honor that design and should not overshadow the historic residence.
It's public-level purpose should serve only state functions and should match, in exterior and interior design, the historic appearance of the main building (prior to 2025). Any privately-donated funds should serve to complete the approved design and should not be understood to have any influence on the design or function.

It is well-known that the secure areas on the sub-level serve as a "bunker" and command center for the Executive. While modernization may be necessary, because of national security and sensitive intelligence reasons, no private funds should finance the installment of this area - only public funds. The intermingling of private influence with classified, government operations should be looked at with utmost suspicion.

Also, the unapproved destruction of the previous federal building (the "East Wing") should result in a fine of maximum penalty, assessed against the pool of donated private funds.

The White House and its entire property is a national treasure, housing (temporarily) the duly elected Executive and should always maintain its historic appearance representing the people and history of the United States and not be looked upon by the (temporary) Executive - a servant of all the people of the US - as his/her personal remodeling project.

To whom it may concern,

First, I want to say I am horrified at the bulldozing of the East Wing. Regardless of what people thought about the size or security issues of the East Wing, it was a space important for women's history. I see this as a direct attempt to diminish the legacy of the United States' first ladies.

Second, The current proposed project needs serious oversight. Taste is in the eye of the beholder and I think who determines what is "tasteful" and in keeping with the historical landscape of the White House should be the National Trust for Historic Preservation. It shoud NOT nor every be Trump or his bootlicking minions. He is "tasteless" to say the least. IF the United States really needs or even wants a state-of-the-art ballroom of those dimensisons with all the security features imaginable, then it should be put underground. Something of that size needs to go underground so it does not dwarf the other component parts of the White House. There should be a balance to the architectural elements of the White House. The proposed East Wing addition looks monstrously disproportionate.

Third, Enact legislation, so that we do not find ourselves in this situation again. What do we expect from Trump's 3rd year in office? Oh....I know... let's actually just go ahead and bull doze the White House because he needs a bigger office (said with great irony and exaggerated eyeroll included).

I am 100% opposed to the current plans for replacing the now destroyed East Wing of the White House with a Ballroom for 650 people. Here are my reasons:
1. The difficulty of finding an Architect to undertake this project, and the withdrawal of at least one architectural firm to complete the plans is indicative of the obscenity of size and disproportion of the proposed replacement for the East Wing. The square footage proposed will not only exceed the size of the West Wing, it will exceed the totality of the current White House including the West Wing. Therefore aesthetically the proposal is ridiculous.

2. Functionally, the destruction of the East Wing for the purpose of a 650 occupancy Ballroom while eliminating the offices of the First Lady is not within the founding principles of our democracy and this POTUS should have no say on this matter. We should not trade off the space of offices of the First Lady and the recreation areas of the First Family for a Ballroom that would be used only on rare occasions. The East Room has an occupancy of 200; even this exceeds the average size of its occupancy. Only on a handful of occasions was the South Lawn set up with tents to accommodate larger groups.
3. The Declaration of Independence: The current POTUS embodies every reason for which we declared our independence from England: (a) obstruction of Administration of Justice, (b) Judges dependent on his will alone, (c) "sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people", (d) in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures, (d) the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power, and (d) "A prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to the the ruler of a free people, etc. We declared our democratic values that preclude an autocracy.
4. The Constitution of the United States: (a) Article II. Section 1. : the Presidency is limited to four year occupancy, two times; no temporary resident as such should have the right to determine the reconfiguration of a National Landmark; (b) Article II. Section 1 AND Amendment XII: the current occupant tried to overturn the peaceful counting of Electoral votes on January 6, 2021 in direct conflict with Article II; (c) the current occupant took an Oath to "... preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States." yet he has continually undermined the U.S. Rule of Law; (d) Section 4. there is ample evidence which leads to suspicion of treason, international dealings possibly tantamount to bribery, and other misdemeanors; (e) Amendment I: the current occupant has undermined the provision that "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble..."; (f) Amendment IV: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated ... without probably cause..." has been abrogated by the current administration in regards to ICE activities; (g) Amendment XIV and XXVI: the current occupant's denial of the birthright citizenship provision should deny his destruction of any part of the "people's" house and further it is the right of all citizens 18 years or older to vote; (h) Amendment XV the current occupant's goal through SAVE cleverly couches the aim to deny the right of certain citizens to vote; (i) Amendment XXII: the current occupant continually flaunts the provisions that "No person shall be elected to the office of the President more than twice..." by suggesting he may just not leave or will not hold elections.
Therefore, Aesthetically and Functionally the destruction of the East Wing and the proposal of a 650 (down from 900) occupancy Ballroom is wrong. Additionally the pretentiousness of such a gilded ballroom is not within either the Founding Fathers vision for a democratic nation nor the current aesthetics OR projection to the world of the values and aspirations of our nation. Already Impeached during his first term, POTUS's flagrant disregard for the norms of the Presidency should have and should continue to preclude his influence on a National treasure.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark owned by the American people. Any major change to a building of this importance should be carefully reviewed and fully transparent.

At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would be larger than the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence itself. That raises real concerns about scale and whether the addition would overwhelm the historic structure.

Please ensure a thorough review, clear public information about the design and visual impact, and serious consideration of alternatives that would protect the historic character of the White House.

I oppose the over-sized ballroom that President Trump destroyed the East Wing of the White House to build. Such an event space isn't even needed for presidential entertainments. The East Wing should indeed be rebuilt, but in balance to the West Wing in style and scale, perhaps with an event room. But this is the publicly owned, and funded temporary residence and offices of the president of our nation. It is tax-payer supported and it is not Versailles! As an owner of this historic building, I am appalled that a temporary resident would be so destructive and incur so much expense for work that is not for maintenance, and updating of systems.

I would like the East side of the White house exterior restored without any expansion. It should be in the style that is appropriate for a historic building. Any expansion should be postponed until such time we have an idea as to what the needs are. I prefer an intimate White House that reflects modesty, simple beauty, and classic American architecture. In addition, I would not like to spend money where it is needed, not where it is wanted.

Thank you for your consideration.

BEFORE nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to help shape the decision. YOU had no legal right to rip down the white house. it belongs to the citizens of the United States of America. YOU will need to replace it as it was at your expense or go directly to jail. The WHITE House does not need a ballroom. YOU are a temporary resident. (the term might be shorter than you think). You are an embarrassment to the American people.
YOU will also restore the lovely rose garden that was started by Jackie Kennedy.

LEAVE THE WHITE HOUSE ALONE!

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service.
The United States must have a say in what is being proposed in the renovation.
I do not agree with what is being proposed. It does not capture the American spirit, instead it looks like the type of 'public ' building you see in a communist dictatorship. That is not the United state of America.

The White House is a historic building used for centuries to house the president, their family, and to hold briefings, meetings, and presidential events. The proposed changes to the White House cheapen the historical nature of the property and cheapen the grandeur that is this marvel of architecture. There have been many issues already with this project and the fact this committee allowed them to demolish parts of the building and destroy historically significant locations is an abomination. If this project is to continue, it needs to be to the same standard as the architecture and design of the rest of the residence and make sure it is simply up to code and building standards as well as making it ADA accessible so that everyone may be welcome. Thank you.

The illegal demolition of the east wing aside, what is done in its place should not overpower the White House. I watch ed the presentation of the proposal, and while I think the architects did a good job of designing a building that mirrors the buildings around it, it is too big and dwarfs the Peoples' House. The President resides there at our pleasure and his destruction should be addressed. Any need for expanded space for events should be smaller and in keeping with the scale and proportion of the existing white House.

The White House is considered "the people’s house." It should not have an overwhelmingly large building with a completely different architectural style attached. Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style of the original East Wing. Use this opportunity to update plumbing, wiring, etc. and make the building ADA accessible where possible. Environmentally sound processes and materials should be used. Changes should take into account the sensitive history of the original building. Special interest funds should not be allowed to influence or pay for the rebuilding.

I oppose the expansion of the White House according to the currently proposed plan.

The proposed wing is grossly out of scale with the White House.

Additions to historic properties should be in keeping with the original architecture, or at least should harmonize with it, and should be subordinate to the original structure. This proposal does not fit these criteria.

The event space does not need to be large enough to accommodate the largest possible gathering; temporary solutions to expand the space have been found in the past and can continue to be found.

I am distressed at the way the project was undertaken, without proper review. The White House belongs to the American people, not Donald Trump.

I hope that revised plans can be proposed for a far less ostentatious and grandiose wing that can house events, but is also in keeping with the original architecture. It should not diminish the original structure and disrupt the sight lines.

I would like to say that while the East Wing may have needed modernizing, and while a large room for state dinners and inaugural balls and such may be desirable, the plan that seems to be unfolding right now under President Trump is appalling. I own a small, lovingly restored 1860 Greek Revival house in New England. I have strong feelings about scale and proportion and history and aesthetics. Expanding and/or renovating historic buildings must be done with utmost care, and it's clear that care is not being taken. Ninety-thousand square feet is absurdly oversized; it will dwarf the existing White House. Please don't let this travesty continue, Better to let the site sit empty, for however long it takes, than to erect a monstrosity. What Trump has in mind would stand for all time as an embarrassment to our nation's capital. Please don't let it happen. Thank you.

Y’all should have opened this to the public before you tore that part of the building down.

I think a ballroom is a waste of space, time, and money, regardless of who is paying for it. (And I, for one, am extremely suspicious about the fact that it’s being paid for by wealthy billionaires, at least one of which has dined with Jeffery Epstein.) The cost to build it is also ridiculous. This was a waste of the federal government’s time, some fat cat’s money, and the American people’s attention.

There are legitimate problems in this country and we the people don’t want a ballroom for the elite, we want to see all the files released and the perpetrators brought to justice, healthcare, affordable housing, and uninfluenced elections.

Maybe those billionaires paying for the ballroom could pay for any one of those items instead; besides our elections, they already have enough undue influence over those.

I strongly oppose the building of a ballroom on the site of the sadly demolished East Wing of the White House. I am dismayed that the demolition of the East Wing took place without prior review of the historic significance of the structure; without submission for review of plans for renovation or reconstruction; and without any recording of the the historic and archaeological information contained in and around the structure, as would be done before and during demolition of any similar historic building anywhere in the US.

The American people are the owners of the structure and the land on which it sat, such ownership to be administered through the National Park Service. To demolish it without regard to any laws and policies pertaining to an historic building is a slap in the face of the American people. No other historic structure in the US could be demolished without the knowledge and consent of the owners, and without following accepted practice. To assert that because of an exemption in a law that the current administration can do anything it wishes, indicates no respect for the rights or wishes of the American people.

I agree that it may be possible that the U.S. administration has need for a larger public space for key diplomatic and public events than is currently available in the historic buildings on site. Tents are not always convenient. However, it is possible, prudent, and indeed mandatory to fulfill such a need through traditional channels. Whatever is to be reconstructed or built anew on this site must be:
• Subject to an environmental impact and historic preservation review, including review by the White House Curator and the Committee for the Preservation of the White House;
• Subject to an assessment of priorities of need for activities housed in the White House complex, including the need for office space for First Ladies, and maintenance of the architectural integrity of the White House overall;
• Subject to a transparent cost analysis and approval by appropriate constitutional bodies. The East Wing was not, and should never be, a private building constructed by private funds. Private funds can be used, but only with no conditions attached, and all construction must be subject to public review and approval through all legal and customary channels.
• Subject to a study that would consider other possible locations for a large public event space in Washington D.C.

I am passionately opposed to the proposed 90,000 square foot replacement for the East Wing of the White House. It is an abomination and an insult to the American people. It is entirely out of scale with the White House. If it is built at all, it should be no larger than the White House. Proposed plans should be available for public view, comment, and modification before any construction is allowed to take place. A plan of action should be made in the event that construction is initiated before approval, and to stop such construction from taking place. My first choice would be to restore the East Wing to something resembling the one that was torn down, and that criminal charges be made for its unauthorized destruction.

The project name is erroneous: one cannot modernize what no longer exists. That said, these are troubled times, thus any renovations of the people's house, America's house, our White House should be the last of federal priorities. No ballroom has ever been needed thus far, and no ballroom will ever be needed because America's nearly 250-year-old heart rejects such a transplant. To celebrate, but above all, honor the achievement of a quarter millennium of democracy, it is truly the hard-working, deeply-engaged folk who should be brought to the fore. It has been the blood, sweat, and tears of everyday Americans that has made this upcoming anniversary of the United States possible; they are the ones who have weathered every storm, fended off all enemies, and toiled to upraise this great nation. We neither need, nor want gilded halls that recall Henry VIII, Marie Antoinette, or Kim Jong Il.

Terrible that the East Wing was torn down without public input. A 90,000sqft addition is out of proportion. Dear Commission members, Known as the "People's House," The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American public with critical stewardship by the National Park Service. As home to our presidents since 1800, it is certainly one of the most significant historic site in the United States. The National Historic Preservation Act offers guidance and process for our country's history, heritage, and architecture. While signage, documentaries, photos, books, etc. can serve as great ways to document our history – there is no substitute for having a tangible extant structure to bring history to life. While I was dismayed by the process regarding the demolition of the ball room, there exists a chance to make sure there is input and procedure surrounding the east wing new construction. It should not be guided by simply one person as this will have impact for decades to come.

This is a legally required federal review process, and public participation is essential to the process. Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must be reviewed by the National Capital Planning Commission and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), and receive congressional approval. These safeguards exist to ensure transparency, accountability, and meaningful public input. We can't just pick and choose what gets a public process.

Typically and hopefully a good process will yield a good outcome.

As stated in the 'Design Guidelines for the White House and President's Park' (1997), issued by the National Park Service: "The White House and President's Park are first and foremost a public trust, an important part of our national heritage."

Any significant change to a historic building of this import should follow a rigorous and deliberate design and review process. Recommendations include establishing a qualifications-based architect selection process; enacting a rigorous historic preservation review; prioritizing transparency and public accountability; considering “proportionality” and “design harmony”; and leveraging collaboration and expertise across the architecture profession. Other recommendations include:

-Enact a Comprehensive Preservation Review

-Evaluate Impacts to the White House Grounds: The proposed addition appears to significantly extend into the landscape south of the existing East Wing. This impacts not only the layout and configuration of the buildings, but also the surrounding landscape that is equally important to the historic character of the White House and the President’s Park (including Lafayette Park and the Ellipse). As such, any changes to the White House grounds should be carefully deliberated and involve appropriate landscape experts.

-Consider Broader National Impact on Historic Preservation: As one of the most significant and visible historic properties in the country, any project at the White House whether it involves interior renovation, changes to the landscape, or a new exterior addition, acts as a national precedent in the treatment of historic properties.

Thank you for this opportunity to provide public comment.

The White House is a historical building that belongs to the American people. Any change that involves bulldozing an entire wing should have had a review process including architects and historians (not political appointees) before those changes were begun. Certainly, the construction should not be funded by companies or individuals who may be seeking to curry favor with the current administration. History has happened in the East Wing. What became of the furniture and paintings that were in this wing? The construction seems rushed and ill-advised, and the dimensions are an affront and significantly affect the visual image of the White House. Please restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style. Follow the procedures that have been followed in the past for making needed changes while respecting the history of the building. One person should not be able to unilaterally decide what the people's house should look like. A ballroom could be constructed elsewhere, not here on the White House grounds. There might as well be a sign "Monument to Special Interests." I am disappointed in this rush to bulldoze and would like to see the East Wing, in its original dimensions and size, restored.

Thank you.

Hello,

I would like to request that the design, square footage, and purpose of the proposed ballroom be appropriate in scale for hosting events (without being excessive) while being in harmony with the design of the rest of the White House. While I understand that an improved space may be needed for hosting our honored guests, I do feel the current project is excessive in cost, design, and scale - I cannot understand why a ballroom at the proposed square footage should be required when it's nearly double the size of the Executive Residence. I am concerned about the excessiveness specifically in regards to using taxpayers' funds to pay for this project - it's not clear how it's being paid for and I can only assume we'd use taxpayer funds to complete the project. Furthermore, I have concerns about the public not being notified ahead of time of the demolition of the original East Wing. As a member of the public I ask to be supplied with more information on how this project is being funded and how what remains of the White House will be preserved as this project continues.

Thank you.

Go ahead and add a Whataburger inside so that you can host quinceañeras and graduations at this cheap conference style ballroom.
We used to be a country that inspired the world. Now, we are embarrassing. The rest of the world is laughing at us and the executive branch cannot be bothered to consult and architect or consider historical context of this space.
For shame!

The demolition of the East Wing to build a vanity project for billionaires is a massive scar on a historic symbol of our democracy. Trump states (without any accountability) that he has raised private funding for the project. This "private funding" is bribery, creating a playpen for people who have profited on sex trafficking, torturing immigrant children, and ruining the reputation of our country as a bastion of liberty and generosity. The government needs to restore the East Wing with architectural plans designed to honor the fact the the President is not a King and that the Executive branch of the government is one of three.

I believe that the East Wing should be brought back to its original form. This is the United States of America and the White House belongs to the people, not to the president. We don't need a huge ballroom to conduct the business of the United States. There are better ways to spend the money of the American people.

I am against the new White House ballroom because it is historically, aesthetically, and financially impractical, essentially overpowering the existing Executive Mansion. Construction needs to be approved by a process, not on a whim by a president ... and its financing should be controlled by Congress and also be transparent. The donor system of funding seems more like bribes than anything else and as we've seen it also means there is no cap on costs since the price of the ballroom has doubled in the last few months."

I respectfully urge that the rebuilding of the East Wing of the White House remain consistent with the historic scale, character, and architectural integrity of the existing structure and the broader White House complex. Any reconstruction should honor the original intent and visual continuity of this nationally significant site, ensuring that additions or modifications are harmonious rather than expansive or stylistically incongruous.

At the same time, it is both appropriate and necessary that the East Wing be brought fully into compliance with current safety standards and accessibility requirements, including ADA guidelines. Modernizing the building to ensure safety, inclusivity, and functionality is an essential responsibility and should be accomplished in a way that is sensitive to the historic context.
The East Wing has long served practical and ceremonial roles, including providing workspace for the Office of the First Spouse and associated staff. Any redesign should continue to accommodate these essential functions, ensuring that necessary offices and support spaces are included within the plan.
If event or gathering space is deemed necessary, it should be thoughtfully designed within the existing footprint of the East Wing. Such space should reflect restraint and dignity, avoiding unnecessary expansion or overly ornate features. The White House is a symbol of democratic governance and shared national heritage—it should not be treated or presented as a palace.
Above all, the White House belongs to the American people. Any changes to its structures should reflect stewardship, respect for history, and a commitment to preserving its character for future generations.
Thank you for your consideration.

With the original structure gone (without comment or permission, I might add) there is no way to modify it. The proposed new structure totally dwarfs all dimensions - length and especially height - of the rest of the White House. The new structure should be kept in a scale that is complimentary to the main building and not dominate it. And it should also allow for the reception of guests, dignitaries and heads of state as the original East Wing did. Thank you for this opportunity. I fervently hope that the Commission can reign in the design to reflect the beauty of OUR White House.

I vehemently object to th 90,000 square feet construction if a ballroom. My concerns are:

1. The project is wasteful spending since it makes no sense to build out a vanity ballroom that would overshadow the 55,000 square foot White House.
2. The project proceeded in my opinion with no prior input or authority to do so, therefore any new construction should have appropriate approvals and authorizations in advance of the final project
3. The East wing project should be re-built out at an appropriate cost to the American taxpayers who do not have deep pockets to fund whimsical fantasies that may exist in the heads of our elected officials. Appropriate and competitive bidding processes should be utilized.

These projects will be fast tracked sub-par constructions which will be filled with foreign listening bugs due to lack of construction oversight and deliberate welcomed foreign interference. Leaving them up will be another hindrance to a functioning democracy and a reminder of how poor decision making can happen at every level of society.

My country does not need a golden ballroom for the 1% billionaire class to dance, party, and feast while the 99% are struggling to pay rent and feed their children. Donald Trump was reckless and pissed on the National Capital Planning Commission with his action of bulldozing the East Wing without approval.

I want the East Wing rebuilt with the external structure looking as it did before Trump demolished it, as though it were his own personal property. The interior can be rearranged and modernized as the Commission sees fit.

Our country is being run by politicians who do not care about the people. We are only a means to enrich their pockets, or in this case, to stroke Trump's ego. We are being kept in line by fear of reprisal. Well, if this comment gets me on a "deserves punishment" list, Donald Trump can KMA!

Dear Commissioners,

I am writing to express my concerns regarding the proposed East Wing Modernization Project.

While the architectural renderings appear thoughtfully designed and visually striking, the proposed structure seems to dwarf the White House, arguably the most iconic building in the United States. Based on the materials presented, the new building appears to be nearly twice the size of the White House. Given the historic and symbolic significance of the White House campus, I question whether a structure of this scale is appropriate in such close proximity.

If the intent of the modernization is to create enhanced space for events and official functions, it is unclear why the building must be so large. The renderings also suggest a substantial amount of office space. I am not certain why these offices could not be accommodated within existing federal facilities, particularly in light of the recent downsizing of the federal workforce.

Additionally, there does not appear to be a direct link to the project drawings on the East Wing Modernization Project webpage. I was only able to locate them by navigating to the agenda for the upcoming meeting. For a project of this magnitude, one that would significantly alter the character of the White House campus, I believe the drawings and related materials should be prominently posted and more broadly accessible. The American public should also be afforded adequate time to review and provide meaningful comment.

Thank you for your consideration of these concerns.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800. The fact that President Trump bulldozed the East wing (literally & figuratively) without proper review & congressional approval is appalling.
While expanded event space may be needed, the East wing renovation must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure. The final project must follow these guidelines and be proportional to the West wing for visual symmetry, without removing any more trees of historical significance. If an event space can't be accommodated within a proportional footprint, then it should be developed elsewhere and alternatives for the use of a re-built East wing considered.

This is not a modernization project. This was an unsanctioned demolition of the East Wing of the White House with plans to build a highly expensive, enormous, out of proportion "ballroom" that is allegedly to be funded by private sources and not taxpayer monies. However, there is zero transparency on this project. Private financing raises concern about emoluments influencing the POTUS, and taxpayer monies should not be used for what amounts to a personal fantasy of this president.

In my opinion, there should be no such project without a thorough input from the public and Congress, and moreover the President must be held to account for the massive destruction to the People's House that he has already undertaken.

If possible, the East Wing should be returned to the dimensions it was originally. A law should be passed (or maybe observed) that the White House is a temporary resident for the President while he is working in DC. It is not his personal space to do with as he pleases. However, I guess it is too late now. The East Wing should be office space for The First Lady and an area where history of the White House is provided. It should be an Art Gallery for those paintings that The Smithsonian has in storage so people can see them.

The proposed ballroom should not be approved. In the drawings and renderings of what the finished ballroom will look like, it dwarfs the White House. This building will overshadow the White House and become the focal point of the complex. The East Wing is an ancillary structure. It should not be drawing attention from or competing with the main White House building. Before the criminal destruction of the east wing, the White House was symmetrical and balanced. Whatever is reconstructed should be constructed within that same footprint and restricted to the same height as the previous East Wing to return the White House complex to a symmetrical and balanced appearance.

Whatever is reconstructed should also provide the now eliminated office space for the first Lady and staff that was housed by the East Wing. Elimination of the first ladies office space deprives the United States and its citizens of a valuable resource through the charitable and critical work prior first ladies have done, and will do again in the future. Any modernization efforts cannot eliminate this functional staff space to merely provide a luxury entertainment venue, at the taxpayer's expense.

It should be a crime for a publicly owned building to be razed without public input. As for this project, the East Wing no longer exists and obviously can't be modernized. Replacing it with a ballroom is NOT modernizing, it is a slap in the face of taxpayers.

Under NO circumstances should a ballroom be constructed in that space. If anything is constructed, it should be a duplication of the East Wing's architecture, with functional modernization only, i.e. duplicate the destroyed East Wing but modernize electrical and other construction to current building code standards. The new construction should appear to be no different - no larger, no more modern than it was - except for safety/building code upgrades.

Let me repeat: NO BALLROOM under any circumstances!!! NO reward for Donald Trump for razing the East Wing!

The White House is the People's house! It belongs to ALL people in this country, NOT just the rich. I cried over the demolition at Our House. The East Wing was iconic and belonged to the strong women among us. This demolition is criminal, maybe treasonous.
As a 63 year old citizen, I want my East Wing restored now.

As a public school teacher, I have visited “My House” a few times over the years, and I taught the students I accompanied to feel the legacy, walk through the halls that shaped our history, and pay reverence to the People’s House: of the people, by the people, and for the people. No other country in the world can say that!
I want My House RESTORED, and if a bigger ballroom is needed, it should be on scale with existing structures, strictly monitored by Preservation Architects, and free of gilding and grandeur. I want the People’s White House to represent all people in this country—poor and rich, native and immigrant. The White House should feel welcoming, not overpowering, to the average citizen.
Thank you!

The irresponsible and improper destruction of a portion of the White House is abhorrent, and a desecration of our history. Putting an outsized ballroom, which serves no public purpose, is equally abhorrent. If a structure is put in place of what was the east Wing of the White House, it should be one that reflects the important history of the building and highlights the historic purpose of the portion that was destroyed. A gilded ballroom which will only serve rich donors is not appropriate.

I firmly opposed to the proposed White House ballroom. A ballroom is completely unneeded, as the country has managed for a couple of centuries without one. It will destroy the historical and aesthetic quality of what's left of the White House. In addition, any such construction should follow the process that currently exists, rather than being determined by a single man. The financing proposed is certainly vulnerable to both the appearance and the reality of bribery of that single man, especially as the proposed price continues to balloon.

The White House is an historic building and the personal residence of the president of the United States. It was a beautifully proportioned as well as functional building before the destruction of the East Wing. The demolition should never have happened. The president does not need a 90,000 square foot ballroom, which would be so disproportionate to the rest of the building. I would like to see the facade restored to its original size. Beyond the obvious security risk posed to participants of any given event hosted in such a high-profile, potential mass-casualty target, or that it dwarfs the iconic White House it abuts, doing anything other than restoring the East Wing back to it's original architectural design pays homage to someone whom I'm not sure the majority of the American people wish to honor so. Perhaps Ralph Nader's words, in his 13 February, 2026, email should be considered before we move further forward on the plan which was imposed on Us by someone history may show to be the most corrupt leader We have ever known:
"Trump – by far the most impeachable of presidents and the least negatively branded by his opponents – must wonder about his luck. Consider, he is a convicted felon, a chronic liar, a serial law violator, a repeated sexual abuser of women, a crooked extortionist, a hugely corrupt user of the White House to enrich the Trumpsters, a shatterer of the social safety net for tens of millions of Americans, a slasher of safeguards and scientific research against catastrophic climate violence and pandemics leaving America rapidly defenseless, and a crazed suppressor of solar energy and wind power while boosting the omnicidal oil, gas, and coal industries. I believe the East Wing should be restored as was originally designed, with updates that were needed. If that White House needs a ballroom that bad, it should at least be designed to the dimensions of the previous East Wing. However there are existing areas near by for ballroom usage. The East Wing has usually been used by the First Lady, believe it should be left for should usage. Many First Ladies have used this space for great works. Also believe that Jackie Kennedy's Rose Garden needs to be restored

This space should be dedicated not as a ballroom, but as an integrated space between the executive branch and the people, emphasizing the many components and cultures that make up American life. It should be historically accurate to the main building and no larger than the west wing side of the structure for balance.

I will make this polite. Don Trump's destruction of the East Wing of the White House was shameful. The plans for a what I describe as a '"palatial" ballroom are grotesque. The concept fits a dictator, not what the President of the United States should represent. As such, I would prefer to leave the space empty, no construction, until Don Trump has left office.

Any changes, improvements, updates or destruction of any public building effectively owned by the citizens of the United States should be decided by the citizens of the United States and never by one man, even if he is temporarily occupying any public building. What has been done by this president is a travesty against the citizens of this country and our Constitution. He should be held criminally liable for the destruction of the East Wing of "THE PEOPLE'S HOUSE" and be charged with restoring it to it's previous condition - at his own expense! I believe that the same should be true for the Rose Garden. This man has done nothing but feed his own ego. The White House lawn should not look like a McDonald's parking garage lot!

NO - we do not want or need a Ballroom at the White House!

This is nothing more than a Donald Trump vanity project.

The White House is owned by the People of the United States and Trump has no right or authority to construct a gaudy Ballroom.

The White House is an integral part of our nation's seat of government. It deserves solemn respect - it is NOT an entertainment venue.

The facist in the White House - aka The People's House - torn down the East Wing with zero approval from The National Trust for Historic Preservation.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800. The fact that President Trump bulldozed the East wing (literally & figuratively) without proper review & congressional approval is appalling.

While expanded event space may be needed, the East wing renovation must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure. The final project must follow these guidelines and be proportional to the West wing for visual symmetry, without removing any more trees of historical significance. If an event space can't be accommodated within a proportional footprint, then it should be developed elsewhere and alternatives for the use of a re-built East wing considered.

Begin by halting all work until the project complies with all phases of the process for altering historic buildings. Then if, and only if, the designated architects agree to an appropriately designed addition that complies with and melds with the remainder of the White House should any construction proceed. If, on the other hand, the plans are rejected, the president should be presented with a bill to cover the cost of rebuilding the east wing exactly like it was before he took it upon himself to demolish a building that he does not own. The White House in while represents our country. Its footprint runs thru the history books. Until the day that trump tore down the east wing, very few on this planet knew the White House as anything but what it was.
He destroyed that in a day. He changed the historical landscape. It hurt our hearts. It was like a small 9/11 all over again. We lost a bit of who we are. And we were helpless and blindsided.
What are the rules worth if they do not apply to even the highest office? I am not exaggerating when I say that the people of America believe that he desecrated the house that belongs to WE THE PEOPLE. He is being allowed to dance all over OUR history.
Putting his name on memorials and making plans to build memorials to himself (the arch). All the time ignoring the rules defining the mechanics of those changes.
PLEASE put a stop to his attacks on our capital.
Keep him accountable to your building regulations and filings for approval. We've lost so much already.
In fact, Denny him the ability to build or destroy or refurbish ANYTHING while he is in office.
People are starving and not getting paid while he plays Bob the Builder. I for one am exhausted helplessly watching him destroy our country for his own glory.

I do not believe the East Wing should in anyway dwarf or overshadow the rest of the National Public buildings and monuments which house our Government. It should be tasteful, not gaudy, not overwhelming in decoration, treatments or facade. I believe it was adequate as it was, and should be replaced as closely aligned with the previous structure as possible, while providing any necessary (emphasis on necessary) additonal space deemed appropriate by the National Capital Planning Commission. I believe that modesty and symetry are excellent architectural features for Government Buildings. Understated Elegance should guide the design.

I am strongly opposed to the east wing modernization project. The east wing was a historic space for first ladies offices and I would like it returned for that purpose, as close to the look, size and space of the original wing. This is the people's house and historic grounds and as such the people should be provided with specific plans that retain its historic character, detailed cost analysis and funding transparency before the project goes forward.

While neither a historian or architect, I do believe I have enough knowledge to comment on the current plans for the East Wing project. I completely understand the need to provide a safe room for those in the White House. Having adequate room, updated services such as HVAC, water, electrical, etc. is certainly necessary. An area with space to live modestly during a crisis is also required. What I believe is being planned is more than required for comfort and safety.

From a historical perspective, I completely agree that the scale of the project is completely out of proportion with the rest of the White House. The exterior drawings continue to change from week to week. This building has been the People's House and therefore the people should be involved in the process, which has not happened. The NCPC has been removed from the process as well. From what I was able to research, there were no historical groups involved in the planning prior to demolishing the East Wing until after the fact. We do not need a palace. We need a functional wing for security and the offices that were previously there, with a slight increase in square footage as deemed necessary by the NCPC. It should conform to the current building in size, form, and style.

From a practical point of view, there is no need for such a massive ballroom. With very rare exceptions, the current ballroom handled up to 200 people and most recent events entertained smaller groups. The cost of furnishing, staffing, maintaining, and utilities for this massive, yet seldom used room, will fall upon the American taxpayers, with no real benefit. Finally, the marble and gold decor is completely incompatible with the rest of the White House, as well as an added expense not necessary to have a functional room.

Financing for this project is also an issue. While President Trump states that he has donations to cover the costs, I have serious concerns. He has not listed those who have donated. He has, especially over the past few years, engaged in quid quo pro, which makes me concerned that these donations will greatly affect our government's ability to serve all the people. The price has, from the most recent data, doubled. Based on the President's previous buildings, he tends to cut costs by not paying contractors for their work, which is completely unacceptable, but should be considered a possibility. President Trump, whom has been in the building business for decades, knows that permits are required, from planning to demo to building. He has decided that his position supersedes these requirements, which makes me wonder if the permitted work will be the end result. The latest that I have seen looks similar to the current White House. I do, however, doubt that this will be the building that our current administration will erect, as he continually produces new materials, drawings, and comments on the project.

My family has been part of our country since 1620. They have fought in the Revolutionary War, War of 1812, Civil War and every war since then. My great-great grandfather was a member of the US House from the state of Maine. My grandmother worked in DC and spent time in the White House during the Korean War. I feel a genuine connection to the District of Columbia and the White House is one of the oldest buildings, along with the US Capitol. Maintaining the building is necessary, but keeping the history and functionality of the White House does not necessitate this overzealous project.

No President should be able to control OUR public buildings. That is too much power in one person. The point is, the buildings belong to all of us. An independent commission or committee not controlled by the President should approve and sign off on the new building to replace the now destroyed East Wing. Presidents come and presidents go, buildings last for hopefully centuries. No building should have the imprimatur of just ONE person.

I hate the gaudiness of the Trump Gold, it is gaudy not pretty. An independent committee/commission is never going to approve that much gaudy gold, or ANY gold. Funding should come through Congress, not private donations. IF there are private donations then the donors need to be revealed and there should be a maximum limit on how much anyone can donate. To NOT have a cap invites favoritism and corruption, "You give me $5 million for the new building that I alone control the design and build of, and I'll remove some federal law or regulation you don't like."

A President may give input just like any other American. A Non Profit Historical Preservation organization together with a bi partisan special committee of Congress should run the show. There can be no back dooring who appoints the committee to run the designs and plans. What good is it if the President appoints majority members to the committee, then they are beholding to him and will simply rubber stamp his wishes. I stress INDEPENDENCE, this must be an independent committee.

And for the Love of God I do not want it so HUGE that the Presidents are inaugurated there. I like the inauguration to continue on the steps of the United States Capitol. The first thing the committee should do is simply vote on the seating capacity of the Ballroom. Once you have agreement on the seating capacity THEN do design work. Everything flows from an agreed upon ballroom seating capacity. For me, I think about 300 sounds about right. We don't need more than that. If it is too big then it simply becomes event space for the President to promote himself. We all pay for the lavish dinners and he stands up on the dias for his personal glory. After all the business of Government is NOT having mar-a-largo style parties, we don't need that many parties, they do not benefit the people, they benefit the President. The Ballroom gets converted into a big rally hall if it is too large, nobody wants that (well save one peson).

FIRST the committee votes on the maximum seating for the new ballroom, do that as the very first thing. THEN look at designs and plans that meet the voted on requirements. As is said on the streets during protests, "Whose House?" the refrain is "OUR House" That is what i believe. It's OUR House and no one President gets control of our public buildings. The President can give input and that is all. No control. No control by the President.

The East Wing “Modernatization” project is nothing more than a disgusting ego project of a wannabe dictator. The fact that the demolition was done without the approval of the NCPC or the American people is proof of the complete lack of respect the current administration has for the very people they claim to represent. The renderings themselves are garish, ugly and more in line with Trump Tower than the White House. Such a massive, tacky ballroom has no other purpose than to act as venue for this pedophile’s campaign events. If this project is allowed to move forward the only good it will do is to serve as a monument to one of the most corrupt and reviled administrations in history. Perhaps it should be allowed to be built so the American people will never forget how close we came to allowing a white nationalist to destroy our country.

This past Christmas, my 20 year old grandson actually helped me decorate our Christmas tree. It had been several years since he did this and he was fascinated by my collection of "White House Christmas Ornaments." He read the information about each ornament and we talked about each one. They all capture a unique time in our history and in the history of the "People's House." There is no need to modernize the White House other than normal additions such as wifi, smoke detectors, better kitchen equipment.... This world is so fluid, it is important to have some constancy. Our national monuments and the White House need to offer that. Paving over the Rose Garden and demolishing the East Wing were actions taken without authority and they diminished the People's House. The current incumbent should pay out of his own pocket to repair what he has broken. If this were done by a tenant in a rented apartment, the tenant would be assessed fees. In a country that cannot afford to offer universal healthcare, one where children are going hungry, and our elderly cannot afford medications - spending funds to "modernize" the east wing is more than just wrong. It is horrid.

I am submitting my comments and can only hope it's not the equivalent of shutting the barn door after the horse got out. Maybe the White House needs a ballroom. A "normal" ballroom requires up to 15 square feet per person. Add a stage and dance area, for 500 guests and 15,000 square feet would be considered more than adequate, so I'd say for the White House, I'd allow 20,000 square feet. Because the East Wing is totally gone, my thoughts are as follows: Construct a 20,000 sq ft ballroom. Build reasonable offices for the First Person and his/her staff. It's the People's House, so build a thoughtful museum with mobile exhibits that change maybe 4 times a year, to tell our American story, honestly and meaningfully. Create a small performance space for children with walls decorated with art projects from schools all over our country(again changeable), with a place for children to watch plays, listen to musicians, have the President or First Person read a story etc. And finally, a place to honor our veterans - something very special - I don't know what. My own family has veterans going back to the Revolution and up to VietNam. So many people to be honored.

The outside of the building should balance out the West Wing and fit alongside the main building. Please, no European palace, no replica of Mar-a-Lago, just something traditionally American, styled with pride, honor and simplicity. Something for ALL Americans.

About me: my paternal side arrived in Massachusetts very very early, but my maternal side arrived in Virginia Colony before the March 1622 massacre at Jamestown. My 4th GGF was Thomas Law, married to Martha Washington's granddaughter. He paid for the building of much of early DC and his house still stands in the SW Waterfront neighborhood. I have a lot of pride being American. I didn't know that would be tested as much as it is now. Thanks for letting me comment.

The East Wing was fine how it was and was a historical structure. It balanced the architecture of the west wing and was an appropriate scale to the rest of the White House. The proposed ballroom is a gold-clad abomination that would both dwarf the White House and would throw off the balance and symmetry that existed with the west and east wings. Any new construction must match the shape and scale of the East Wing. No one needs or wants the proposed ballroom.

The proposed ballroom is massively out of scale for the rest of the White House and surrounding grounds. I agree with architect Bruce Redman Becker, who Trump removed last year from the Commission of Fine Arts. He blasted the design as “a poorly proportioned pseudo-neoclassical structure that is completely out of scale with the White House.” The current design will overshadow the iconic main mansion and alter long-protected sightlines around the complex.

I personally think any plans should come from and go through the commission, and approved through public opinion and votes, before congress. We the people, who find and elect our government, should have the say. Proposals can come from the different branches, but should be a majority opinion through polls. Especially in times where our elected officials have blind loyalty and kiss the ring instead of caring about their constituents opinions!
In my personal opinion, the East Wing should have never been demolished. Especially without all of the Parks and Commissions approvals, or any concern about public opinion. That man is only a temporary fixture in our government, and should have no say in our establishments. Shouldn’t he have more important things to focus on than remodeling??? That can not possibly a duty of the POTUS. If the structure needed repairs so badly, we should rebuild a historically accurate restoration, without any gold fixtures. If a ballroom was agreed to be a necessity for our government…which doesn’t sound necessary to me… than the other departments should oversee planning and ZONING and construction. We do not need to build monuments to this man. His name does not need to be plastered on any building he gets his hands on. There is no need for these new Goliath monuments, including the arch!

Dear Trustees,

The unauthorized destruction of the East Wing of the White House was an abomination, a complete smackdown of the building's historic value--and likely of the rule of law as well, since it was a unilateral decision of the current president. This comes on the heels of the cementing-over of the elegant Rose Garden, giving that once-green space the look of a swanky outdoor bar in the tropics in which dignity is completely absent.

This wanton destruction of our nation's heritage sites needs to be rectified through legal action and accountability. The man responsible for these hostile actions has pockets deep enough to pay for restoration, and he should be compelled to do so.

Please do all you can to restore justice--and beauty--to our White House grounds.

Thank you,

I compared state dinner capacity across several countries to the proposed ballroom space. The proposed capacity appears to be far out of line with comparable venues and stated purpose. It suggests indulgence and unnecessary extravagance. This does not reflect the image I expect our country and its ideals to project. (See table for comparison.)

I also ran a quick estimate for space requirements based on a capacity of 650 guests, including some consideration of back-of-house needs (protocol, security, ceremonial presentation, etc.):
650 guests × 40 square feet per guest = 26,000 square feet

Which raises important questions:
1. How much of the proposed 90,000 square feet is actually ballroom space versus offices or other uses?
2. Is the full scope appropriate and necessary?

Heads up, while I ran the numbers off 650 capacity, President Trump is now talking 999 capacity for the ballroom, which is even more out of line.

Renderings released by the Trump administration show the new wing visually overshadowing the existing White House (the People's House!!) I do not believe that passes the "vibe check" for what the most symbolically important building in our nation should convey.

I trust someone else can confirm actuals on this type of data for more thorough comparison.

The proposed ballroom project is purely a vanity project to stoke the ego of the current occupant of the White House. The proposed facility is vastly out of scale to the rest of the White House and will negatively impact the existing structure. If a ballroom is truly needed, it should be of a scale that fits the grounds better and doesn't destroy the aesthetics. Perhaps the best choice would be to locate it in an entirely different place.

I am not completely opposed to adding a space to the White House grounds for special events. I understand that the White House is old and could benefit from some renovation BUT
The White House belongs to the American people. Each President occupies it for a limited amount of time. The White House is not a palace and its design reflects the fact that it is occupied by a servant of the American people and the Constitution, not a King or Queen. That should not change.

If the White House is to be renovated and added to, there should be a call for proposed designs from different architects. Those designs should then be reviewed by the proper authorities and once several designs have been reviewed and selected, the selections should be put before the American people.

The White House belongs to the people and the people should decide when and how the building should be modified and how much of our hard earned money should be spent on such an endeavor.

It is disturbing that destruction of a part of this iconic building took place without consideration of the need for the steps to receive approval. In addition is whether there is a need for such a large and ostentatious addition to the American people's house. It is supposed to be a residence and work place for the president while in office. It is not supposed to be a palace.It is also an American museum for our citizens and others to visit and see where history has been made and learn of that history.

Consideration needs to be taken on how the appearance the main structure will be altered and the effect of the construction on the existing structure. I am not an architect or engineer. I am appalled that steps were skipped in this plan that could have long term negative effects on the viability of this treasure.

I find the proposed White House ballroom to be an affront to the American people and a disgrace to the normal, legal approval process.
It is historically, aesthetically, and financially impractical, essentially overpowering the existing Executive Mansion.
The distruction of the East Wing of the White House without oversight is a crime and should be prosecuted as such.

Any construction needs to be approved by a process, not on a whim by a self serving president.
Its financing should be controlled by Congress and be transparent.
The donor system of funding appears as bribes and there is currently no cap on costs as the price has doubled in the last few months.

I believe no such building should be approved.
Remediation and reconstruction of the East Wing, or some appropriate architecture should be thoroughly overseen by the appropriate agencies and the cost should be borne entirely by the perpretrator of this abomination.
To serve the prople.

In my opinion, the proposed renovation to the (already destroyed) White House East Wing - to say nothing of the suggestion that a 250-foot triumphal "Arc de Trump" be erected near the Lincoln Memorial - are projects more suited to a megalomaniacal dictator than to an American presidential administration.

The loophole that exempts the White House from historical preservation restrictions - that has resulted in Melania Trump's unilateral paving of the Rose Garden and Donald Trump's taking a wrecking ball to the East Wing - should be closed immediately; as the peoples' house, held in trust by sequential presidents, the White House should not be prey to the whims of a single person, especially not to one with no respect for or knowledge of governmental institutions or American history.

The White House is the people's house. The occupant is only a temporary tenant. I believe that the East Wing should be restored to the same appearance as it was during the previous administration, incorporating modern features and following modern building codes as needed and as they can be accomodated while preserving the original appearance and design. Donald trump had no right to bulldoze the building.

And this would be an excellent opportunity to restore the Rose Garden as well .

I am strongly opposed to the East Wing modernization project as currently proposed. These plans do not seem to take into account the fact that the East Wing has historic importance and any major changes should face careful scrutiny by preservationists, by architects, and by the public. The White House is the "People's House" and we should have some say in substantive changes to it. I don't see that this is happening (despite this call for public comments). Instead I see a conspicuous lack of transparency about many issues, including cost, funding, necessity, and design.

As a U.S. Citizen, I feel it's important to speak up about the importance of historical architecture, especially in such locations at the White House, the "house of the people". I do not feel a President has the right to significantly alter this building without the approval of the country. There should be an approval process in place for the review of any interior redecorating or any permanent interior or exterior alterations. I do not believe there should ever be an instance where a large part of a building is torn down and destroyed unless it was previously damaged by an act of nature or is determined to be unsafe.
Buildings can be modernized and improved but the historical significance of a building should never be destroyed.
This current project has been a mess from the beginning without a plan and is now at a standstill. It's yet another embarrassment to our country. This current president does as he pleases without any ramifications or repricusions. Defacing the White House should not be allowed and it should be put back in a way that honors and mimics the current building and looks architecturally similar.
This president must be reined in and the historical significance of National governmental buildings, memorials, spaces, & lands must be protected.

As a National Historic Landmark owned by the American people, the White House is the People's House. It was deliberately designed in a restrained Georgian style, defined by balanced proportions and modest scale. Any renovation should respect and restore its original architectural character, preserve its historic footprint, and maintain symmetry with the West Wing and main residence. Essential upgrades — including wiring, infrastructure, and ADA accessibility — should proceed through established historic preservation standards.

The East Wing should be rebuilt in keeping with the scale, placement, and design of the original structure, ensuring visual harmony across the entire complex. Landscape improvements should honor the historic gardens, including a faithful restoration inspired by Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis's Rose Garden, without unnecessary ornamentation or excess.

Permanent changes to one of our nation's most significant historic sites must reflect the voice of the public. The White House belongs to the American people and should be preserved with that responsibility in mind.

The White House is The People's House. It is not a palace. It does not serve exclusively as the current Presidents private residence. Any modifications/renovations to the White House should respect the historic and cultural significance of this iconic building which serves as a symbol of our democracy. I would suggest that any further construction at this site should restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style/color of the East Wing while allowing for modernization of the mechanical systems and improvements to the accessibility of the structure. The interior decor should be tastefully updated and reflect the architectural style and details of the exterior of the building, not the current President's personal taste. All historically significant artwork and artifacts should be returned to the East Wing. In addition, any changes made to the White House (by the current President) that reflect partisan attacks on former Presidents MUST be removed.

The destruction of the East Wing of the White House was a TERRIBLE thing. Now that it's done, building a mega-ballroom to eclipse the White House is a TERRIBLE thing. However, since something has to be done to fix Mr. Trump's giant hole in the ground, my comment is that the construction should be publicly funded (take a few dollars from DHS immigration concentration camp construction). Further designs MUST go through the appropriate planning and design agencies as per the following:

"Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to help shape the decision. The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800.
This review is also required under federal law. Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must undergo review by the NCPC and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act, and receive congressional approval." This is the law!!

Please make the new building compatible with and not greater than the existing White House.

Over the years I have enjoyed many trips to Washington, DC and have thought a great deal about the destruction of the East Wing and the changes being considered. While many renovations have taken place over time, all have been purposeful and minor in nature. The destruction of the East Wing for a Ballroom just seems to be wasteful, and has no purpose when one thinks about the People’s House. Adjustments should be made with future Presidents and First Ladies in mind. To that end, a rebuilding of the destroyed offices for future First Ladies makes a great deal of sense. Please also note that a true “addition” to the White House should not dwarf the existing building, and should be modest in nature, not a design that attracts undue attention. A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, design and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. It should be duplicated in most every way of what the former East Wing was, with the addition of modern electric and internet.

Please ensure that the structure built in place of the now demolished East Wing of the White House is built so it annexes The White House and does not dwarf it. I see no need for a "ballroom" in 2026 as there are many other places in Washington DC that can be used for events, concerts, dinners and dances. The presidency is not about showing off wealth and entertaining dignitaries. That is part of the job, but a small part. An administrative building seems appropriate and necessary. We need a building that is in keeping with our history which is modest and dignified. A building that dwarfs the White House is humiliating for the historical buildings and dignity of our country.

While the White House is the people's house, it also is a visual reminder of all of the presidents and families of presidents who lived there for a time.

The White House is American and should continue to look like the heart of what is best about America: community, honesty, hard work, kindness, helping.

Changes to the White House should respect America and Americans. All Americans -- not just oligarchs.

I oppose any addition or renovation or change that makes the original White House look small in comparison. I oppose any change that celebrates money over all else.

This proposed design should be rejected. Its scale diminishes the significance of White House itself, the central feature of the property, the historic People's House, It is grandiose in conception and is unimaginative in its use of classical architectural vocabulary.
The fact that this proposal even exists is due to the unlawful destruction of the East Wing. without any input from anyone other than the President himself.

I'm not really in a position to know whether the east wing needed modernizing but I do know that any plans should have been submitted to the historical commission for input or decision. The proposed ballroom project should not be allowed to proceed. The East Wing should be restored to its state as of July 2025, including restoring the works of art that were displayed there.
The proposed project is much too large for the overall balance of the building.
As the "People's House," any decisions about substantial changes should be made by a duly representative group with official stewardship of the property - not by any single individual.

The East Wing "Modernization" Project nest to the White House is grossly overdone. The setback from the street appears to be inadequate. The height of the proposed ballroom should definitely be lower than the White House, perhaps only one and a half stories. The front columnade is in the wrong place, as it should face the street for appropriate access, with appropriate street side plaza. Adequate parking is not addressed. The footprint of the proposed structure is far too imposing, compared the rest of the White House. The "ballroom" should be moved back to be inline with the front of the central structure of the White House. And prove that the ballroom need have more than a 500 person capacity!

The White House is not a luxury resort. It is a National Historic Landmark. It belongs to the American people — not to one president’s ego.

Tearing down part of the East Wing to build a 90,000-square-foot ballroom larger than the Executive Residence itself is not preservation. It's vanity construction on sacred civic ground.

This building has stood since 1800. It has survived war, fire, depression, and constitutional crises. It does not need to be supersized to match anyone's appetite for spectacle.

Federal law requires review for a reason. The National Environmental Policy Act exists for a reason. The National Capital Planning Commission exists for a reason. Historic additions are supposed to be compatible and subordinate — not dominate the original structure.

If expanded event space is needed, there are ways to do it that respect scale, history, and design. A 90,000-square-foot monument to excess is not that.

The White House is not Mar-a-Lago. And it should never be treated like it is!

Modernization of electrical, heating and plumbing should be allowed but the interior space should be replicated to look like the original building, in keeping with the historic structure.

In 1984, I was a guest in an East Room luncheon on the occasion of Eleanor Roosevelt's 100th birthdate. We ate off the Roosevelt china, and seated nearby were two Roosevelt sons. I was in awe. I shook hands and was photographed with Nancy Reagan. I was powerfully moved, near tears, walking through that sacred space. Born in the Land of Lincoln, here I was viewing the original art of Abe Lincoln's portrait! I adored his work and integrity. I swelled with pride at the history and leadership of our nation.

In 2025, I was again near tears when I read of the East Wing's destruction, and sickened to watch the tear-down in progress on television. I wondered, How did this happen without comment or approval?! And especially in the flagrantly unlawful way it was conducted.

My sincere hope is to restore the East Wing's historical properties as much as possible, while integrating the necessary changes to meet modern-day code. No ballroom—back to its design, with the 1949s updates reflected atop the original build. Please, I wish for no gold filigree anywhere, even if will be removed later when we have a president who is not so engaged with flourish. I hopefully expect the Jackie Kennedy Rose Garden to be fully restored to its glory. Grass where new concrete covers the soil. And if at all possible, to replant one or more trees from the same stock of the one that was destroyed.

The White House and its grounds are part of our cohesive history, we the people, and should not be changed by the capricious nature of any one president. This is, after all, the People's House. And whoever sits behind the Resolute Desk is a temporary occupant. If we don't already have strict legislation preventing this happening again, I would hope for a Congressional move to protect the replacement wing from any future changes unless passed by Congress.

P.S. Give President Trump and his billionaire friends the bill for correcting this massive, insulting error. It was all just political currency.

The proposed demolition of the East Wing of the White House to construct a 90,000 sqft ballroom would represent a profound disregard for historic preservation, fiscal responsibility, and the symbolic integrity of one of the most important civic buildings in the United States. The White House is not merely a residence or event venue. It is a living museum, a National Historic Landmark, and an enduring symbol of American democracy recognized around the world. The East Wing, while modified over time, has long housed essential offices and supported the functioning of the executive branch, and its footprint contributes to the architectural balance of the Executive Residence grounds. Undertaking a massive expansion for the purpose of hosting larger social events would fundamentally alter the historic character of the building, require significant public resources that we do not have flexibility to use that quite frankly should be utilized to solve countless other needs FOR the American people, and set a troubling precedent that even the nation’s most iconic landmark is subject to dramatic alteration for political or personal* priorities. Preservation of historic structures is not nostalgia, it is stewardship and its vital. Once altered at this scale, the architectural and cultural continuity of the White House cannot simply be restored. This is not the DJT House, it's the American peoples. And we say NO.

I was aghast when I saw the East Wing of our White House being destroyed. The White House was a beautiful, well balanced building. Now it looks sad with one of the wings missing. I remember, on several occasions visiting the WH and entering through the East Wing. It brings tears to my eyes just thinking about the destruction.

Please don't let some monstrosity of a ballroom be built in its place. I think the façade of the west wing could be copied for an event space. I understand wanting event space, but not some garish gold plated ballroom. The American people, as a whole, are humble. We don't need to impress the world with a grandiose ballroom. OUR White House is not supposed to be a palace. We loved OUR WH the way it was. The WH belongs to US. The president is just a temporary resident.

Many Americans are struggling to pay for necessities, like food, child care, and health insurance. It is hurtful that anyone would think that projects like this, and the planned arch, are a good way to spend money. It is "Let them eat cake" attitude. The wealthy will do what they want, and average citizens be damned.

PLEASE STOP THIS PROJECT

It's an absolute travesty that Trump tore down the historic home, which belongs to the American people. He should not be allowed to initiate any reconstruction projects which have not passed all commissions that are to weigh in on renovations at historic buildings. Reconstruction should be in the style of the demolished Wing so that it appears to not have been ripped off and destroyed. There is absolutely no need for a new ballroom. How sad to be commenting on modernizing the East Wing of the White House when it no longer exists! We should not be in this position.
The East Wing should be rebuilt with appropriate updates to mechanical systems and ADA compliance. It should be designed to complement the architectural style of the main house and to balance the West Wing. It should not overshadow the residence but be an adjunct to it. With the availability of many ballrooms in Washington DC, I don't think there needs to be such a huge ballroom in the White House, when the current facilities have been adequate for preceding presidents. Vaulted ceiling and walls of gold filigree are not appropriate in the people's house. Quiet elegance does not need opulence. Our presidents are not kings! As a nation, we impress our allies by our actions, our promises, and our reliability, not by extravagance. The White House should not look like it's imitating Versailles.
I also think the whole project should be paid for by Donald Trump, from the money he has grifted by selling influence to the powerful. Those should not be allowed to point to the East Wind as their accomplishment. Trump destroyed the East Wing without following the rules and he personally should pay to replace the building.

For nearly two centuries, Presidents and their guests have entered the White House through the iconic North Portico. This prominent façade serves as a powerful representation of the White House itself, as well as the United States, both domestically and internationally. Its image is closely associated with the nation's history and values. The proposed East Wing Modernization Project, featuring a 90,000 square-foot ballroom is very concerning. The scale of this addition is disproportionate compared to the existing structure, which threatens to overshadow the central building and the North Portico. The White House, home to Presidents since 1800, stands as perhaps our most important national landmark and should remain recognized as the residence of the President rather than merely an entertainment venue. Given that the initial changes have already impacted the structure, it is essential to develop a new plan for reconstructing the East Wing. This plan should ensure that any new additions are appropriately scaled and harmonious with the historic nature of the White House, thereby preserving its significance and dignity.

Considering that demolition of the East Wing occurred illegally before plans for renovation were finalized or reviewed, this project should be considered replacement construction, not renovation. As for any new construction project, a thorough needs assessment must be completed and architectural plans should consider all functional needs to be included (for example office and reception space and public assess as well as secure areas). The replacement East Wing should be designed consistent with the scale and style of the remaining parts of the historic White House, and decor should be consistent with a mature Democracy, not a palace.

Costs should be moderate, consistent with high quality and enduring value, and funds must be authorized and appropriated by Congress. Any gifts for construction or furnishing should be received only as authorized by congress in the public interest and must be fully disclosed, consistent with ethical requirements and avoidance of the appearance of conflicts of interest.

Construction needs to be approved by a process, not on a whim by a president ... and its financing should be controlled by Congress and also be transparent. The donor system of funding seems more like bribes than anything else and as we've seen it also means there is no cap on costs since the price of the ballroom has doubled in the last few months.

I am writing in opposition to the proposed ball room addition to the East Wing of the White House. The sheer size of the proposed addition will completely destroy the beautiful aesthetic of the White House. The center, that is the main portion of the White House, must remain the primary focus of the building and be geometrically balanced by both the East and West wings. As such, any enlargement of the East Wing has to be minimal; it absolutely has to be much smaller and lower in profile than the main section.

The White House is easily one of our most cherished landmarks and icons. It is a building that is universally recognized not only for its architecture but also for all that it stands for. In my opinion, the proposed large ballroom would completely destroy this aesthetic and instead place the ballroom front and center.

The White House is only the temporary home of the President. It does not belong to him. Rather, it belongs to we the people. While there may be a need for a ballroom somewhere (though that is a debatable point), it certainly shouldn’t be built at the expense of destroying the aesthetic of our White House.

Thank you for this opportunity to share my views with you.

Mr. Trump's plans for adding a ballroom to the White House is are overblown, foolish, and ugly. The size of the ballroom is much too large in comparison to the rest of the building and it will be an eyesore. It begs the question, why was the building demolition allowed to happen in the first place with no oversight or government approval? He does not own the property and he is a temporary resident. His attempt to change the structure of the White House and then slap his name on this new addition it is appalling.

As a New York City resident I am well aware of the Trump family's real estate scams and schemes that have gone on in this city for many years. He is well-known for unlawfully tearing down properties as he sees fit and putting up ugly buildings, while cheating workers out of their pay and benefits.

The White House is the people’s house. Not a palace. The East Wing should have been preserved and updated, not unlawfully demolished. That must never happen again.

Restore the original exterior dimensions and architectural style, plus restore Jackie Kennedy garden / Rose Garden using primarily native plants. Bring the facility up to code for things like fire, electric and ADA compliance. Use Energy Star equipment. Follow past processes for making necessary changes with a focus on honoring historical sensitivities. Use classic, historically accurate designs while rigorously avoiding the gauche golden adornments currently in fashion at the white house.

If a larger ballroom is needed, rent a facility or construct it elsewhere in the city.

POTUS' ill-conceived ballroom addition should be:
1. scaled to match the initial overall profile of the East Wing,
2. the interior walls should be movable, accordion-type space / room separators, &
3. the fenestration should match or replicate the original spacing for the windows.

I anticipate that the next request will be to add a second chair to the Lincoln Memorial.

While the destruction of the East Wing is already complete, the planning committees and other decision-makers have an opportunity to restore what has been taken away. Do the right thing, do not give in to vanity projects, and rebuild the East Wing in a very similar size and aesthetic to what it was before. The White House does not need a ballroom, and it especially doesn't need a bloated addition that makes the historic building a caricature of what it was before.

No, no, no! As a United States citizen, I oppose the construction of a ballroom or anything similar to replace the East Wing of the White House. The White House is the peoples house, not the Presidents House. The East Wing should never have been demolished!. In fact, it should be replaced!
This ballroom plan is not modernization, it is destruction of our history.

I am submitting this comment to express strong opposition to the proposed East Wing modernization project as currently described. The East Wing and surrounding grounds are not ordinary government office space—they are part of the historic fabric of the White House complex and represent decades of national heritage, including the long-standing offices of First Ladies and the historic landscape associated with the Rose Garden and adjacent structures.

Any project that alters these historically significant spaces should meet an exceptionally high standard of public justification, preservation review, and cost transparency. At a time when taxpayers face ongoing economic pressures, allocating substantial federal funds to large-scale structural changes that may compromise historical integrity raises serious concerns about fiscal responsibility and project prioritization.

I urge the Administration to pause further action until a full public accounting is provided, including:
1. A detailed cost-benefit analysis demonstrating the necessity of the project;
2. Independent historic-preservation impact assessments made available for public review;
3. Consideration of renovation or preservation-first alternatives that maintain the historic character of the East Wing complex.

The White House belongs to the American people, and stewardship of its historic spaces should emphasize preservation, transparency, and responsible use of taxpayer funds.

To: National Capital Planning Commission (Project: East Wing Modernization)

The White House is not just an “event venue”—it’s a National Historic Landmark, a national park unit, and an enduring symbol of American democracy, stewarded for the public by the National Park Service. That status demands an exceptionally careful approach to any permanent alteration.

I understand the desire for improved event space and modernization, but the proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition raises serious concerns about historic scale, massing, and the long-established architectural balance of the White House complex. An addition of this magnitude risks becoming the dominant visual element rather than a respectful, subordinate component.

NCPC should insist on:

1) a full and transparent National Environmental Policy Act review that seriously evaluates smaller and less intrusive alternatives;
2) clear alignment with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation, including compatibility and protection of historic character;
3) design changes that preserve historic sightlines and ensure the historic White House remains the primary, defining form on the campus; and
4) adherence to the normal accountability safeguards referenced in the review process, including review by the U.S. Commission of Fine Arts and appropriate congressional oversight.

If the project cannot meet those standards, NCPC should require major redesign—or reject the proposal as currently conceived.

Images of the proposed new east wing of the White House appear to mimic the White House and upstage the White House in scale, fenestration, and apparent stature toward public viewsheds. The proposed wing is so overwhelming a statement, it makes leaving the west wing intact seem ludicrous and could easily trigger a symmetrical wing replacement at the west side in the near term. The wings should be dependencies that are of lesser stature to the White House, if the White House is indeed going to be kept. Wings that make the White House look unimportant or meager are not a welcome message at any time in our nation's history, even in these times.

Absolutely Not! The American People own the White House. Donald Trump is merely a tenant who lives there with our permission. Tenants do not get to bulldoze your property and erect monuments to themselves. Legally he should have to rebuild what he broke according to the direction of the property owner, the American People.

Any changes to the white house must be approved by the people through an independent commission not appointed by the president or affiliated with him and the construction must not be paid for by corporate bribes. We must put back what Trump illegally destroyed but he may not have any part of it..

The plans that Trump has presented are unacceptable. There must be a solicitation of proposals and an independent panel that chooses the design and implements the changes. This cannot be handled by Trump.

He doesn’t need to have a ballroom at the White House to entertain, the president is supposed to be governing the United States. The National Trust must step in and tell him that he is not allowed to do this, you need to limit the waste of tax payer money. Building on the already existing floor plan will be the only acceptable move. Trump shouldn’t have illegally tore down the existing structure simply because he wanted to. Aloha, I respectfully urge that the rebuilding of the East Wing of the White House remain consistent with the historic scale, character, and architectural integrity of the existing structure and the broader White House complex. Any reconstruction should honor the original intent and visual continuity of this nationally significant site, ensuring that additions or modifications are harmonious rather than expansive or stylistically incongruous.
At the same time, it is both appropriate and necessary that the East Wing be brought fully into compliance with current safety standards and accessibility requirements, including ADA guidelines. Modernizing the building to ensure safety, inclusivity, and functionality is an essential responsibility and should be accomplished in a way that is sensitive to the historic context.
The East Wing has long served practical and ceremonial roles, including providing workspace for the Office of the First Spouse and associated staff. Any redesign should continue to accommodate these essential functions, ensuring that necessary offices and support spaces are included within the plan.
If event or gathering space is deemed necessary, it should be thoughtfully designed within the existing footprint of the East Wing. Such space should reflect restraint and dignity, avoiding unnecessary expansion or overly ornate features. The White House is a symbol of democratic governance and shared national heritage—it should not be treated or presented as a palace.
Above all, the White House belongs to the American people. I do not support the re-building being influenced and/or financed by special interests (people, companies, groups, domestic and/or foreign). Any changes to its structures should reflect stewardship, respect for history, and a commitment to preserving its character for future generations.
Thank you for your consideration. Suzanne Paulsen

The proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House - after the apparent illegal demolition of the East Wing - isn't just inappropriate. It's a vulgar, narcissistic middle finger to the American people. This is not "restoration." It's not "improvement." It's a grotesque ego project designed to inflate one man's legacy in marble and gold leaf. The White House is not a goddamn resort property. It is not a campaign donor's playground. It is not a dictator's palace-in-waiting. It belongs to the public.

Let's be honest about what this is. Donald Trump has never met a gilded ceiling he didn't want to slap his name on, and now he and his sycophants think they can literally reshape the People's House into a monument to excess. Ninety thousand square feet. A ballroom. While Americans are dealing with unaffordable housing, collapsing infrastructure, climate disasters, and medical bankruptcies. The audacity is staggering. The optics are disgusting. And the contempt for ordinary citizens could not be clearer.

And then there's the funding. Oligarchs offering to bankroll this monstrosity "without public cost"? Spare us the bullshit. Nobody spends that kind of money out of civic spirit. They expect something in return: access, influence, favorable policy, pardons, contracts. When billionaires finance construction on the seat of executive power without transparent oversight, that is not philanthropy. That is corruption with better lighting.

Demolishing historic structures and erecting a chandeliered ego chamber in their place is the behavior of insecure strongmen who crave spectacle because they lack substance. It is gaudy. It is wasteful. It is ethically rancid. And it reeks of the same cheap, authoritarian aesthetic that confuses size with strength and gold trim with greatness.

Americans are pissed off. Not mildly concerned. Not politely disapproving. Furious. Because this is our house. Our history. Our executive branch. And watching it treated like a tacky development project for the glorification of one man's fragile ego is infuriating beyond measure.

If this administration believes it can bulldoze norms, sidestep oversight, and build a gilded shrine to vanity without backlash, it is profoundly misreading the country. The public sees the excess. We see the corruption. And we see the staggering disrespect for the people whose democracy this is supposed to be.

This proposal should be rejected outright, not because it's expensive, but because it is emblematic of everything rotten about this regime's priorities. Enough is enough. FDT.

The proposed changes to the East Wing risk undermining the historic integrity of the White House, a site whose meaning derives not only from its symbolism but from the continuity of its physical fabric. Alterations of this scale threaten to substitute permanence with expedience, privileging contemporary taste over stewardship. The East Wing, while modest in appearance, contributes to a carefully evolved ensemble that reflects generations of public service and restraint. To dramatically reshape or remove it would sever that continuity, reducing a living national monument to a customizable backdrop rather than a shared inheritance.

Equally troubling is the precedent such changes would set for governance and public trust. Major interventions at nationally significant sites demand rigorous review, transparency, and broad public consent—standards that exist precisely to protect common heritage from unilateral decisions. Proceeding without exhaustive, open evaluation signals that history is negotiable and that civic process is optional. Preserving the East Wing as it stands affirms a commitment to democratic values: that national symbols are held in trust for the people, not reshaped at will, and that the past deserves careful care rather than irreversible revision.

The proposed "ballroom" is not necessary and a complete waste of money. Reported to be funded only by donations, prior claims to this effect by the current occupant of the White House have proven inaccurate and have resulted in taxpayer monies used to fund his vanity projects. For over 200 years, the White House has been able to host formal occasions. The proposed construction is a monstrosity; the original architect has deemed it physically impossible to construct., and the per square foot costs have been deemed to be exorbitant. The project has not been put out to bid, but seems to have been awarded on the basis of political favoritism. This monstrosity is designed to be a monument to only one man, not the citizens of the United States.

I strongly oppose the construction of the "ballroom" and urge that the East Wing of the White House be restored to its original architecture, with the necessary upgrades to electricity, water and other infrastructure.

I thought the destruction of the revered and historic rose garden was the worst thing to happen to the White House under the tenancy of any of its temporary inhabitants. I never could have imagined the scale of the historic building's destruction under Trump's second term. In some ways, Trump's unauthorized desecration of the Nation's White House is symbolic of his supporters' continuing desecration of other jointly owned national real estate: our parks, forests, air and water. This act of destruction, this blatant ignoring the Nation's vital interest, needs to be rectified by ordering its complete restoration at Trump's cost, accompanied by his sincere apology. As I remember, when his first term started, he described the White House as a "dump," but he did not extend his scorn for the Nation's revered presidential home beyond words. Its unauthorized physical mutilation for reprehensible personal glorification must be called out for what it is. We cannot rely on agencies of the executive branch, now saturated with his personal devotees (aka bootlickers), to take action. It must be Congress' outraged legislative voice and the courts' actions to order restoration of the presidential mansion to the design chosen by the people. The starting point should be a bill introduced on Capitol Hill.

I will open my comments by saying that the project should never have been started without the full, approved plan having been published for the American people to see and understand the scope and their cost in future years.

The "ballroom" should be no larger than the White House residence itself. Current information online indicates that the previous room was capable of seating 650 people and most events were not near capacity. State dinners and other international honored guests should not include the number of guests that the current administration wants to include. Every member of Congress and their plus one is not needed. The honored guest could not possibly need to meet even 650 guests, let alone 1,000.

The future maintenance should be considered. Security, cleaning, servers, maintenance staff and more will be an ongoing expense even if the building cost is being born by wealthy donors. The American people should be the ones paying all costs so that there is not the question of what is being promised to big donors in exchange.

Obviously, since the East Wing has already been demolished, it is necessary to rebuild a space, but it definitely should not be a vanity project and in no way should it be the "gilded" room that the current president has indicated he wants it to be. We should be able to expect the re-building to be in keeping with the dignified buildings that DC already has.

My choice would be for a building addition no more than 10% larger with upgraded utilities. The drone proof roof and bulletproof windows are overkill. It is not a bunker and we don't need one.

Public commentary and input should have been considered PRIOR to reckless demolition. The East Wing should be restored to its original design, consistent with the rest of the White House, along with the Rose Garden and Jackie Kennedy's garden. ADA and other code updates could have been retrofitted, and should be part of the reconstruction. Look. I accept that the East Wing deserved modernization and was badly in need of updating and improvement.
Modernization is a planned, careful process undertaken with caution and oversight, with the goal of increasing a historic space's comfort, safety, and future utility of the building—in this case, a building that belongs not to its temporary occupants, but to the American People.

This project is not modernization, it is an act of wanton, illegal destruction, personal aggrandizement, and political corruption masquerading as modernization.
Shut it down ASAP, turn the planning of a real renovation over to the building's administrative curators, and underwrite it properly, with funding through proper channels.

My first request would be to put back exactly what was there before our current president tore it down. If that isn't possible, the East Wing still should look similar on the outside so it blends and balances as before. We might need a ballroom, but not a gargantuan one. If the new/restored/proposed wing contains a ballroom, the size should be only what is truly necessary for most functions. I believe offices, etc., are necessary also.

It is a travesty that we lost what was there, and there should be a law that it cannot happen like that ever again. If a previous law was broken regarding getting permission to alter historic buildings, then appropriate punishment should be meted out.

The East Wing of the White House should not have been demolished. No authorization was obtained prior, making this a violation, if not a crime.
A ballroom is a waste of time, money and energy. Build housing and clinics for veterans instead.
The East wing needs to be rebuilt as it was, using funds stolen and diverted by the current administration. This should cost the American people zero dollars.
Fines of $300,000,000.00, should be imposed on the president for this assault on the people's house. The current administration should have zero say or access to this project, now in the hands of the Historical Preservation Society.

No ballroom. No tax dollars spent. Charge and detain those who are responsible for this atrocity.

I am vehemently opposed to the construction of this monstrosity in close proximity to the White House, and I would have opposed the destruction of the East Wing had I been consulted about it! In addition to being of a size that will dwarf an historic building, this "ballroom" is completely unnecessary. Presidents of the United States have entertained beautiful in the East Room for generations, and many grand establishments, from Buckingham Palace to the Newport "cottages," supplement entertaining space with attractive tents. I've gone to gala dinners in such tents and there is absolutely nothing "cheap" or shabby about them. President Trump's proposed ballroom is nothing more than another tribute to his ego, which is so enormous that I doubt it would fit in the ballroom, were it to be constructed. But please, please don't let this happen. The White House doesn't deserve this insult to history and good taste.

The White House belongs to the People, it does not belong to the current resident. That being said, Donald Trump did not have the right to bulldoze the East Wing. He behaved like he is above the law and there should be consequences for that. Now there is nothing but a pile of rubble so renovations must be made. I am strongly opposed to the huge ballroom, and especially the tasteless, gaudy, chintzy and ostentatious interior design features proposed by Mr. Trump. The size and scale should not overwhelm the White House itself. It should not be funded by private individuals or entities as that creates a quid pro quo relationship. Construction costs should be modest considering the huge national debt. Perhaps a sitting President who behaves so recklessly should be required to pay out of his own pocket to repair the destruction he has caused, much like individuals who may have used bad judgment when on a back-country outing can be billed for rescue costs. The American taxpayer should not be on the hook to fix a huge problem of one individual's egotistical choice.

The White House belongs to the people, not any single president. I am displeased that the project so far seems to be in response only to what the current president wants. I am grateful for the opportunity to comment and reinforce the importance of input from the people.

While I am doubtful of the actual need for a ballroom, I can appreciate the other modernization and efficiency improvements included in the scope. My biggest concern is the overwhelming scale of the new building. I'd like to see the footprint and height reduced in order to respect the dominance that should be for the White House. I think the ceiling height of the ballroom could be reduced without affecting its utility or beauty.

I think the question of adding another level to the west wing colonnade should be addressed right now. The correctness of that design should be evaluated before the east wing project proceeds at its proposed height. Once the east wing is moving forward, it removes the opportunity to evaluate objectively. Instead the west wing decision will be subjected to the pressure to match the level that will be part of the new east wing.

I also do not want to see so much gold bling inside the ballroom like has been done in the Oval Office. It looks cheap. The design components should reflect the architecture that has been in place at the White House before its transformation into Mar a Largo north.

I am not an architect, just your average citizen. Thank you for your consideration.

Understanding that employees of the White House need space to work, understanding that presidential dinners and events need a space, understanding that there were many uses of the former East Wing- it is time to stop, think, and allow a VOTE on this in Congress. The East Wing of the White House should be restored to its condition before the demolition. No man, not even the President, has the unilateral right to make changes to the people's house. It's a historic landmark and a symbol of our national unity. Billing a ballroom that dwarfs the whole structure is absurd. I strongly oppose the building of a ballroom on the site of the East Wing of the White House. I think it should be restored to its former size and purpose. At $400,000,000, the cost is $4,444 per square foot which is obscene. While you're at it, the rose garden should also be restored. The few times a 999 person venue is needed the government can rent space at one of the many hotels and event venue's across the city.

To the National Capital Planning Commission:

As an American citizen and taxpayer, I am writing to provide feedback on the proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House. While I recognize the need for modernized event facilities, I urge the Commission to address the following three critical areas before final approval:

Historical Preservation & Scale: The newly released renderings suggest the ballroom's height (and substantial square footage) may compete with the historic 1792 Executive Residence. The Commission must ensure the addition remains subordinate in scale and that the redesign of the East Colonnade does not irrevocably damage the National Historic Landmark's integrity. I also think that the building should not be designed solely as a rarely used ballroom but, rather, should be a building that can be utilized in a number of ways such as meeting rooms, offices, etc.

Architectural Integrity: The neoclassical design should be evaluated for its long-term compatibility. Specifically, the integration of salvaged materials into a structure of this massive footprint requires rigorous oversight to prevent an appearance that diminishes the site's authenticity.

Transparency & Ethics: Because this project is privately funded, there is a heightened need for public disclosure regarding donors and long-term maintenance costs. The public interest is best served by total transparency regarding the influence behind this permanent addition to federal land.

I also would like the input of nonpartisan groups such as the White House Historical Association, National Trust for Historic Preservation and the Society of Architectural Historians to be given the utmost importance and respect.

I request that the Commission prioritize these substantive concerns during the March 5 hearing.

Thank you,
Christine Reid

I write in opposition to the planned ballroom.
First: I think the current plan is structurally too large to fit with the current White House.
More importantly: I think that a period of citizen and expert participation, to identify what the need for a ballroom is, if one is needed how large it should be whether it should be at the White House or somewhere else, and the appropriate decor for a democratic institution, is necessary. It should not be built to suit one person's ego or affinity for gilt, or devotion to feudal French fashion. I think several approaches should be vetted by a board of architects, historians, interior designers and engineers, a board appointed by actual merit not loyalty. Those different versions should have a comment period by citizens. Only then should any construction proceed.

I find what is being done to the white house to be not only disrespectful to its history but also a complete waste of time, money, and resources. I have no issue with updating buildings but for a historic building such as the white house it should be done in a way that preserves its history. This "renovation" was entirely unnecessary. The whitehouse belongs to the people, not the Trump administration. It should be up to the people of the US to vote on any renovation that would vastly affect it, including ones like ripping up the rose garden and dramatic aesthetic revamps.
While the people suffer in this country, struggling just to afford day-to-day life, our white house has been dressed like a pig in makeup, like a mockery to our struggles. The white house is a symbol of America, it should reflect us, not mock us.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

While I'm no architect, the renderings I've seen suggest that the addition will be way out of proportion to the rest of the structure, diminishing the iconic building Americans have come to know and love over the decades.

There may be a need for a large, ceremonial gathering space in Washington D.C., but if it could be located away from the White House, it could be used by all kinds of organizations -- possibly generating revenue for the government -- and not requiring all the security that's necessary with bringing hundreds of people onto the White House grounds.

Like most actions taken during the Trump administration, the destruction of the East Wing in favor of a ballroom is a solution in search of a problem that is also a grift. The White House is the people's house, it is not for the aggrandizement of a single individual, nor should it be used to host events so large and grandiose that they resemble 18th century France.

What Trump has done to the White House in general is ghastly: gold everywhere, bizarre signage, and an overall "Mara Lago-fication" of a vaunted part of our history. Not satisfied with making everything tacky and bizarre, he then decided to, without oversight, approved funding, or input from anyone else in the other two branches of government, let alone any citizens, completely destroy 1/3 of this building. It's a travesty, pure and simple. We don't need an enormous gold-encrusted ballroom. It doesn't serve our country or the goals we should have.

"Modernization" is Orwellian as a description, for sure. We could've modernized the East Wing with new plumbing, electrical, etc. Instead, we have a hole in the ground. Since we are now forced to build something, let's make it a functional part of our executive branch, one that will serve both the government and the people they serve. If a gigantic ballroom is somehow necessary to keep our country running, there must be a plot of land somewhere that's more appropriate, and not one dime of taxpayer money should go towards it.

I do not want this project approved. U.S. citizens have many needs, and a gigantic ballroom is not one of them. Even if initial construction might be paid for with private funding, taxpayers like me will have to pay for maintenance, security, and other unending expenses.

I strongly feel that anyone has the right to voice their objections to the White House renovations and I wholeheartedly do so. . The White House is not the property of any President. To destroy the historical Integrity of a graceful and dignified building in the way it has begun is an act of hubris without foundation. It may open the door for future Presidents to act similarly without impunity! Please prevent it from happening.

I am deeply concerned by the demolition of the East Wing of the White House and by the proposed construction of the "ballroom." It is clear that the normal process for making such profound changes has been circumvented. As we approach the 250th birthday of our republic, this is no time to forsake a process that considers the views of key stakeholders and the general public. From an aesthetic point of view, the scale of the proposed addition dwarfs one of the most important symbols of the United States (The White House, itself). All of the great monarches of Europe had grand, and sometimes gaudy ballrooms. This country is not a monarchy, and will never be one. We don't need architectural statements that reflect the whims of temporary leaders, no matter how narcissistic they may be. Let us preserve the principle that our national built symbols are to be stewarded, not remade by fiat.

It's hard to believe we have reached the point where a sitting president needs to be reined in from destroying our heritage. No president has the right to single-handedly tear down structures as iconic as the East Wing without full collaboration with NCPC and others. The pay-to-play aspect of the funding here also sets a terrible precedent. What have these funders been given in exchange? How much is Trump's cut?

Please consider the future if he is allowed to move forward with this tasteless project, as well as the Trump Arch.

It is a travesty that the East Wing was demolished without proper authority. At minimum, the act was mere vandalism. At worst, it violates the will of the PEOPLE, and all sense of collective democracy. Any "modernization" should be reestablish the East Wing as closely as possible to what was destroyed (allowing for modernizing meet current building codes), and nothing more. Certainly no ballroom or any other monument to a deranged traitor's ego.

I am not an architect, nor have I ever worked for any government building/planning department, but I do know that a signle individual, no matter who they may be should not be allowed to destroy a national/historical building that without input oversight from the appropriate entities. The final design should not overwhelm with its scale. The purpose of the Whitehouse should not become a grandiose glaring monument to one old man’s folly.

If it is determined that a larger ballroom is truly needed, building requirements for expanded kitchen and powder room facilities should also be incorporated.

The fact that the East Wing of the White House was torn down was just disgraceful and I would hope that there will be some accountability for it being done improperly to happen. So many emotions when this happened. Definitely angry that it was done, sad for all the history that was lost. Pissed off that a part of "the People's House" with zero regards to the citizens of the U.S.

The idea that a 90,000 sq foot ballroom that will dwarf the rest of the White House is ridiculous, unneeded and wasteful. Since it was torn down improperly in so many regards, I think it should be rebuilt as closely as possible to the original. As Michelle Obama stated that it was the heart of the White House and I feel that the White House needs that to balance the West Wing and all the heavy and serious things that take place there (well used to).

Disgraceful that it was originally being funded by bribes to the President. Where did all the money go now? Guess right into Trump's Qatari bank account. If this gets rebuilt in the future, taxpayers will have to fund this but I think since Trump had it torn down illegally, he should be made to foot the bill personally.

Sincerely

Christine C. Kae

The proposed East Wing project appears significantly out of proportion with the historic scale and architectural character of the White House. If additional entertainment or event space is genuinely necessary, it would be far more appropriate to locate it elsewhere. At present, I have not seen a compelling justification for a structure of this size or purpose.

The design itself resembles an oversized pseudo\u8209 -neoclassical addition that is inconsistent with the White House's established proportions and does not align with National Park Service preservation guidelines.

It also sends an unfortunate message at a time when essential health care programs are being reduced or cancelled for millions of Americans. The fact that private donations are being directed toward this project—funds that might otherwise support urgent public needs—reinforces the perception that national priorities are misaligned. It is not surprising that observers abroad view this as an ill\u8209 -considered national priority.

My first request for this modernization project is that Donald J Trump not be allowed any input at all. He showed disdain for our history, disdain for your processes, disdain for any input from us, and destroyed our building in the middle of the night to keep from having to hear our outcries.

I am not a designer or an architect. But I have full confidence that if this is placed in the hands of true Americans who care about our history and about the Democratic process, we will have something beautiful to replace what we have lost.

At the very least, this should not be some golden structure with Trump's name on it. It needs to not overcome the rest of our beautiful white house with its size, and it's facade should be in keeping with the rest of our house.

The East Wing of the White House should be rebuilt exactly as it was before and used for the same purposes, as office spaces for the first lady, etc. The White House does not need a ball room. This "president " has been extremely selfish, wanting to build a Versailles-style ballroom when the Amercan people are dying due ho lack of health care. The proposed ballroom will dwarf the current White House, and destroy the symmetry of the people's house. We are not France and have no desire to have a gilded ballroom. Both what this project is and how it has been done have been horrible. Tearing down the East Wing itself without any approval process was antithetical to Rule of Law and what the White House and our government should stand for. Autocrats around the world do this -- raise huge palaces as permanent memorials to their inflated egos. You can see them in Russia, North Korea, Belarus, Turkey, throughout Africa and Central Asia.
The latest renditions show a grotesque carbuncle, fully the size of the White House and West Wing combined, completely out of scale with the current central mansion, dressed out in faux-Beaux Arts trimmings. If ever built, we can expect it to have all the class and style of Trump Tower on Fifth Avenue (the monstrosity that replaced the Art Deco Bonwit Teller, a small gem).

Tearing down such a major part of the WH without previous input and approval is wrong on many levels. Historic preservation is important and should be a prime consideration. If modern updates to meet current codes are needed they can and should be done WITHOUT DESTROYING THE BUILDING.

I believe that the East Wing should be restored to what it was before it was destroyed. And those responsible should be made to pay (in cash!) for the destruction and restoration.

I think adding a provision that states any contractor doing work in the White House should obtain a permit that specifically states what is to be done . The Historic Preservation office should approve it . If the contractor doesn't follow the rules , then they are fined. Make it difficult or impossible for anyone contracting to do what trump has "ordered" to follow through without necessary approvals. Make all contractors tell the WH , they won't do anything without the permit.

The proposed White House Ballroom as it is currently designed is much too large and will forever ruin the aesthetics of the People's House. The interior design looks like something from an antique Eastern European palace or the Kremlin. If built it will become a white elephant, too large for most functions. Additionally, building such a large structure, intended for large scale VIP functions so close to an active roadway will make it an easy target for those who would do us harm.

For starters, you don't tear down the East Wing and then ask for permission to do so after the fact. Clearly the first plan was just the demolition of the old East Wing, with no filed and/or approved plans in place for the new complex. In that Donald Trump and his rich associates have done this, they need to fully foot the total demolition and reconstruction costs (based on current rebuilding costs), not based on promises, which is a typical Trump strategy. Beyond the actual costs of rebuilding the Wing, attention must also be addressed to the surrounding features (ie., landscaping, courtyards, walkways, outdoor meeting areas, etc.) which have been compromised. (Unfortunately, I don't fully trust that the handshake-binding 'promises made' in terms of reconstruction costs will be carried through. The only way to insure that will be the case will be to have each of these multi-millionaire donors enter into legally binding contracts on how much they will donate, when those funds will be forwarded to the project and what the terms are for their donations.). In my mind, not a dime of public monies should be used in this demolition/reconstruction project. They broke it and they need to fix it in full. (Future building maintenance and landscaping, would, of course be on the public's dime, but only after every last bit of reconstruction is in place.) In that the East Wing has been totally razed; I would suggest what I hear a number of other citizens offering in terms of advice. Reconstruct the East Wing to the specifications and dimensions of the original East Wing. (As the East Wing had been built as a complement - as a mirror image - to the West Wing.) The original East Wing was designed over the terms of multiple Presidential administrations with careful consideration. My suggested changes would be in the design of the current, state of the art electrical capabilities of the building, including current computer-friendly servers and computer infrastructure; modern insulation practices with the ceilings, walls, windows and doorways; follow current handicapped access requirements throughout; install state of the art plumbing improvements; and security issues such as hardening the building to withstand attacks, all new furnishings, drapes, etc., to replace those that have been destroyed and trashed; among a number of other important considerations as they present themselves. In terms of the plan to build a ball room, it is my understanding that the original East Wing had such a space, albeit smaller. Modernize that space. Building the huge Trump-inspired ballroom would ruin the symmetry and the balance of the original Capitol building complex. Encourage Trump and his buddies build a large ballroom elsewhere in Washington D.C., whose ownership is to be turned over to the United States and is not to be operated as a private entity.

To Whom it May Concern:

The White House, although it serves as the residence of the President of the United States, belongs to the people of the United States. It is not the personal property of the President (any President). To destroy part of this historic structure and replace it with a monument to one man's ego is an act of theft, a blatant violation of law and procedure, and an insult to every living and deceased citizen of the United States.

To allow this project to proceed is to entirely surrender yet another instance of what is supposed to be government of, by, and for the people, in favor of truckling to the monstrous narcissism of a single individual.

As an American voter, taxpayer, citizen and resident, I call for an immediate halt to this "modernization" and demand that Donald Trump personally repay any funds that have been expended so far, plus an amount sufficient for restoration of the historic East Wing.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Dear Committee,
I am not opposed to the building of a ballroom.

I object to the wanton destruction with no permission or oversight. The White House is a landmark.
A ballroom should have been placed elsewhere. No forethought was put to parking or access.
We are not Dubai, China, Japan or St Petersburg. We do not need imperial palaces.
Even the White House (I have toured it many times) has been defaced with the portrait gallery-hanging derogatory plaques of previous presidents; and the gaudy gold decorations placed, while erasing the history of the "People's House". A person with TEMPORARY RESIDENCE should NOT be able to make specifically arbitrary changes without checks and balances.
The destruction is done. Modernization and construction needs to occur as soon as possible. Yes, they need this-but forethought and planning should have occurred.
Please, do what is best for this landmark, the people, and democracy. Please exercise prudence with the price tag.
Respectfully,
Edie Reynolds

I absolutely am 100% against this destruction and desecration of the east wing. This is the people's house and the historic nature of it is a national treasure. Certainly electrical and plumbing updates might be needed and if historical experts and others believe that certain aesthetic or safety changes need to be done, so be it as long as it is done in the proper way. This ridiculous ego maniac believes he owns everything and can change at well. This is not true. I want the East wing restored as closely as possible to its original and I would like the bill sent to the Trump family.

While we're at it I want Jackie's rose garden restored. What has happened to our national treasures is horrible beyond words. I appreciate that now public comment is being allowed.

I am furious that the destruction of the East Wing of the White House was not done within proper protocols. Any other president that took such action would probably have been impeached. The ballroom plan sounds like another tasteless, over the top decorating project that President Trump appears to favor. A new wing should reflect the current architecture of the rest of the White House and should be in scale to the rest of the building. It should be completed AFTER Trump has left the White House.

The demolition of the East Wing destroyed the visual symmetry and the historical value of the wing. The East Wing was especially important to female visitors and as a place the First Lady used as a greeting area and her office. . Because the White House belongs to the people of the United States, no president should be allowed to make major changes to the structure without public input. Further, the construction of a large ballroom is not only unnecessary but also an affront to those who tour the building and see a grandiose room that reflects not the history of the building but instead the inappropriate influence of wealth and ego.
The East Wing should be rebuilt as it was before its destruction with the only changes being modernization to improve it. The appearance of the exterior should be exactly as it was before the unauthorized, shocking demolition of a part of our history. The people of the United States do not need an elaborate ballroom fit for a king that serves no purpose other than cementing the concept that the White House is for an elite class and not for the majority of citizens.
Thank you.

Please replace the East Wing with construction that restores a balanced visual presentation of the White House. An ostentatious oversized ballroom vanity project is an embarrassment and should be rejected. When a large ballroom size space is needed, a tent canopy could be extended over a plaza fronting an appropriately sized East Wing. When cover is not needed for special events, an outdoor plaza could be a welcoming place for the public to enjoy.

There are no circumstances under which we, the American people, need to see a diminished White House next to a garish Trump Ballroom. It is a moral and constitutional crime that the east wing was destroyed without governance by the Board. History was destroyed, it disrespected our past First Ladies and building a ballroom for Trump will FOREVER stain the aesthetic and historical impact of the White House. Every time we see it will cause anger and sorrow in most Americans.

It’s disgusting.

Furthermore, for people to be bribing Trump by donating to his ego project is an expansion of his grifting and influence peddling, and ill advised policies and direction he is taking this country. The White House and those within it should honor the history of the grounds and buildings.

Restore the east wing. Restore Jackie's rose garden.

Don't let trump do this disgusting, ego driven project…or build a stupid archway to honor him. He is an embarrassment to this country. History is going to rank him as worse than Hitler or Putin. The entire world is laughing at us, is angry at us and is disgusted by us. Do your part to stop his outrageous and demented impulses.

Dear NCPC:

As a citizen mindful of our country's history, I strongly object to the wanton destruction of the East Wing of the White House.

Not only is the building of invaluable historical significance, it's a symbol of our country. It means something to our people, and has stood intact since it was repaired after the War of 1812. No foreign enemy had damaged it in 213 years, but now it has been severely compromised from within.

The planned ballroom would be no less than a desecration of the People's House, in service of one man's unquenchable hubris. He has no right to do this to a building that belongs to all of us, NOT to him. He plans to erect a monstrosity that will have no relation to historical construction and will instead violate all principles of taste and elegance.

This ballroom project MUST be stopped, and the East Wing should be restored such that it's as close a copy of the original as possible.

Thank you.

The East Wing should be restored to its original 1902 condition. Certainly, any wiring, lighting or plumbing can be updated to the codes in place in 2026. The White House as a symbol represents all the people of the United States. Continuity of this symbol reassures pride in our nation. No one president can decide if he or she wants this symbol altered or destroyed. The president is a guest in the peoples' White House. Any changes to this historic symbol must reflect the sentiments of the people of the United States. The White House is not a palace...it should not be decorated with false gold or ballrooms. It should be "decorated' with the ideas that the American people value.... Self-government, freedom and the right to choose.

I ask as a citizen of the United States, that the East Wing of the White House be rebuilt and restored to a wing that reflects and complements the existing White House. Neoclassical style and sized to complement, not overpower, the main building.
The wing should be decorated in a classic, TASTEFUL style that shows dignity and respect for the creation and roots of our country.
Provisions must be added to the design to update wiring, plumbing and security. Provisions must be included to ensure the building is accessible to all citizens.
I do not agree that a ballroom is necessary for our country or government. However, if the country's CITIZENS feel that one is required. Our citizens should be expected to provide the funds so there is no expectation of favor from special interest providers.

First of all calling the proposed architect and design of the East Wing a "Modernization Project" is just not true like everything this man says. Allowing him to make a mockery of the history of the White House and all it represents is just wrong. He and his administration are trying to gut our Democracy and allowing him, as an avowed Authoritarian, to do this just plants himself squarely forever in our midst. The thought of this is just horrifying to me and so many I know as well. To have any lasting reminder of this incompetent, vicious, hateful, convicted felon, and misogynist is a slight to 90% of the people who live in this country. Additionally, a jury found Donald Trump liable Tuesday for sexually abusing advice columnist E. Jean Carroll in 1996, awarding her $5 million in a judgment. Jurors also found Trump liable for defaming Carroll over her allegations. Please, do now allow this horrible human being any kind of lasting tribute to himself. You must not approve this project. Instead, please appoint an architect to build the East Wing as a representation of our history and in line with the design and architect of how the White House looked in previous administrations. We, the people, do not want a Mar A Lago in our White House.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There are publicly available spaces that have been successfully secured and used for a wide-variety of executive office events. Continuation of that practice is a more prudent use of resources and space.

The White House, the People's House and was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a permanent resident; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint with careful attention to design details both interior and exterior that maintain the historical design aesthetic while bringing them up to modern code and technological specifications needed for state functions.

I am submitting this comment to express strong opposition to the proposed East Wing modernization project as currently described. The East Wing and surrounding grounds are not ordinary government office space—they are part of the historic fabric of the White House complex and represent decades of national heritage, including the long-standing offices of First Ladies and the historic landscape associated with the Rose Garden and adjacent structures.

Any project that alters these historically significant spaces should meet an exceptionally high standard of public justification, preservation review, and cost transparency. At a time when taxpayers face ongoing economic pressures, allocating substantial federal funds to large-scale structural changes that may compromise historical integrity raises serious concerns about fiscal responsibility and project prioritization.

I urge the Administration to pause further action until a full public accounting is provided, including:
1. A detailed cost-benefit analysis demonstrating the necessity of the project;
2. Independent historic-preservation impact assessments made available for public review;
3. Consideration of renovation or preservation-first alternatives that maintain the historic character of the East Wing complex.

The White House belongs to the American people, and stewardship of its historic spaces should emphasize preservation, transparency, and responsible use of taxpayer funds.

As a proud American citizen with great respect for preserving the past, I am registering my opposition to the proposed east wing modernization project aka Trump's Ballroom. With such a short history, the United States needs to protect and preserve as much as we can to document how this country has evolved and taken shape. The White House belongs to the people and not to any officeholder; we decide how this site should be protected.
I understand the need for updates to historic buildings and sites, but not the outright destruction of an American icon. If we need a ballroom, find a new site, but do not desecrate this sacred ground. We have already destroyed the east wing as we knew it and CANNOT allow any more destruction of "our" house and its property.

The ballroom proposed by Donald Trump is much too big to big to be an addition to the White House. If a ballroom is to be built it should match the dimensions of the West Wing and restore the symmetry that Trump destroyed when he ordered the destruction of the East Wing.
The financing of the repairs to the White House must not be controlled by Donald Trump because it will become another avenue of corruption for him. The current pledges of financial contributions look like simple bribery.

I respectfully urge that the rebuilding of the East Wing of the White House remain consistent with the historic scale, character, and architectural integrity of the existing structure and the broader White House complex. Any reconstruction should honor the original intent and visual continuity of this nationally significant site, ensuring that additions or modifications are harmonious rather than expansive or stylistically incongruous.

At the same time, it is both appropriate and necessary that the East Wing be brought fully into compliance with current safety standards and accessibility requirements, including ADA guidelines. Modernizing the building to ensure safety, inclusivity, and functionality is an essential responsibility and should be accomplished in a way that is sensitive to the historic context.

The East Wing has long served practical and ceremonial roles, including providing workspace for the Office of the First Spouse and associated staff. Any redesign should continue to accommodate these essential functions, ensuring that necessary offices and support spaces are included within the plan.

If event or gathering space is deemed necessary, it should be thoughtfully designed within the existing footprint of the East Wing. Such space should reflect restraint and dignity, avoiding unnecessary expansion or overly ornate features. The White House is a symbol of democratic governance and shared national heritage—it should not be treated or presented as a palace.

Above all, the White House belongs to the American people. Any changes to its structures should reflect stewardship, respect for history, and a commitment to preserving its character for future generations.

Thank you for your consideration.

My family and I are vehemently opposed to the construction of a massive ballroom at the White House. This is the people's house, using the people's money at the whim of a wealthy man in order to entertain wealthy heads of state, dignitaries, extremely wealthy CEOs and anyone else in his circle of millionaires and billionaires. All while the people struggle to pay for groceries, have lost their jobs because of doge and will continue to lose jobs to unregulated AI, struggle to pay for health insurance and a severe housing crisis. The very people who would utilize a ballroom, including the president, do not care at all about the American people or those of us struggling. The optics of this would look very, very bad.

The East Wing needs to be restored to what it once was, the Rose Garden restored and some semblance of normalcy conveyed. A ballroom is NOT a necessity and we insist that it not be built. It is a massive waste of money and will ruin the footprint and historical significance of the entire building.

The East Wing should be rebuilt to its appearance, purpose and size prior to the 2025 demolition. The ballroom project is projected to dwarf the actual White House in size, which seems inappropriate given the significance of the White House not only as the home of the President of the United States, but the significance the White House has had to the entire world.

The East Wing as it was before 2025 should be rebuilt and restored because of its function for the First Lady of the United States; because it housed the history of First Ladies of the United States, and because it has been part of American history and culture that should not be erased or displaced.

Further: No part of the White House should be privatized. It should be the people's house.

As an American citizen I consider the East Wing as partly mine. And it appalled me to the floor that MY president took it upon himself to willfully, illegally, and recklessly bulldoze down a part of MY history and heritage. He had no right to do it.
Do not, do NOT replace our East Wing with a monstrous, oversized, inappropriate and godawful "ballroom". Dance somewhere else, for heavens sake. We don't need a throne room in the United States (or at least we didn't used to…)
Now that the American taxpayer is going to be forced to pay to clean up this completely unnecessary mess that's been made, at the very least have the decency to build a quiet, sober, appropriately styled building to be used for the serious WORK of this country. And while you're at it, replant the rose garden.

The renderings for the new 'ballroom' at the White House is shockingly unattractive. It feels like the design ignored the historic character of the building entirely. It is far too large and ruins the iconic look of the building. In addition to size, you cannot count on what Trump finds pleasing in decorating a space (eg is the Oval Office). His taste runs closer to the Liberace era or Saudi Arabia on steroids.

Please don't let him ruin the White House. It would be ideal if it could be re-built to duplicate the previous East Wing as I'm not sure why we need a ballroom anyway.

I think he forgets it's the people's house.

Please save this building from his garish ideas.

If it is necessary to have additional event space and to also modernize an underground bunker the size should not overpower the White House. Trump does not have unilateral authority and should not have demolished the East Wing without approval from Congress. In addition, a detailed building plan should have been presented to and approved by Congress before any removal or construction started. Congress is losing its power and Trump needs to be stopped in his overwhelming defiance of Congress authority. The President does not own the White House nor its grounds, the citizens do. It would seem logical that Congress and its citizens would require Trump to personally pay for the destruction of our property. Our tax dollars are being wasted on vanity projects and illegal acts domestically and worldwide. Trump is grifting and adding to his personal wealth.

Also, it’s obvious that there will be some sort of bunker built below it. Please make sure it is state of the art so that further destruction is not needed. Also, NO NAMING PLAQUE ANYWHERE WITH THE WORD TRUMP. No hidden logos, etc.. It is not for any one president. It is for the office of the president.

Any changes or modifications to the White House must be approved first by a Historical Commission as well as an architectural design committee and finally reviewed and approved by congressional majority votes. This regime has bypassed all of these requirements, simply demolishing a beloved piece of history, with the plan to erect a huge monument to the current so called president.

This is wrong. The destroyed East Wing cannot be replicated, but a close facsimile should be built—not some gargantuan gilded ostentatious monstrosity that isn't even needed.

According to the statutes, Trump does not have the authority to tear down and build a new east wing to the White House.. especially, as he did not seek proper authorization for this project. he is violating the law and the spirit of the law. Since the east wing has already been demolished, it needs to be rebuilt, utilizing current building codes. the White House does not need a "grand" ballroom that is 900,000 square feet. and since he demolished it illegally, he should be made to pay for the rebuilding using his own funds, the US government, or rather, the people's monies.

Thank you for the opportunity to submit a written comment. I appreciate the case being made for the need for a modern and secure facility. I have two questions which I hope will be addressed in future meetings as more details on the project are made public.
First, what is the current capacity of the East ballroom in the existing White House and what is the frequency of events annually that exceed that capacity currently?
Second, it appears that the First Lady's officers are relegated to a single corridor directly opposite an expansive commercial kitchen. How well will these functions be isolated from one and another? How will the First Lady's office suite reflect her social and professional status when it's across the hall from the kitchen?

The current design is wholly disproportionate to the White House, and appears to be another office building. The White House is not an imperial mansion (by design). It is supposed to be a home representative of a democratic leader, not an autocratic one. Any addition must be smaller and lower in height to the existing White House.

There has been insufficient investigation by the White House over alternatives to building a new ballroom. The mansion is linking to several nearby buildings. The White House also has a tunnel to the Treasury Building. U.S. Treasury Building houses the Cash Room. Located in the north wing and completed in 1869, this two-story, 72-foot by 32-foot room features marble walls, a gold-leaf ceiling, and a cast-bronze balcony. It originally served as a public banking space and now serves as a ceremonial meeting room. This is more than sufficient to host any ball. The Indian Treaty Room in the adjacent Eisenhower Executive Office Building (EEOB), formerly the Navy Department Library, is a large, historically significant, two-story room measuring approximately 30 by 40 feet.

Rebuild the former East Wing in the same style and scale as it was, but install functional updates that bring it up to code/modern standards that may not have been possible in the former structure. Decor should be timeless and tasteful—no gold. Restore the Rose Garden to its former beauty and splendor. If a full-scale ballroom is necessary, build it elsewhere in the city.

Renovations to the White House have occurred over its life time. However, this renovation is different in scale. It does not seem like an historic renovation. The precedent of more formal review set by previous presidents wasn’t followed, disrespectful of the American people. Additionally, the United States could better use the resources now needed to restore the East Wing.

Since the White House is the "people’s house," the people should have had a say in any major changes. The president is just a custodian of the people's house when they are there. Rebuilding of the East Wing must be done carefully to preserve every element of history. The White House must be preserved as a working house, not a party house, not a palace.

To the Members of the National Capital Planning Commission:

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposal to demolish the East Wing of the White House in order to construct a 90,000-square-foot ballroom.

The White House is not simply a residence or event venue; it is a living symbol of American democracy and an irreplaceable historic landmark. Each architectural addition and modification reflects a chapter of our nation's history. The East Wing, though more modest than other portions of the complex, plays an important functional and historical role within the White House grounds. Its demolition would permanently alter the integrity and balance of one of the most recognizable civic spaces in the world.

While expanding event capacity may serve practical purposes, such goals should not come at the expense of historic preservation. Large-scale new construction on this footprint risks disrupting the architectural harmony, landscape design, and symbolic character of the Executive Mansion and its surrounding grounds.

I respectfully urge the Commission to prioritize preservation, explore alternatives that do not require demolition of existing historic structures, and uphold its responsibility to safeguard the long-term integrity of the White House for future generations.

Thank you for considering my comments.

Sincerely,
Kerry Parish-Philp

Whatever goes up in place of the East Wing, it should be in keeping with the aesthetics and history and scale of the rest of the White House. The current plan proposed by Trump is way too large and grandiose. It is meant to serve his ego, rather than the citizens of this country. And the fact that it is funded by private donors makes it that much less appropriate for a democracy. Plans should be drawn up by historic preservationists who set humility and simplicity above ostentatiousness.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby.
The White House is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
The occupant of The White House works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. The occupant should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure, with current ADA and security upgrades.

unheard of from prior residents of this building. Any new construction should be proportionate in size and architectural design to the current structure.

I think that the appropriate course of action would be to restore the office space and meetings rooms that were removed. A updated space for the offices of the First Lady would be appropriate . Further consideration of the need and design of an appropriate public space for presidents to entertain foreign dignitaries, including public comments and review should be done. Perhaps this could occur as part of the renovations for the Kennedy Center.

Hello,

As a citizen of the United States and as a Historic Preservationist, I wish to register my concerns over the proposed addition of a 90,000 square-foot appendage to the White House. The White House is called the People's House for a reason; it is the hearth and heart of this nation and its people. Any proposed undertaking that could negatively impact such an important historic resource should be considered carefully and through a rigorous, due process that is inclusive of many (if not all) voices and perspectives.

Firstly, the demolition of the historic East Wing was undertaken without proper regulatory oversight and in haste. The 17-page Environmental Assessment (EA) that granted permission for wholesale demolition was a mockery of the Section 106 and Section 110 processes that law-abiding citizens have been undertaking as part of the regulatory oversight process since 1966. Fleeting administrations do not own the White House; they steward it for generations to come. Good administrations steward priceless resources like the People's House carefully, thoughtfully, and understanding that minimizing impact to such an important symbol of the United States of America is in everyone's best interest. I do not think an addition the scale of which would overshadow the original is an example of good stewardship. It doesn't even adhere to the Secretary of Interior's Standards for new construction to historic resources. I hope, since the powers that have oversight failed the American people when it came to the demolition of the East Wing, step up this time and safeguard the review process, so that when a new East Wing is constructed, it is compatible and harmonious with the original, sacred building.

Thank you.

A new permanent, secure, flexible event space that holds up to 1000 guests has been needed at the White House complex for decades. The largest event space in the Executive Mansion is the East Room which is ca. 3,000 square feet and holds a maximum of 200 guests. During the past 20 years, events at the White House hosting more than 200 guests have been held in temporary tents erected on the South Lawn with mobile catering setups and portable toilets provided for the guests. This sort of makeshift arrangement is quite unacceptable since the erection of the tents and their removal for each use are both time consuming and expensive, as is the use of mobile catering units. The tents damage the South Lawn adding another expense for resodding the grass. The use of portable toilets, while necessary, seems beneath the image that the White House should present whenever VIP guests are being entertained. As an American citizen, I find this whole temporary system degrading and embarrassing.

The East Wing Modernization Project should include on the upper story a new flexible event space (aka 'ballroom') which can seat up to 1000 guests. There should be a proper professional catering kitchen, storage closets for event furnishings (table rounds, chairs, linens, etc.) a secure cloak room and beautiful bathrooms/powder rooms for the guests to use. There must also be security features and easily accessible fire escapes so that the event area can be evacuated rapidly and safely. The building must also be fully ADA compliant. Use the lower story of the building for offices for the First Lady and other important event related staff. The building, however, should not be so large that it dwarfs the Executive Mansion in any way. The building footprint must not go beyond the existing circle pathway. Period.

I think the rebuilding should reflect what was there before with improvements to safety, infrastructure, and usage. It should not overshadow the rest of the building and grounds it will stand upon. Perhaps the ballroom should be built in another part of Washington D. C. so its size will not overshadow the current structure. Hopefully it would not take design advise from the current administration since it will be here long after they are gone. A noble building yes, but not one that looks better suited to a palace setting. Magestic and simple, please. Plus it shouldn't not be named after a living person. Thanks you for your consideration.

My major concerns are 2-fold:
1) That the new ballroom will in no way or sufficiently be architecturally congruent with the historic White House, & grounds, as it should be;

2) & perhaps of utmost importance: doubling its size will make it exponentially more difficult to secure!! Twice or 3x as many guests will also require that many more servers, butlers, etc., & vetting & ensuring both staff & guests prior to events, as well as, in the moment upon entry to the EastWing event, will become an absolute Security Nightmare, regardless of any perceived new security measures & equipment installed.

This is a benighted project!

First of all, thank you for getting "involved" with this project. Maybe I misunderstand your purpose, but wasn't the current administration supposed to consult with you BEFORE totally tearing down the East Wing (and its history)? That, in itself, is a travesty in my book. I was lead to believe, that this was supposed to be a "modernization", not total rebuilding. But that is water that's already passed under the bridge. Additionally, the proposed 90,000 sq. ft size is WAY out of proportion (almost twice) to the 50,000 sq. ft size of the main residence and in my mind would look ridiculous next to the main building. This is sounding more like a vanity project for one man, rather than "let's bring it up-to-date" kind of project.

I also have concerns about how much control this Commission actually has, considering the current administrations' documented history of playing fast and loose with Constitutional law and regulations. I'm hoping there are enough Commissioners on the correct side of the Constitution to direct an architecturally and period correct rebuilding of the East Wing.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this project...

I oppose the current plan for enlarging the east wing of the White House. I believe that the president's house should not be grandiose, but a reflection of the diversity and culture of the USA. It should not permanently reflect the tastes of just one man. If the president wishes to decorate his personal spaces in a grandiose style, that is his perogative. But the White House is not his personal space. It belongs to the people of the United States and should be reflective of that. The president should take this into consideration when renovating any portion of the White House. It was never meant to be a palace.

Since the East Wing has been destroyed, I think that a ballroom addition would be useful. I have faith that the NCPC will develop an appropriate plan. But, do not, I repeat do not let Trump take over and dominate the project. I have seen his decorating style. His style is (IMO) not appropriate for the White House. Also, I feel that the project should be paid for with the “people’s money”. Private equity in this project would not be acceptable.

The sudden teardown of the historic East Wing with little planning was, frankly, heartbreaking. (Same for the Rose Garden).
Any new construction must be proportional to the original buildings. If ballroom space is indeed an issue, this can be accomplished by clever architects and design so that a new wing blends properly with the original buildings.
Thank you so much for providing the space for comments.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service.

Public input should occur before construction makes the outcome irreversible.

Federal property does not belong to any president. The design should include public and federal staff guidance to ensure that any new construction abides by federal preservation guidelines.

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed East Wing Modernization Project, including the construction of a 90,000\u8209 -square\u8209 -foot ballroom addition to the White House complex.

This proposal raises serious concerns under multiple federal preservation, environmental, and planning frameworks:
1. The scale of the project is excessive and inconsistent with federal preservation standards. A 90,000\u8209 -square\u8209 -foot ballroom is incompatible with the historic character of the White House grounds, which are protected as a National Historic Landmark. Under the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties, new additions must be "compatible with the historic materials, features, size, scale, and proportion" of the existing resource (36 C.F.R. § 68.3). This proposal clearly fails that requirement.
2. The project continues a pattern of alterations that have already harmed historic spaces. The recent redesign of the Rose Garden and changes to the East Wing have diminished the historic integrity of these areas. Under Section 110(f) of the National Historic Preservation Act (54 U.S.C. § 306107), federal agencies must "minimize harm" to National Historic Landmarks. This project does the opposite, compounding previous damage.
3. The White House is a public institution, not private property. As a National Historic Landmark and the seat of the Executive Branch, the White House belongs to the American people. Major alterations must be approached with transparency, restraint, and respect for its national significance — not treated as private real\u8209 -estate expansion.
4. The funding sources for this project must be fully disclosed. Under the National Environmental Policy Act (42 U.S.C. § 4332), the public is entitled to understand the context, assumptions, and potential influences behind federal actions. This includes identifying funding sources, donors, and any associated expectations. Transparency is essential to maintaining public trust.
5. The proposal lacks a demonstrated public purpose. Federal preservation law requires agencies to justify adverse effects on historic properties and to consider alternatives that avoid or reduce harm (36 C.F.R. § 800.1–800.6). No compelling public need has been articulated that would justify such a large and intrusive addition.
6. The project poses avoidable environmental impacts. The White House grounds are a mature cultural landscape with limited ecological resilience. Large\u8209 -scale excavation and construction threaten historic plantings, soil stability, stormwater patterns, and the remaining biodiversity of the South and East Grounds. NEPA requires federal agencies to consider less\u8209 -damaging alternatives and to avoid unnecessary environmental degradation (42 U.S.C. § 4331(b)). This proposal does not meet that standard.
7. The project risks unnecessary security overreach. Major expansions of the White House complex often trigger additional permanent security perimeters, restricted zones, and hardened infrastructure. These changes can further limit public access to the nation's most symbolic civic space. Security needs must be balanced with the White House's role as a public institution — not used as a blanket justification for unchecked expansion.
8. The project sets a dangerous precedent for future administrations. Approving a 90,000\u8209 -square\u8209 -foot addition opens the door to future expansions that could permanently alter the White House beyond recognition. The NCPC's role includes preventing precedent\u8209 -setting actions that undermine the historic, civic, and symbolic integrity of the nation's capital. Allowing this project would erode that responsibility.
For all these reasons, I urge the Commission to reject the ballroom addition and require a preservation\u8209 -focused, environmentally responsible, and publicly accountable approach to any future modernization efforts. The White House should be protected — not expanded beyond recognition.
Respectfully submitted,

I am opposed to the East Wing Modernization Project - The Ballroom. The structure is unnecessary and I'm very concerned about how it's being funded. Looks to me like it's being funded by friends of President Trump, who he has not named. Smacks of bribery to me! The White House is on the National Register of Historic Buildings, their input and approval is needed before any renovation/tear down is considered. This was not done. The new ballroom is way too big for the building it's attached to proportionally. President Trump does not own The White House, the American people do. He had no right to make such a major change without consulting The Historical Society and Congress! Please stop the building of this monstrosity!

I believe the East Wing should be restored according to the original plans with current codes and accessibility features incorporated. The decor should be appropriate for the original design of the White House , the People's House. The Rose Garden established by Jackie Kennedy should be restored and the tacky gold embellishments should be removed. All Presidents' portraits should be displayed without the disgusting plaques beneath them. The gold does not fit in with the history and character of our White House as it was established. If a ballroom is needed, it can be constructed at a different location, or use one of many more appropriate locations within the D.C. area. All renovations should, and must, go through the procedures already established.

Please restore the East Wing with dimensions in keeping with the historical scale and architectural style of the White House! Please follow the precedent and processes for making needed(not wants of the sitting president) but historically sensitive changes. Adding a ballroom and changing the architectural significance of the White House should not be done in a whim. If a ballroom is needed please consider this could be built elsewhere. Our president and all future Presidents should be made aware this is not their position, but temporary living arrangement for their term of office. Any and all changes must go through the correct process to make even small changes. If we keep chipping away wings, rooms, offices and other parts of the White House, the historical appearance and integrity of the building as a whole will no longer be recognizable as The White House of the United States. The many historical events that have occurred in that most prized building, the people's house, The White House will be lost. Please make sure any addition does not dwarf the architectural design of the White House.
Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this very important matter concerning our White House East Wing destruction, construction and integrity to our American History. Dolly Madison saved some of our history and now We the People want to do the same.

I oppose the building of the 90,000 sq ft ballroom. It is disproportionate to the rest of the White House, poorly designed, and lacks credible architectural and regulatory input. It simply is a vanity project for Trump. If such a space is truly needed, it could be built elsewhere in the District as a freestanding structure—with appropriate reviews and approvals.

My heart broke when I saw that the East Wing and all of its' history had been destroyed without any heads-up to We the People. All of that history, all of the unbelievable moments that we shared with our Presidents and First Ladies as well as the honored guests that walked the corridors of the East Wing, gone, destroyed, eviserated without any coordination required before it was accomplished. Why? For what reason?

It appears to be that it was destroyed for the current president to build a bigger building he could put his name on it as he did on the Kennedy Center. It was the old, "…easier to ask for forgiveness instead of permission". The destruction came as an unbelievable action of a huge insecure ego and such an action can never ever be forgiven. History will not report such destruction positively. It is/was an assault to the history that the East Wing held in the Whitehouse history, the history of the United States, and another black mark on the history of the current administration.

Replace the East Wing according to original form with updates according to current building requirements re plumbing, electric/gas, insulation, building materials, etc. Restore the balance of the original Whitehouse and restore its' original name, the East Wing.

Shame on the destroyers. History will register your names. Names to be spit on.

Public process is important, especially for these national treasures.
The East Wing should never have been demolished. This tragic disregard for such an honored public space disqualifies the current occupant of the White House from conducting ANY further modifications.
However the planning process can begin. Starting with a complete survey and analysis of the White House grounds and structures. Next should be a legitimate needs assessment. Not the needs or preferences of one individual, but the needs of future presidents and employees.

I strongly object to the construction of proposed ball room at the White House. As proposed, it is an esthetical aberration worthy of Donald Trump's esthetics. The White House, the People's House in the United States does not need to (or should) look like something an XVIII century French king would believe befits his importance. Instead of simplicity, elegance, welcoming embrace of celebrating important events, that pompous abomination of marble, gold, and cut crystal will serve to remind attendees at future events how low the US of A fell fell during Mr. Trump's presidency.

In addition, the proposed ballroom will dwarf the profile of the White House. It truly will signal strongly that this project is an ego-driven whimsy that will cost millions and provide little.

Never have I commented on a federal construction project; I’ve never assumed I knew more than those proposing construction projects and have appreciated that those doing so would have the integrity, intelligence, historical knowledge and competence to understand the nuances and effects their proposed projects would have.
Seeing the entire East Wing of the White House demolished without batting an eyelash, President Trump has demonstrated that he has none of the above qualities. His actions are those of a spoiled two-year old. He wants something, and insists on his way - or throws a tantrum if he doesn’t get it.
The American public - as well as the National Capital Planning Commission - can only react at this point. The East Wing of “the people’s house” is gone, bulldozed into a pile of rubble. How tragic and sad for the annals of American history and its architecture.

I would propose restoring the East Wing to its former footprint with the new exterior space matching what was destroyed. The inside can be reconfigured to provide sufficient event space - to match the other interior designs of the first floor; gold is not necessary nor very esthetically pleasing. Private donors nor the current president should not be consulted as "designers." Let those from this commission or its designees make such decisions about the interior look of the new East Wing with regard to historical continuity. In my opinion, a gold palatial-look is not pleasing nor historically accurate.

Thank you for reading and considering my comments.

To Whom It May Concern,

The unilateral destruction of the East Wing of the White House represents an egregious violation of both law and public trust. The White House, including its East Wing, is not the private property of any temporary occupant, it is a registered historic monument and national park, held in trust for the American people. Its preservation is protected by federal statute, and any alteration or demolition requires strict adherence to preservation laws, review by the National Park Service, and approval from the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation. None of these processes were followed.

The decision by this administration to demolish a portion of this irreplaceable structure without due process is a direct affront to the rule of law and the nation's shared heritage. The East Wing has stood for generations as a symbol of continuity, service, and the people's access to their government. To destroy it without authorization is to disregard the collective ownership and stewardship responsibilities that define democratic governance.

If a ballroom or event space of such scale was genuinely required, ample alternatives existed. The National Capital Planning Commission and the General Services Administration routinely identify suitable federal properties for temporary or permanent construction. Expanding or constructing a new facility elsewhere on federal grounds, or even off-site, would have met logistical needs without desecrating a protected landmark.

This administration's unilateral act demands immediate investigation, restoration of the damaged structure, and the establishment of safeguards to prevent any future unilateral alterations to national heritage sites. The White House stands not as a personal residence but as a symbol of the Republic itself. Its integrity cannot be compromised by the whims of any individual, regardless of his office.

In sum, the unauthorized destruction of the East Wing is an act of cultural vandalism and legal defiance. The American people are the rightful stewards of their historic institutions, and those entrusted with their care must be held to the highest standard of accountability.

Why was the resident of our White House not stopped before he demolished the east wing?
Everyone knew he was going to do it yet only now is this being addressed. He said publicly he did not have permits. He would get them after the demo began. The White House does not need a ballroom to satisfy the presidents ego. Whatever is happening now must be stopped. The president needs to be responsible to build it back in better condition. The funds need to come out of his personal money and his donors not taxpayer dollars. Anything that's done going forward needs to be monitored in a timely manner to stop him. To the National Capital Planning Commission,

I strongly believe the East Wing needs to be rebuilt with the exterior to look as similar to the original structure as possible, including the same architecture style and scale, with the understanding that some aspects may need to change to bring the structure up to modern building code (doorways may need to be widened, windows may need to be lowered, etc.). It should fit approximately within the original footprint and retain approximately the same height. The interior should be remodeled to ensure that it is ADA compliant with full wheelchair access and other components required to address a variety of disabilities, such as FM loops for the hearing impaired in applicable areas, etc. Likewise, the interior may be remodeled to fit current needs for office space, bathrooms, etc. If the determination is made that a ballroom is required within the East Wing, it should not encroach on any office space required for any department or work previously assigned to the East Wing, unless alternate office space is provided elsewhere within the immediate vicinity. The architecture details and decor should remain similar to the original structure and should NOT be decked out with gold leaf everywhere. Landscaping should also be similar to what was around the previous structure.

Furthermore, I vehemently believe that, under NO CIRCUMSTANCES, should Trump's name appear anywhere on the structure, either by signage on/near the structure, or even by name in paper documents (e.g., referring to it as "Trump's East Wing" or the "Donald Trump East Wing"). He took it upon himself to destroy a vital and culturally-significant structure that is important to our history, in blatant disregard to the National Environmental Policy Act and other laws surrounding historic buildings, as well as recommendations and past-practice of the National Capital Planning Commission, and there is absolutely no way that he deserves to have his name associated with a reconstructed East Wing.

Thank you for considering my written statement of public comment in your decision making process.

Sincerely,
Shannon Schwerdtfeger

To maintain the character of our capital city, the White House needs to be a part of the existing architecture… that would preclude attaching a 2-story ballroom that overwhelms the existing structure.

It turns the People's House into a palace.
If there is an addition, it should fit with the current architecture.

It seems our current president is trying to build monuments to himself.

I believe that the White House belongs to ALL Americans. Changing, demolishing or adding anything should be something citizens have a say in. I feel that the building should be restored to its original state. No President has the right to make such drastic changes without the consent of the people. Modernizing this structure should not encompass demolishing an entire section of the building. The history of this building should remain. There are castles in Europe that have remained as they were and were maintained or preserved. There is no excuse to do this without proper authority from the citizens of our country who pay our taxes. This is a wasteful project that could help secure so much more for the citizens who would never benefit from a ballroom. There is nothing wrong with the spaces currently available inside the White House. As a natural born citizen I demand that this project not be allowed to move forward as intended. I believe this building should be rebuilt to its existing plan and intention. The history that was destroyed from all the prior First Ladies who has ther offices in this section is a great loss to our history.

I am writing regarding project 8733.
While I appreciate the opportunity to comment, I'd like to first state on record that this administration destroyed part of the People's House, the White House, the place President Lincoln and other past presidents lay in state, destroyed the holder of OUR history prior to today, without the legally required steps to change the building, and has developed a plan to remodel without respect to the history and actual owners of the building, and excluding the proper involvement of the management of the OUR house, the National Park Service. The destruction of OUR house and OUR history is unacceptable. It is absolutely vital that the National Park Service take on the planning of the replacement, and that the current plan be scrapped for these reasons: The purposes for this space are not designed to serve the people of our country, and call into question whether this is a space designed to actually undermine our democracy. At a minimum the details and uses are designed to glorify a single man's idea of grandeur and power and do not reflect a respect and harmony with the rest of OUR house. The exterior of the building is too big and is not architecturally designed to be in balance with the rest of the exterior of the building. The cost to US, as owners of this house, in taxpayer funding, are completely insane and were never agreed to by Congress, OUR representatives. No public bidding has happened to make the construction component fairly offered. This project needs to come to a dead stop, the process needs to follow ALL of the steps involved for design, proposal, review, bidding and approval, and Congress needs to agree that any security details including data centers proposed are not able to be leveraged by a person with aims to overthrow our laws. To summarize, OUR house should be preserved or revised using the processes that exist to protect the American public's interest and ownership.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment. Although it is too late to preserve what was there, it is not too late to turn this disaster back onto a better course.

I am vehemently opposed to this proposed ballroom in place of the already torn down East Wing of the White House. It is a disgusting use of money and a terrible optic after laying off thousands of workers in the federal government and accusing them of being lazy, to then wasting money on this unnecessary project.

1) First of all, President Trump had no right to tear down an entire wing of the White House, the people's house, without first getting approval from your organization. I'm sure that's why he didn't, as he knew he wouldn't get it. How he had the gall to literally bring in construction equipment and knock down our own history is beyond my comprehension.

2) Secondly, we do not need an opulent ballroom. Why is this necessary? In our current economic times, I don't care who is donating the money, these funds could be used for more pressing concerns, like enhancing and preserving some of our other national parks that are in need. Why do we need another thing Trump can put his name on? Disgusting.

3) Thirdly, the current design is outrageous. Even if I believed the argument that we "need" a ballroom, the current design will dwarf the White House and ruin its aesthetic beauty. Let's listen to the architects who have resigned (I wonder why) because they have artistic and historical integrity and cannot ignore the fact that this is an awful design. Surely, if one can prove we actually NEED a ballroom, which I disagree with, surely it can be built with more common sense and a tasteful design that would blend it in naturally on to the current White House - perhaps it could be designed lower into the ground so it wouldn't be so large or high?

I would vote for forcing the current administration to rebuild the old wing it destroyed in its entirety, using those funds it collected. President Trump should be BILLED for the entire cost of tearing this historical wing down and forced to rebuild it. He should also be censured somehow for just going ahead and doing whatever he wanted with no consideration at all for the country. This is all about him - he doesn't OWN the White House. Everyone gets a chance to redecorate - sure - not tear down entire WINGS because he wants a building for himself. I am nauseated just writing this comment and I sure hope you are listening to the people on this one.

The White House is iconic. It is a historic structure that has served as a central point of focus in our country for two hundred years and that continues to be perfectly useful in its current configuration. Nothing should be built that overwhelms or even intrudes upon the architectural/visual centrality of the original building.

That is the general rule that should be followed in this case. With respect to the particular proposal to build a ballroom, the size overwhelms the White House and will both reduce the visual significance of the historic building and will throw the entire executive office complex out of balance. While I disagree that the president needs a ballroom at all, that boat seems to have sailed. That being the case, the structure should be reduced in size by two-thirds and should be relatively short—perhaps sunken into the ground-to allow the White House, itself to be most prominent.

The east wing should be restored, with modern utility updates, to its previous exterior appearance. The rooms within the building could be ballroom or office space, but the exterior should revert to the original design making it symmetric with the west wing. The bunker below the building should be built to recognized security standards.
Plans should include notice that any contractors doing work not authorized by these plans (such as those contractors that tore down the east wing) will be sued and held liable.

The project to "modernize" the East Wing should not involve building an addition out of proportion to the rest of this historic building. It should also avoid tacky gold ornamentation. All interior and external design should fit the era of the existing White House. If it is not entirely funded by private citizens, it should not be rebuilt at all, and all donors need to be publicly disclosed.

In my opinion, Mr. Trump is only about serving himself. Without regards to rules or standards he destroyed a part of our history. If upgrades were needed in the East Wing he should have gone thru the accepted procedures and submitted his plans for review. I truly believe he thinks he can do anything he wants, whenever he wants. He is wrong. His over lords (Heritage Foundation) rule thru him. He and they must be stopped from any further destruction in the Country.

I am grateful to have the opportunity to submit a comment about the destruction of OUR beloved East Wing & the proposal to erect an immense & gaudy ballroom in its place. We the people had no such opportunity to have our say before the wrecking ball destroyed OUR East Wing & it is hard to describe the physical sense of assault & deep sadness that I felt when I first saw photographs of that havoc.

No, the established guidelines were not followed. He had no right. I am incensed. But then I am incensed almost daily at the ongoing march of actions that Trump has no right to take & blithely takes anyway.

Just as bad, this new ballroom is a monstrosity. It's ugly, gaudy, unbefitting as a project when so many people are in deep need of assistance, & unbefitting as the representation of a democractic nation.

Please halt this horrible mistake.

It has been obvious for many years that the East Wing of the Whitehouse was woefully inadequate for hosting presidential events, however the destruction of this historic structure was and is wrong on so many levels!! Historic buildings deserve our protection and careful and detailed deliberations before they are altered. No one should be above the law. The blatant disregard of process is stunning and should not be allowed to stand. While some will argue, "What's done is done" there should be no rewarding this behavior! Let the spot stay empty until proper planning and process is followed. Prosecute this criminal behavior, all the way to the top.

The East Wing of OUR house should be restored to its original dimensions, consistent with the style and presentation of the contiguous portion and harmonious with the West Wing. Exterior decoration should be modest and respectful. The gardens should be restored to reflect their historic design and function.

Internal systems should be modernized and enhanced in a reasonable manner to take advantage of energy-efficient advances, particularly with improvements to HVAC, insulation, etc.

Internal decoration should be tasteful, avoiding self-aggrandizing displays.

The wing should be built to resemble its previous appearance prior to it being demolished. If Congress decides that taxpayer money should be used to include a large meeting space, perhaps that space could be built underground. An underground ballroom that could double as a security area would be beneficial considering the world dignitaries that will frequent it. With modern technology the ballroom could be equipped with virtual windows connected to cameras on the exterior of the White House. Perhaps some of the amazing technology used in Las Vegas (The Sphere) could be used here as well, but on the inside of the building. Imagine the virtual walls described in Fahrenheit 451.

Greetings!
As an American, I am horrified by the wanton destruction of our historic buildings by the Trump administration. Equally horrifying is the shocking waste of taxpayer money in his endeavor to leave his mark. Truly, at this point in time, I'm not really convinced the east wing needs to be rebuilt at all. Maybe in the future when sanity has retuned to our government and everyday Americans can afford to live here. IF the east wing must be rebuilt, I am firmly opposed to its dimensions being enlarged from what it was previously. It should remain "The People's Wing": same size, same decor, no "upgrades". The PEOC does not need upgrades either.
Thank you for your time and consideration.

The White House is the People's House -- belonging to the American people for over 200 years. The White House doesn't belong to a single president and should not be subject to their whims. It is a travesty that the demolition of the East Wing took place, even more so given that there was no advance notice and no meaningful opportunity for input from professionals like historic preservation experts and architects.

While tragically the East Wing cannot be restored as it was, any further action must respect that the White House is the People's House. Any proposed work should be carefully and thoughtfully collaborated on with historic preservation experts, undertaking a thorough review, including potential impacts to the grounds, character, and history of the White House. Transparency, preservation, and design excellence must be top values -- all of which were sorely lacking when the demolition of the East Wing took place.

As a United States citizen who cares about our collective history, memory, and national buildings like the White House, I urge you to never make a mistake like the unexpected and uncalled-for demolition of the East Wing again, and to do what is in the best interest of the American people as a whole.

Additions to historic properties must respect their historic scale and design, and be subordinate to the original structure(s). At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would almost double the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence, making it incompatible in scale. The White House as it currently appears is an iconic image that has symbolic meaning to the American people. The destruction of this image should not be allowed.

Furthermore, plans to replace the East Wing should have been submitted and approved BEFORE the East Wing was destroyed. The President who directed this circumnavigation of the law should be held personally accountable for failing to follow the law.

There is no demonstrated or proven need for such a large venue. The city itself has many meeting areas capable of serving the capacity the President says he needs. In addition, this is being built over a sensitive bunker. Prior approval of size, style, need, has not been done, and this project should be stopped, with a new East Wing to be developed in line with the design and size of the current White House. This is the people's house, and present protocols and procedures that exist to protect it should be followedl Audacity has defined the current presidency. As regards construction & renovation, it amounts to audacity both in design sensibilities and in self-importance, sense of personal ownership, and flouting of norms and dignity. This trait of the president's needs to be tempered by a thoughtful re-scaling of the East Wing proposal, (since we now have no choice but to do SOMETHING, given the demolition that has already, disrespectfully, taken place.

The new wing's event space is reportedly needed, but the size has become ridiculous. It should be right-sized (diminished in size), with the participation of architects who respect the history of the White House, and as the introductory statement by NCPC stated, to keep the emphasis on the main White House building. The new East Wing should be stately and dignified, and decorated with as little gold gilt as possible!

I object to the size of the ballroom. At 90,000 sq feet it will be oversized as compared to the rest of the White House. 20,000 to 40,000 should be more than enough room for gatherings, and official events. Bigger is not always better… this project should not overwhelm the rest of the site. The ballroom style and size should be in keeping with the previous buildings.

I assume this is for comments regarding the ballroom President Trump intends to bill on White House grounds.
Having never attended a formal event at the White House, it would still be easy to believe that an updated, somewhat larger space may be needed for this type of entertaining by our government.
But after watching how President Trump has turned the White House into a version of an imperial palace or the Tajma Hall with absolutely no sense of American history, I have to wonder if the ballroom scope and scale he is planning isn't more for his own edification and self-importance than about having a nice place to have state dinners!
What does it say to the world if a party room is bigger than the White House where governing takes place?
The president has already shown his total disregard for this being the people's house and not his personal residence. Tearing down the East Wing with no appropriate and required approvals because he wanted to is not only abhorrent, but shows quite clearly that he will do whatever he can to move forward with what HE wants and not what's best for the current and future use of this property.

Clearly I'm not against an accommodation for formal use, but it needs to be representative of this country, not of the wishes of this wanna be dictator.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a massive ballroom. It is not a hotel, convention center, or royal palace. Since the project is privately funded, and not taxpayer funded, or taxpayer approved, it should be built on private property elsewhere in DC and the sponsors could use the massive ballroom for functions other than Presidential indulgence. The occupant of The White House is not a King, he lives there temporarily. He should not be able to rebuild any part of the People's House to his personal tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

Restore rather than rebuild the East Wing. The dimensions and architectural style should remain the same. Update and modernize standards to meet or exceed current codes. Make the interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes. A modest ballroom for more intimate Presidential functions is appropriate in the East Wing
If a massive ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city, or rent an existing ballroom as needed.

The newly restored East Wing should have an art gallery exhibiting art from K-12 students of all U.S states and territories. Also, a replica of Jackie's Rose Garden should be built into the East Wing restoration.

If the East Wing Modernization project is what you're calling the new ballroom now, let me say I am appalled at the destruction of our historic White House. Everything that this administration has proposed, or done, has supported the destruction of our landmarks, the death of our citizens, and advent of facism in our country. It's disgusting in every way and the fact that it's perpetuated by the Republican Party to uphold the "president's whims" is pure cowardice. He's clearly raped children, lined his own pockets with our money and has surrounded himself with sycophants that have kept his not so secret behavior covered up for years. Restore the East Wing to its prior state, and impeach, convict and jail the deranged, dementia ridden pedophile in office. If digging up ground and razing structures re so important I heartily suggest that excavation begins on his golf courses, on Epstein's island and the New Mexico property.

The project is another manifestation – this one physical – of a man who seems beyond the control of any elected body. It should never have been started. If our laws and regulations are to have any validity, it should be halted immediately as illegal.

Legalities aside, there is little to nothing redeeming about the project. Architecturally, it is both banal and abhorrent. Symbolically, it is the triumph of ruler over citizenry, of cupidity over reserve, of imperialism over democracy. There is nothing significant to be gained by its construction and much to be lost, spiritually and perhaps even morally.

The White House is the People's House and the East Wing has been demolished with no input from the People. This destruction resulted in the loss of a historic piece of Our House. Any President is a temporary invited guest vs. an individual who can destroy property without following our nation's laws and guidelines.

As you consider the East Wing Modernization Project, consider rebuilding in the image of the previous structure while also enhancing features that bring the space up to code. There is absolutely NO need for a "Golden Palace" as a ballroom. Review previous structural documents, photographs, and oral histories about the space. Rebuild it in the orignal footprint which honors our nation's interest in having an unpretentious seat for a sitting president.

In addition to rebuilding modestly and appropriately, the Rose Garden should also be re-installed. This was a space honored for the way it exuded peace in times of trouble (like 9/11) and times of celebration; it was an intimate space that brought our leaders, and others, directly into our living rooms in meaningful ways.

The East Wing was destroyed by a sitting president who has absolutely no regard for the American People, our founders, and the World. It was done with no regard for existing laws and governing protocol simply because "he could." This is unacceptable practice and our contry needs to restore the East Wing to its former self while also updating its infrastucture.

Thank you!

I am strongly against this project as it makes unnecessary changes to the White House. There is no need for a ball room that is funded by private donors seeking favor from the president. Additionally the scale of this project will not fit in with the current White House. Money would be better spent ensuring that the White House is fully ADA compliant. If an addition is needed it must match the size and style of the building as is. But there is no need for a giant ballroom at the White House. There are plenty of other spaces in DC for this.

The White House is the People's house, and an historic building, not the president's private property. The decision to raze the East wing by the current administration was irresponsible.

The reason given for this wanton destruction was that there was no adequate space to hold public events. Reasonable or not, If that were truly the issue, a proper proposal should have been made and plans should have been submitted in advance.

Obviously, now the East Wing needs to be rebuilt, but the president's proposal for a ballroom that dwarfs the White House is unacceptable. Whatever the proposed design, an architectural firm with proper experience and credentials in historic preservation should be hired, new plans should be in keeping with the architectural integrity of the White House and the plans should be subject to full and strict review by the National Capital Planning Commission and the Commission of Fine Arts.

I stand firmly opposed to the destruction and reinvention of the White House East Wing. This is clearly intended as another Trump self-aggrandizement project. It serves no purpose for this country at large and is an insult to citizens and taxpayers. It will destroy the image of the White House, literally and figuratively. The money for this project will almost certainly come from taxpayer funds, which are sorely needed for health care and other projects directly affecting our citizens.
Why are we building a ballroom when people in this country are starving and homeless and without medical care?! The optics and reality are just terrible!
Please don't approve this project.

This project should not go ahead. It will irrevocably ruin the entire aesthetic and historical aspect of the White House. To call it a "modernisation project" is highly deceptive and not truly accurate. It is a huge ballroom, a huge ballroom is not necessary and is simply a vanity project for President Trump in his attempt to leave an indelible mark on everything American. His well known garish and tacky taste, with his penchant for shiny gold makes one shudder when thinking about the final outcome,
No other president has contemplated such an outrageous destruction of our country's most famous historical site. Please do not allow President Trump the opportunity to ruin it.

The lovely and historical Rose Garden has already been paved over without public input. That should be the last thing to be changed by President Trump.

Since the old East wing is gone, it clearly needs to be replaced. What ever goes there should be multi-functional to prevent the waste of a single use facility. It should not dwarf the current building and should be balanced with the west wing. It should be publicly funded, to prevent fraud and grift. It should not be the huge gaudy thing the president has in mind: to prevent abuse of executive power.

Don't ruin the stately White House building with an out of proportion monstrosity that has been proposed. Rebuild it in line with what remains of the building. Use it as office space as it once was. The EW Modernization Project is a violation of our American heritage by a president who does not understand democracy or constitutional law. I am writing to express concern about the proposed 90,000 square foot ballroom addition to the White House. Due to its historic and symbolic importance, any major expansion should be carefully limited in scale and designed so it does not overwhelm or diminish the existing structure.
The Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation state that new additions should not damage historic fabric and must be compatible with the building's massing, size, scale, and architectural character. This proposal, as described, raises serious concerns on those points.
I strongly urge that all legally required public review processes be followed, including consultation and review by the National Capital Planning Commission and the Commission of Fine Arts, with full transparency and opportunity for public input.

The East Wing is not a prop for political spectacle. Destroying or dismantling parts of it to stage a ballroom setup is not just wasteful — it raises serious concerns about respect for public property, preservation standards, and the rule of law.

The White House is the People's House. It belongs to the American people, not to any one individual, administration, or political campaign. Any structural changes made for personal branding, political fundraising, or to elevate personal image undermine the integrity of a historic national landmark and erode public trust.

What is even more troubling is the audacity of wealthy donors and special interests using events like this to curry favor. When access, influence, or proximity to power appears to be exchanged for money or political advantage, it raises serious ethical red flags. Even the perception of that kind of transactional politics damages faith in our institutions.

We should expect transparency, strict adherence to preservation laws, and full compliance with ethics standards when it comes to changes to federally owned historic property. Public spaces should serve the public interest — not private interests.

This isn't about party — it's about principle. Our institutions belong to the American people, and we should stand together in protecting them from being treated as personal assets.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. It has been home to our presidents since 1800 and is perhaps the most significant historic site in the United States. It should not be altered to provide for the whims of one man. It should be designed to meet the needs of the people within the rules already established, especially not 30,000+ square feet more than allowed. The “modernization” project should complement the historical significance of the White House. Gaudy is not an improvement

I am writing to express strong concern regarding the proposed construction of a new East Wing (aka White House ballroom), specifically its size, design approach, and projected cost.

The White House is not the property of any single administration or individual. It is owned collectively by the American people. The President, regardless of party or policy agenda, is granted temporary tenancy for the duration of a constitutionally limited term. Because of this, any major structural changes to the White House complex should be guided by restraint, historical stewardship, and broad public interest — not by short-term personal preferences or symbolic "monumental" projects.

From publicly available descriptions, the proposed ballroom appears to be out of proportion to the scale and character of the existing White House. The size and materials reportedly under consideration suggest a structure that would compete with, rather than complement, the historic residence and its architectural heritage. Furthermore, I have read news reports that it will be painted to match the White House -- WHY PAINT??? Additions to such a nationally significant building should preserve and enhance continuity, not overwhelm it.

Equally concerning is the limited functional utility of the proposed space. A facility designed and intended primarily for catered events, occasional gatherings, a movie theater, and office space for the First Lady does not justify an extraordinarily large capital investment. These uses, while valuable, do not represent core governmental functions.

In a time when Americans face real economic pressures and when federal resources must be carefully prioritized, the cost of this project is excessive for what would be, at best, an occasionally used space. How many safe, secure and elegant ballroom rentals (there are at least a half-dozen in the DC area that can accomodate 650+) could be held over how many years for how many Presidents and occasions with $400,000,000 (Four Hundred Million!!!)??? We do not need to fund a part-time receiving room for political donors, corporate bigwigs, lobbyists, syncophants and hob-nobbers!

Fiscal responsibility and respect for national heritage are not partisan values — they are civic ones. Large-scale expenditures on prestige construction projects risk sending the message that symbolism is being prioritized over stewardship.

I respectfully urge careful reconsideration of the scale, design, and overall necessity of this proposal. If additional event or support space is truly needed, alternatives that are more modest, historically sensitive, and cost-conscious should be explored.

The White House belongs to every American — past, present, and future. Decisions affecting it should reflect that shared ownership.
"Thank you for your attention to this matter."

Sincerely,

Nancy S. Carmichael, Ossining, NY, DAR eligible citizen

Someone dropped the ball. With the president "doing his thing" without following the law, how do we recover? Where is the $400M that has been "donated" by business and wealthy individuals for the project? Heads need to roll; fines and jail time seem appropriate.

The work done illegally needs to end. Full stop. The contractor, it would seem, was working without proper authorization. Anyone with a scintilla of understanding knows that there MUST be a public process for such a project. The arrogance of the president in this matter must be addressed. Democracy demands time. Planning. Public input.

Let's go back to Square One. Is this project necessary? Other than the president and his minions, we don't hear a lot of requests for a "ballroom." Something has to be done about the illegal destruction of the East Wing. The rubble cannot remain unless as an example of the disaster that this administration is. Do we replace the office space only, or do we consider the need for a larger meeting space? Does it have to go on the White House grounds? If it's going to dwarf the White House, perhaps it should go somewhere else. Consult some experts. The president is not an expert in everything. He will be gone within 3 years, God willing. We do not need to pander to his whims.

Rebuild the East Wing in keeping with the rest of the White House. While a somewhat larger wing may be desirable, it should reflect and compliment the White House not dwarf it. The White House is not and never will be home for a king. It is a privilege for the president and his or her family to reside there. They have no right to destroy any part of it at their whim, with all changes requiring approval by the NCPC. Congressional oversight and public input should be considered as well as input from The National Trust for Historic Preservation for alterations, including excessive additions of gaudy gold embellishments to the White House. I was appalled that the East Wing of the White House was summarily destroyed without a review process because President Trump requested it. His plan is to have a ballroom built, so he can leave his mark on the White House, as he did by destroying the Rose Garden. Like the fabled Ozymandias in Percy Bysshe Shelley's poem, Donald Trump's goal is to build a monument to himself, so that we may look upon his works and despair. We are despairing already, and we are mourning the destruction he has wrought, including stomping his footprint on the Kennedy Center. Now he wants a huge ballroom, but for what purpose, since he is not hosting balls or massive state dinners. He simply wants an edifice to mark with his name.

As the White House is a historic, treasured landmark and National Park, owned by the people of the United States under the stewardship of the National Park Service, any substantial modifications to the buildings should be held to the highest standards of forethought and design with knowledge and with input from the public. The sudden, complete, and illegal destruction of the East Wing is the antithesis to a process due such a symbol of our country. Therefore any reconstruction proposal should be held to the highest standards of process and architectural design.

Replacing the now destroyed East Wing with a disproportionately large, gaudy and unneeded ballroom at the whims of a single individual must be stopped. What's been done so far has been secretive and capricious. What comes next must be public and planned, in order to mitigate the damage to the building and injury to the people already done.

Moving forward should be handled by a Committee, appointed by Congressional channels to oversee a process which will repair and enhance our national treasure. The Committee should be comprised of recognized leaders in the fields of architecture, design, history, historical preservation, the arts, and others. There should be a formal and public process to develop a plan to rebuild. All should be under Congress, with oversight by the National Park Service, the National Capital Planning Commission, and the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

The People need the Commissioners to act swiftly to full extent of their power to see that this happens.

I was born and raised in the DC area. As a youngster my mom and I would visit historic sites every chance we got. During my public service career I was fortunate to work at the main Treasury building, 1st floor,

West side with huge windows and a front row seat with views to the East wing and South lawn. The WH symmetry and lack of garish overload is what makes it so beautiful. It may be that a larger formal hosting space is needed but for the sake of elegance and taste let's not permit a "ballroom" to overtake the substance of the WH as the people's house. It is unfortunate that the President's desire to put his personal stamp on everything and his willingness to ignore proper protocol and classic architecture has led us to this juncture. Please consider reasonable alternatives to the current proposal.

Dear Sirs:

We hereby want to offer our services as experts in organizing High Profile Banquets with a lifetime experience starting from Italy and many other countries around the globe, including Special Dinner with President John F. Kennedy and Ronald Reagan during their Presidential Adminikstration.

My partner, Italian Master Chef Angelo Amoroso has been private Chef to Luciano Pavarotti and Frank Sinatra for over 25 years each one, He is currently living in Verona, Italy now in February 2026. His experience has been in five continents with his exclusive Mediterranean Haute Cuisine based on Herbs and Flowers.

Besides this exquisite background we are thinking to complete our Banquets along with top notch music artists such as personal friends like Andrea Bocelli whom was discovered and sponsored by Master Chef Angelo Amoroso and Luciano Pavarotti when Andrea Bocelli was only 17 years old. Through our Musical Ambassador Andrea Bocelli we are in position to complement several presentations with top ranked American composers and musicians, close friends to Andrea Bocelli like composer David Foster and many other artists.

Please give us the honorable opportunity to present a sample of our exclusive Mediterranean Haute Cuisine based on Herbs and Flowers.whenever you inform us through email or whatsapp. We are 100% you will all love meeting with Italian Master Chef Angelo Amoroso as soon as you may want us to meet in Washington DC.

We have additional projects willing to develop in the East Wing Modernization Project with personal friends such as Italian Architects, Decorators and well talented musicians to give the East Wing Modernization Project a total impact in High Profile presentations.

Besides all the above stated we are willing to lead a very ambcious project to teach all American citizens to eat well, along with simple recipes from the Mediterranean Haute Cuisine based on Herbs and Flowers, helping the American citizens to stay healthy all their life with nutrition plans we are more than willing to share and sponsor fro the East Wing to The People of the United States.

Looking wforward in meeting you soon, we remain.

I would like to see the East Wing of the White House returned to the way it was prior to being torn down. Modernization would certainly include electrical updates, ADA compliance, and anything necessary to be in compliance with current rules and regulations for new structures. Redo it to reflect exactly what was torn down with zero permission or oversight. I disagree with the need for a ballroom. If the ballroom does move ahead, I think that what is floated by the president is unnecessary, especially when compared to the site of the actual White House itself. In the event that a ballroom is constructed, it should complement the White House, not overwhelm it. It needs to be tasteful, not gold and garish. Is it possible to return the Rose Garden and remove the concrete, as it looks tacky. Lastly, why is he adding all the gold embellishment? Can that be limited to the "office" only. It's the People's House, not his house. Please don't let him ruin our house further.

This "Modernization" project should be halted immediately. There was been no official review before the East Wing was destroyed, only the whim of a deeply morally flawed individual.

Thank you for allowing comments to be submitted on the matter of the East Wing and possible construction. I strongly feel adding a new portion to the White House that would eclipse or overshadow the existing historic structure is in extremely poor judgment. I am also saddened by the fact that the previous East Wing was torn down without proper oversight or input from the citizens who own the building. Each administration is temporary and while there have been changes by previous administrations none have been so unthoughtful as this one. There needs to be great thought and weight put into what this is going to be or if it is to proceed at all. This should not be pursued just on the whim of one person who doesn't even own the property or structure that is being changed. Personally I don't believe it should proceed at all. And I really don't think it should be paid for by corporate sponsors. Corporations don't need anymore sway over how things work in our count! ry.

The East Wing consist of more than a ballroom. It also contained the Executive Residence and the Presidential Emergency Operations Center beneath the building. These are important and historical places in American history. We have not heard about the impact of this project on these historical facilities.

I object to the hubris of wrecking the East Wing, as if it were personal property of the current resident.

Please, do not allow this plan to be executed. Take the donated funds and restore the ruined East Wing.

Thank you.

The proposed size of the ballroom to replace the East Wing does not match the rest of the architecture. The size is too large and the interior is ostentatious rather than a showcase for American values. We don't want, nor need, an American Versailles. If a ballroom is needed, I don't believe it is needed to the size of this proposal.

Thanks for the opportunity to comment on this proposed project. We feel that this project is totally unnecessary and would be an affront to the citizens of this country and to the ascetics of Washington D.C. and especially to the White House and the immediate area. President Trump is totally out of line by proposing and moving forward with this project and especially the tragedy of the East Wing being torn down strictly on the unilateral efforts on one person and no input from any other entities or people. The only person who wants building is President Trump and certainly not "everybody for many years" as he has claimed.

Please do all you can to see that this monstrosity never gets built!!

The East Wing should be restored to its original form & structure, including all historical parts built by slaves. This was a historical structure that belongs to Americans, not a president! It should never be made into a ballroom!! It was wrongfully destroyed & needs to be corrected! Let the one who destroyed it, pay for it!

This project is proposed as a huge ballroom attached to the White House but as large as the White House in square footage and stories. It is not necessary being a secondary use to the main building. This seems to be something to please the current president but is not realty necessary as the White House does not do that many large functions where this huge building would be put to use. The White House is historic and should not be diminished by a large building attached to it. So it does not serve the people in the country but is a monument to a sitting president who will be out of office in 3 years. It is also not funded as mentioned by private funds, as the cost has gotten so high and the donations will not meet these costs. Let us see a plan for something smaller, less expensive, more in scale with the size of the White House and something that will meet the usual use for large gatherings. We do not need to build a monument to a sitting president.

I think it is very important that the public and historical preservationists be consulted BEFORE major renovations to key historical places. Given what's already been done, we should ensure the new design is led by historical preservationists ensuring the original design and historical significance of this building is honored. Additionally it is essential that the new designs are entirely ADA compliant, with the latest best practices for ensure inclusion of all. This cannot and should not become a monument to a sitting President.

Funding sources for all parts of this project should be public knowledge. Thank you.

I wish to express my interest in the proposed reconstruction of the East Wing of the White House. I was extremely agitated by the demolition of the historic East Wing without any input from historians or any architectural review. Now that this has happened, we need to make certain that any new construction is in keeping with the historic precedent. The East Wing needs to be of a scale and style that is harmonious with the central part of the White House without overwhelming it. The entire facade of the White House should be balanced. I feel that the need to keep the central portion of the White House as the prominent portion is much greater than the need for an ostentatious receiving space or ballroom. Please remember that this is "the People's House" and not meant to be overly grand or showy. I appreciate your attention to these concerns.

I am especially concerned about the lack of accessible entrances and exits to the proposal ballroom. According to the architect, the only non-stair entrance is via the White House entrance. If guests need to vacate the ballroom for an emergency, they will need to use the stairs. How would wheelchair users, the elderly, and those with mobility issues exit the building quickly? Also, I agree with one of the commissioners who said that the plan is being done in sections, rather than a whole. This entire enterprise is very questionable and the fact that only two commissioners had constructive comments is very concerning. The others seem willing to agree with anything, which undermines the whole process.

I am a licensed architect practicing in New York. I strongly oppose the proposed White House ballroom on architectural, civic, and ethical grounds.

Architecturally, the proposal appears grossly out of scale with the existing White House complex and largely derivative in expression, diminishing rather than respecting one of the most symbolically important civic buildings in the United States. Major additions to the White House should demonstrate exceptional design stewardship and a clear public purpose; this proposal does neither.

More troubling is what the project represents. The White House is often described as “the people’s house.” A massive, rarely used ballroom—particularly one framed as a personal or prestige-driven project—risks projecting exclusivity and executive self-aggrandizement rather than democratic openness. Even if privately funded, such a project raises legitimate ethical concerns about the role of private donors and corporations in financing high-visibility presidential amenities. The appearance that wealthy interests can curry favor through large donations to presidential projects undermines public trust in government institutions.

At a time when the United States faces a severe housing affordability crisis, this type of project also sends the wrong message about national priorities. According to the Pew Charitable Trust, the country is short an estimated 3.8 million to 7 million homes, and by some analyses even more, after more than a decade of underbuilding. This shortage has driven record housing costs and left millions of Americans unable to afford stable housing.

Redirecting private philanthropic and corporate capital toward housing production, preservation, or affordability initiatives would have far greater public benefit. The cost of a large ceremonial ballroom could instead support housing for hundreds—potentially thousands—of American families. At minimum, national leaders and donors should demonstrate that they recognize the scale and urgency of the housing crisis affecting communities across the country.

Dear Members of the Commission,
I am writing to express my strong opposition to the demolition of the historic East Wing and the construction of a new 90,000-square-foot ballroom at the White House complex.
The White House is not merely a private residence; it is a National Historic Landmark, a symbol of American democracy, and the property of the American people. The proposed project represents one of the most substantial and destructive alterations to the White House in modern history.
My protest is based on the following concerns:
Evasion of Legal Review Processes: The project has proceeded without the standard, legally required public review processes, including consultation with the National Capital Planning Commission and the Commission of Fine Arts. Bypassing these checks denies the public its right to be informed and to comment on changes to federal property.

Destruction of Historic Fabric: The demolition of the East Wing, which holds significant historical value, is an irreversible loss. Previous assurances that the project would not touch the existing structure have proven false, as demolition work has already targeted the building.

Overwhelming Design and Scale: The proposed 90,000-square-foot, multi-story structure threatens to overwhelm the White House itself, disrupting the carefully balanced classical design of the complex.

Safety and Procedural Transparency: The rapid, un-shrouded demolition raises serious questions about the safety of workers and the handling of hazardous materials (such as asbestos and mold) in a highly sensitive, occupied environment.

This project prioritizes a private, personal aesthetic over the preservation of national heritage. The American public deserves transparency and a seat at the table when historic federal property is altered.

I urge the Commission to halt this project, enforce all mandatory, formal design reviews, and ensure that the public's voice is heard.
Respectfully,
Elisabeth Dingus

With the constituency from both political parties struggling to make ends meet and worrying about paying for health insurance, the notion of spending millions on a vanity project like the proposed "ballroom" is egregious. Coupled with the fact this demolition and expense was not approved by Congress gives one pause on just where the Administration's priorities lie.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800. We deserve a say on whether this new ballroom gets built. I am against it. The East Wing should never have been torn down in the first place.

At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure.

While I respect the historical significance and ongoing needs of the , expanding the West Wing at a time when so many Americans are struggling sends the wrong message.

Across the country, families are going without health insurance, parents are choosing between work and child care, and too many households are facing food insecurity and rising housing costs. These are not abstract problems—they are everyday realities for millions of people.

Public resources and national attention should be focused on stabilizing families, strengthening communities, and ensuring that basic needs are met. Leadership is not only about buildings and expansions; it is about priorities. And right now, the priority should be people.

The proposed modernization and conversion of the East Wing into a ballroom is a high-risk use that conflicts with the building's original design and creates long-term financial exposure. The East Wing was not designed to function as a large assembly space. Converting it into a ballroom requires extensive structural, mechanical, acoustic, and life-safety modifications that significantly exceed the cost of a typical modernization. These investments are largely irreversible and do not improve the core performance of the asset.

From a financial standpoint, the return profile is weak. Ballroom revenue is episodic, highly seasonal, and dependent on continuous sales, staffing, and marketing spend. It introduces new fixed costs, including specialized AV, higher utilities, increased maintenance, and dedicated labor, without guaranteeing consistent utilization. In many markets, ballroom demand is already saturated, putting downward pressure on pricing and margins while increasing competition.

This approach also introduces opportunity cost. Capital allocated to a ballroom cannot be used for upgrades that directly support the primary revenue drivers of the property. Instead of strengthening the asset's competitive position, the project adds operational complexity and financial volatility while eroding the architectural character that differentiates the building.

A successful modernization should preserve the integrity of the structure while reinforcing durable, repeatable revenue. The East Wing ballroom does neither. It compromises the building, increases risk, and diverts capital away from higher-confidence returns.

There is a proper procedure for changes to a place so important to the nation. There is no excuse for letting a would be dictator run roughshod and demolish the East Wing - and then plan a huge ballroom. Trump's plan is so out of scale with the Whitehouse in relation to the site. He is ignoring that whole tradition of main building plus two flanking other smaller structures so familiar in that part of the country and in European precedents.

Please do the right thing and stand up for the people, our history, aesthetic coherence, and the rule of law.

As it is clearly laid out, the White House belongs to all Americans by auspices of the National Park Service. Plans were not reviewed, nor permission given to tear down the East Wing as a beginning to construction of any ballroom.
I believe that the President should be forced to restore the East Wing to its original condition, ON HIS OWN DIME!
Should he not complete the restoration by the end of his second (AND FINAL) term, he should have to pay a non-compliance penalty, that is COMPOUNDED DAILY!
Perhaps, after the restoration, if remaining time of his term permits, the President can add on a ballroom to the existing structure, following approval of the plans he submits.
A possible location might be the (former) Rose Garden, which I believe he has already destroyed, WITHOUT PERMMISSION, by covering the area with pavers.

I feel quite strongly that the White House East Wing should be restored as it was, obviously with modernization of plumbing, electric, and other items needed. The past profile of the White House was beautiful and symmetrical. A ballroom as proposed would destroy that and would overwhelm the existing White House. A ballroom might be needed, but if so, it should be located somewhere behind the White House in a size and manner appropriate to the rest of the White House. And NO donations from special interest donors should be used, at all. This is "the people's house" and should be built and funded in a manner that protects that legacy.

I am deeply concerned and dismayed that the East Wing of the White House was demolished without proper public notice, permitting, or opportunity for comment. The East Wing is not just a structural feature—it is an integral part of the White House's historical and architectural identity, and its removal represents a troubling disregard for both preservation standards and the public process.

At a minimum, all further work on the East Wing modernization and ballroom projects should be immediately paused until the public comment period has concluded and all legal and procedural requirements have been satisfied. The administration should be prepared to restore the East Wing to its prior condition if that represents the will of the public and the Commission.

Whether a new ballroom is necessary or desirable is a matter of opinion, but it is one that should have been publicly vetted long before any actions were taken. If additional event space is truly needed, it should be constructed in a suitable location that does not come at the expense of iconic and historically significant portions of the White House.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide suggestions from the people of the United States of America as to how to proceed with the reconstruction of the east wing of the White House.
The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure.
Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical
Follow past processes for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
The new wing must not extend the previous footprint so as to preserve the symmetry.
Exterior additions should not overwhelm the original building.
Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding
It certainly would have been nice to consult with the People prior to the demolition of this!

Please do not approve of this president's 'ballroom', replacing the East Wing to the White House!!

If the White House is the People's House, who would ever use such a gaudy, non-sensical ball room? A King? And the No King's Act eliminates anyone in the United States. The People would never use it. It is meant for the elite rich of the world, and not the People of the United States of America.

I cannot believe this president tore down the East Wing without approval. Lord knows whatever he will do next. Thank God the Kennedy's are fighting for no name change on the Kennedy Center. He's destroyed the Rose Garden and made it into a McDonald's outdoor patio. The inside of the White House is a gaudy gold; I'm sure he thinks gold is the sign of a King. Well, he's no King. Not at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

He's destroying the United States that I've loved. My husband served in the Coast Guard for 23 years and I worked at the National Geographic for 46 years. We are both native Washingtonians and hate to see these frivolous changes because of someone who is in office for only maybe 4 years.

Please have President Trump replace the East Wing to the EXACT specifications externally that it was before he had it torn down without approval. Id like the internal rebuild to be as close to the original East Wing building with updates for modernization in technology (eg. electricity/plumbing) approved to improve what existed before he destroyed it. Please ensure that President Trump completes this restoration of the East Wing using his own money. The current demolished condition is the result of a violation of the public trust. Those responsible, those who thought they could bulldoze the process, along with the East Wing, should be held accountable. Mostly, the East Wing should be rebuilt as it was. However, I'm not immune to the concept of modernization, so first there should be a comprehensive needs assessment done to determine what new or revised uses would best benefit the interests of the country--and those uses should be included in the rebuild, to the extent practicable by the limitations of the historical footprint. A ballroom? Only if the needs assessment determines that that is in the interests of the nation. Certainly, the massive 90,000 square foot monstrosity that would've dwarfed the existing historical structure, is not appropriate. If a smaller public meeting space that is consistent with both needs and historic preservation can fit into the plan, then permit a smaller ballroom to accommodate diplomatic events. But it must be consistent with the overall functionality of a working White House. This isn't a pipe dream, the American people deserve a deliberate process for the people's house. The rebuild should be paid for by those who demolished our historical structure, without any consideration of saving the best of it.

I am writing to request that any approval of this project be in keeping with the historical significance of the East Wing. The White House is a national treasure that belongs to the people and the proposal of a ballroom that dwarfs the rest of the White House is garish and not in keeping with the dignity of the White House, nor does it pay any respect to the previous uses of the East Wing. Please do not approve a huge ballroom that will demean the White House for decades to come. Thank you for considering my remarks.

It is concerning when a presidential administration appears tone deaf to the republic they are supposed to be leading by example. When groceries, supplies, cars, homes, almost everything a family needs are so expensive that average middle class families are struggling and the poor are doing without, the last thing we want to see of our leaders is extravagant excess. WE the people do not need a ballroom. WE the people do not need gilded anything that costs an exorbitant amount but looks so cheap. WE the people expect more from all our leaders than we are getting in every aspect of leadership. I do not support the placement of an obnoxious ostentatious ballroom at any expense.

Trump illegally bulldozed the East Wing of our National Seat of Government.
He is a failed real estate grifter, a convicted felon, and an international pariah.
He also has notoriously terrible taste in everything, including food, clothing, and architecture.
He has the taste, the manners, and the morals of a pimp.

These reasons alone forbid the construction of the tacky ballroom.

There are also the National Security implications involved.

Jack Smith has evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that Trump committed espionage.
Mueller's unredacted report shows that Trump is, at the very least, a useful idiot of Russia.
Anything he gets built will be bugged to the max by every foreign adversary of our country.

This is another stand alone reason why Trump cannot be allowed to build any governmental structure.

If our democracy survives the Trump admin, he will be a permanent blemish on our reputation, like genocide and slavery.
Or like Hitler to the Germans.
How are you going to explain the misbegotten ballroom then?
The eyes of history are upon us.
Do not build this madman's folly.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide suggestions from the people of the United States of America as to how to proceed with the reconstruction of the east wing of the White House.
Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible.
Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace.
It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics.
Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is.
The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding.
Please restore the Kennedy Rose Garden.
The new wing must not extend the previous footprint so as to preserve the symmetry.
Exterior additions should not overwhelm the original building.
It certainly would have been nice to consult with the People prior to the demolition of this!

Rebuild the former East Wing in the same style and scale as it was, but install functional updates that bring it up to code/modern standards that may not have been possible in the former structure, especially for security purposes. NO BALLROOM! Return the Rose Garden as well. This is the people's house, not an entertainment venue.

I do not believe the addition of a ballroom is necessary on the people's house. Such a large ballroom is intended as a vanity project for the current administration instead of a benefit to the American public. I am deeply offended that the East Wing was demolished without follow proper protocol, removing historic spaces without consideration of the impact. The ballroom is far too large to fit appropriately with the White House, eclipsing the remaining residence. It is in the best interest of the American public for the project to be stopped now and prevented from proceeding further.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

I strongly encourage restoring the East Wing to its original exterior dimensions and architectural character, while modernizing essential infrastructure such as electrical, mechanical, and safety systems. Interior spaces should be made ADA-accessible wherever feasible, consistent with established preservation standards. Any necessary updates should follow the long-standing process used for historically sensitive modifications—balancing functionality with respect for the building's architectural integrity.

If additional ballroom space is required, it would be more appropriate to construct a new facility elsewhere in the city rather than altering the historic structure.

The White House is the people's house, and its preservation should reflect that shared stewardship.

East wing should be restored as much as is as possible to the state. It was in before the demolition without the historic societies approval or congressional approval. Money should come from Trump's own coffers. His own Pacs. Taxpayers need to be reimbursed for the theft and vandalism committed by Trump. The White House is my house. I'm a citizen of the United States. I pay taxes. Millions and millions of other citizens also pay their taxes and that White House belongs to us all of us. Trump merely rented the space he destroyed Rental property, and now we the United States citizens and taxpayers as his landlord demand restitution.

The East Wing should be restored to its original design. Since the demolition was deemed unlawful, the funds for restoration need to be funded by the individual or individuals, or group that funded the original illegal demolition of the East Wing.

It is my opinion that the private fund for the illegal demolition and building of the east wing ballroom will declare bankruptcy instead of paying for the demolition and restoration, which is a ploy Trump has used for any project he has been involved in, the American people will end up paying the restoration bill.

Esthetically, the size of the east wing building should not exceed the size of the White House. The White House is a beautiful, historical building and should always be the predominant structure. The new building, unfortunately, will no longer be a historical building but needs to fit in with structures of that era. It was a criminal act to destroy the old building without due process and should be litigated as such.

And the fact that the person in charge of the replacement has shown over and over that he is is a classless buffoon. He destroyed 1/3 of a natural treasure with ridiculous plans to build a monstrosity that will completely overwhelm the architecture of the rest of the building. And if we are completely honest about is, he is doing it simply so he can add his name to another gaudy building. It is the people's building, not his. Please make him replace the East Wing exactly as it was and he can put whatever kind of security under it that he feels he needs. It is pathetic that he is protected by the most powerful nation in the world and yet he still lives in fear.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and public trust, home to U.S. presidents since 1800. President Trump's unilateral bulldozing of the East Wing—literally and figuratively—without proper review or congressional approval is appalling.

While additional event space may be needed, any East Wing renovation must respect the White House's historic scale and design. A proposed 90,000-sq-ft ballroom would dwarf the 55,000-sq-ft Executive Residence, violating basic preservation standards that require additions to be subordinate and compatible. Any rebuild must be proportional to the West Wing, preserve historically significant trees, or else be located elsewhere with alternative uses considered for the East Wing.

In terms of the renovation project at the White House we are concerned that the normal procedures were not followed in terms of the proposed ballroom. As. Former journalist I have followed many similar projects through the process of gaining approval, and understand the value of comprehensive review seeking input from affected parties as well as the general public. It's seems as though following the announcement, that construction vehicles showed up and began quickly dismantling the East Wing with grand promises of a grand space for VIP events. Regardless of the claims of millions in private donations the addition served a critical role and should never have been demolished without careful consideration. We support restoring the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. This is not the time to simply ignore the past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes, no matter who is sitting in the Oval Office.
If a ballroom is in fact needed, I would suggest that we explore constructing it elsewhere in the city. However, as a frequent DC visitor on business trips, I believe there are a half dozen premium hotels within a five minute drive of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, which are more than capable of hosting a few formal events a year which is likely the need for this and future Presidents. There is likely a long list of more urgent needs for the American people. Let's not forget that the White House is the people's house. We elect a President every four years and they work for us. This whole effort is the kind of action we would expect from a king or authoratian dictator! Thank you for your attention to this matter.

I strongly oppose the proposed addition of a ballroom to the White House because the decision process is rushed, biased and driven by the President personally. It does not reflect the "due process" and deliberation that should attend major changes to the core Washington space that belongs to the American people.

I do not trust the entities in place to review and approve the project because I believe they have been staffed by political allies of the President whose top priority is to please him.

I was appalled at the President's peremptory destruction of the historic East Wing because it happened without any regard at all for that feature's historic character and value.

The drawings I have seen to date are garish and out of scale.

If this goes through, it will set a precedent for even more "because I said so" initiatives from this President and further his tendency to ignore law, protocol, regulation, tradition and the opinions of others.

The East Wing project should be stopped.

I request that you restore the East Wing of the White House as closely as possible to its state prior to the recent demolition. Within those parameters, this would be a good opportunity to update any wiring, ventilation, HVAC, etc., issues. Also, please restore the beautiful and historic Kennedy Rose Garden that distinguished the White House exterior for over half a century. I understand that past presidents have wanted a larger space in which to host events. The destruction of the beautiful East Wing before plans were reviewed and approved was an unnecessary waste of time, money and destroyed a part of an historical building. The wing was compatible to the esthetic structure of the White House- the "People's House". The White House does not belong to the current occupant. It is on loan, and as such, should not be renovated by whim. If a larger event space is needed, proper architects and review committees need to be involved to make sure the wing does not overshadow the main building. It should be a multi-use wing, so that the expense to build it is not wasted on only large gatherings.

I am opposed to this project. I was distressed by the demolition of the East Wing because of its association with important historical figures like Eleanor Roosevelt. I am opposed to replacing it with a giant ballroom, which sounds like it will be so large as to overshadow the main building of the White House. The White House is primarily a residence and an office building. The work of the President, cabinet, and staff should be the principal purpose of the building. There are already spaces suitable for state dinners and similar functions of the type typically called for in the course of the duties of the President (hosting foreign dignitaries, meeting ambassadors, and the like). On those rare occasions when the President is called upon to host a giant party, it can reasonably be done in other federal buildings in the capital or in private buildings designed and rented out for the purpose.

In about 1850, an American author named Townsend wrote a book called "The New World Compared to the Old". He argued that the republics of the Western Hemisphere were less ostentatious and more practical than the kingdoms and empires of Europe. In one chapter--profusely illustrated with engravings--he compared the official residences of the heads of state of various countries. He pointed out the relative smallness and plainness of the White House as an example of American frugality and equality. The White House still has something of that humility, even with new wings, and even though security concerns no longer let anyone who wants to walk right up to the door. Based on the descriptions I have seen, the proposed new east wing with its ballroom would transform the White House into an arrogant symbol of exaggerated executive power.

This project should never have begun in the first place, it’s entirely unnecessary. It is an obvious waste of taxpayer money to build a “ballroom” to satiate a morally bankrupt, self obsessed, financially corrupt, intellectually challenged, dementia addled old sexual abuser’s greedy ego.
The White House is a symbol that has risen and fallen multiple times throughout the history of our republic. Many presidents have contributed to renovation, modernization, restoration and fully rebuilding it after its destruction from war and fire. This president only seeks to appease the wealthy (and himself), which would make it a symbol of corruption and greed more so than it already is or has been.

Furthermore, the east wing was used by many First Ladies of the presidents to champion numerous worthwhile causes to further the very people their spouses were to serve. To demolish the past design in favor of a corrupt politicians desire to have opulent, self aggrandizing parties funded on the tax payers dime is an affront to Women, Americans and democracy as a whole.

Instead of the “White House” being white, perhaps the building should be renamed the “People’s House” and take different themes per each new administration to show a commitment to unity and Americans of all stripes. Surely that would be much better symbolism for a government run of the people, by the people, for the people. Somehow, I suspect the current government doesn’t align with these ideals that should be “as American as apple pie”.

If there’s any doubt, I am entirely against the demolition and the construction of a foolish “ballroom” in the east wing but would much like to see the previous design restored.

I am trained as an architect and historian, and my comments about the East Wing Modernization Project is that it has violated several regulations. First, there was never any public comment period or public review of the demolition of the historic East Wing of the White House. There needs to be a penalty levied against such a blatant violation of the law, as there would be with any demolition of an historic building without any review or approval. Second, the East Wing was demolished by the tenant of the White House - the President - rather that after a decision-making process by its owner - the people of the United States. This, too, should involve a penalty, again as would happen if any tenant tore down part of an owner's building. Third, the ballroom addition is too tall and too large, not only for its proximity to the White House, but also for its aesthetics and functionality. It dwarfs the White House and its proportions are ungainly and overblown. If the President wants a bigger ballroom, then he and his architects should consider partly burying it in the ground so that the top of the ballroom is no higher than the West Wing. A partly buried ballroom would provide a terrace on its roof that could be used for the President's helicopter and the one-story above ground would have windows that illuminate the ballroom, without the building overpowering the White House. Design can reconcile differences and in this case, the President can get the ballroom he wants while the White House can remain the dominant structure on the site, as it has been since the beginning of this country.

I would support restoring the East Wing to its original stature with the same materials and design. I am not in favor of building a large Ballroom. When I visited our Capitol in Washington DC, our tour showed the beauty of this structure. This White House is not meant to be be a castle. It is the home of our country. It should be preserved as it was when it was rebuilt in 1942, to show the skills and artistry of the time and the beauty it deserves. The simplicity of the East Wing is more reflective of our history. A grandiose ballroom is not fitting for the White House. I am hopeful, the East Wing will be back again.

I think building a 90,000 sq ft ballroom serves only one purpose, and that is to satisfy the inflated ego of Trump. There was nothing wrong with the East Wing and it had a long, wonderful history before this president decided he'd build himself a place where people can come to revere him. He is a steward, renter, short time resident of the White House and this project needs to be downsized considerably. It does NOT need to be 90,000 sq ft. If he wants to have large events, he can have it at his home in Florida. Even though it is being "funded" by private donors, these donors will most certainly want something in return for their so called "investment/donation".

My City values and invests heavily in historic preservation. I expect the same of my nation's historic assets. I found the rush to tear down the East Wing with no public review to be horrifying. I have viewed only the pictures of the proposed ballroom and the fact that it dwarfs the rest of the building is also horrifying and not worthy of the grace and understatement (relative) of The People's House. I will adamantly oppose this project until there is appropriate and objective review.

RE: East Wing Modernization

This proposed ballroom is an abomination. It destroys the character of the People's House in its intent and purpose. The White House complex is in the center of downtown DC surrounded by historical landmarks and commercial enterprises. The East Wing no longer exists. Right now it is just a gaping hole that once contalned the memories and projects of the nation's First Ladies. This is the vanity project of a man suffering from senile dementia who intends never to leave the White House.

The project title is misleading and implies a simple renovation when the original historic east wing has already been demolished. It is true the White House could use a larger event space and updated offices however the new building should not outsize and overshadow the original White House building. If the new east wing were the same size or slightly longer that the original White House and no taller than the main house, it would still provide a sizable event space on one floor and plenty of space for offices on another floor. It also would not cost nearly as much as was quoted for trump's plan. Please consider architectural proportions and keep in the same styling as the original White House. This new building will be used to entertain foreign dignitaries and therefore should be in keeping with federal Greek revival style of the main house rather than an embarrassing gaudy extravagance.

Restore the East Wing. Do not build the ballroom! If any type of ballroom or entertainment space were to be built, it needs to be a reasonable size that doesn't drastically change the appearance of the White House. The main structure should be the more prominent feature. It should be something that appeals to the masses, not just to the current president.

I object to any changes that President Trump wants to make to the White House. There is no need for a Ballroom that will be larger than the White House. There is also no need for an Arch in Washington DC. President Trump should have to pay out of his own pocket for the repair to the East Wing of the White House that he demolished without permission to build his Ballroom.

Any and all major alterations of the White House property should have complete review and approval of the National Capital Planning Commission BEFORE work begins. If work is done without such approval there should be monetary penalties to all parties involved in the work.

Any changes should have a complete review that will look at preserving the historical integrity of the property and ALL costs involved prior to any work being started.

Now that Trump has removed the East Wing of the White House, the National Capital Planning Commission needs to keep close tabs on the construction of the new wing to make sure that the construction meets the specifications that are submitted and approved by the commission. The commission should only approve plans that do not dwarf or diminish the grandeur of the historic White House, the People's House. Trump should also not be allowed to put his name on the outside of the building.

Thank you.

The destruction of the East Wing of the White House was not performed in accordance with written regulatory provisions. Congress not being involved in the decision process was in direct violation of such provisions. The project must be halted immediately and the grounds be returned to its previous state. The East Wing must be re-constructed to its original form prior to its destruction. I feel the full cost of the re-construction be born by the president, since he was the only one who authorized the destruction without proper authorization.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure.

As the framers of the United States Constitution feared, the White House incumbent has usurped the authority the voting public has invested in its representatives to decide on actions such as this. From this country's beginning, our founding mothers and fathers sought to protect the governed from a capricious, immoral, and self-aggrandizing monarchy. The current United States president's White House ballroom building practices that circumvented our representation proxies at the decision-making table duplicate the self-serving whims and fancies of George III prior to the Revolution that we celebrate today! The incumbent's unilateral and personally financed building ambitions remind us of the tyrant King who taxed our forefathers into submission to his will in retribution. The incumbent's independent naming of government-financed buildings after himself demonstrates his ignorance of an underlying principle of United States government leadership across the three branches: humility in servant leadership, which treats the position as an honor, not a right.

The White House was intentionally built to house a servant of the people, not a king, emperor, autocrat, or plutocrat. That issue was resolved between the Federalists and Democratic Republicans before the White House was built. As a result, it was intentionally designed to be modest in both aesthetic and size, yet intended to dignify the office in the eyes of visitors and statesmen. Over the last centuries, it has always been treated first as a home for the president, not a showplace. A modest proportion was preferred to an ostentatious large scale. It was to eschew the appearance of a palace or monument for an individual.

The incumbent's circumventing an established policy and procedure for reviewing and deciding on building projects is unlawful and should be punished as treason and the usurpation of the rights of American citizens. The use of plutocrats' money to impose upon the American public the megalomaniac will of one individual violates the Constitution in an unprecedented way. The outrageous disproportion of the dancehall in relation to the White House building and grounds reflects the incumbent's self-flattery at the expense of the American public's preference for leadership modesty and humility, as exemplified by the residence's greatest president, Abraham Lincoln. We must ask: Would any of the prior presidential incumbents impose on patriotic Americans such a Taj Mahal memorial to himself as has the present one?

I urge the rightful representative decision-makers to abandon the dancehall project, to haul away the portions of the building that have been constructed, to secretly bury the materials so that they are not used to memorialize this failed putsch debacle; instead, restore and preserve whatever remains of the White House wing that was obliterated and destroyed. I urge our rightful government workers and representatives to select among the existing public buildings those that can easily accommodate the number of visitors that the incumbent exaggerated would attend a public event that he and future presidents would hold. Consider replacing the cost of applying gold foil to ceilings and filigree with outfitting an appropriate number of restrooms, stalls, and urinals that can also accommodate plain American folks and foreign visitors with limited mobility. At a time when the current president is spending unprecedented millions of taxpayer money on trips to and from his own mansion, please make decisions about this building fiasco that counter these frivolous costs that we, the silent, non-plutocrats, can no longer financially support. Represent us with spiritual wisdom and strength!

Demolition of the historic East Wing was a malicious action and to replace it with a vulgar monstrosity that will dwarf the White House itself is unconscionable. We are a democracy and should not be building a monument to monarchial lavishness and extravagance that is inconsistent with the spirit of our nation. Any replacement should be in the same scale and style as what was criminally destroyed and should exhibit a restrain and humble rationality more consistent with what our country once did and should again be presenting to its citizens and the world.

The White House should be restored to its original look along with the once beautiful Rose Garden. The current occupant had NO prior authorization to destroy the historic East Wing (or Rose Garden). I'm only half serious here, but that half comes from my heart. What if we (once future progress on the "ballroom" is halted irrevocably) leave the ruins of the East Wing as they are, as a reminder of how close we came as a nation to the demise of the United States as we have known it for 250 years. The gas chambers of Auschwitz have been preserved to remind us of the horrors of the Holocaust. The battlefield at Gettysburg has become a monument to the horrors of the Civil War. The Colliseum in Rome reminds us of the human sacrifices that occured there. Monuments do not always memorialize good events. They also serve the purpose of reminding us of the darker times in history so that they hopefully will not be repeated.

I was devastated when the East Wing of the White House was torn down without any input from the public. It belongs to the American people—not to any one president. The White House is an historic building. The East Wing should be restored to its original dimensions and historic architecture. It might contain a small ballroom, movie theatre, kitchen, and offices for the First Lady. The decor should match the character of the rest of the White House. It should not have a "lavish interior including chandeliers and ornate columns." It should not be ostentatious. The ballroom should only be used for official government functions and not for entertaining the president's political friends or donors. ADA accommodations should be included so that it can serve everyone.

The proposal to construct a new ballroom on the roof of the White House is not just an architectural misstep; it is a profound act of institutional disrespect. The White House is not a private estate, a corporate resort, or a gilded monument to personal taste. It is a living symbol of American democracy, restraint, and continuity. To treat it as a canvas for vanity construction projects undermines the very ideals it represents.

When leaders begin to treat historic institutions as extensions of their personal brand, we cross a dangerous line. The presidency is not ownership; it is stewardship. The building has stood through wars, depressions, assassinations, impeachments, and peaceful transfers of power precisely because each occupant understood (at least nominally) that they were temporary caretakers of something far greater than themselves. A rooftop ballroom, particularly one pushed through by a president known for self-aggrandizing projects, would blur that distinction between public trust and private indulgence.

Under Donald Trump, we have repeatedly seen a governing philosophy that equates authority with entitlement. The notion that a sitting president could alter one of the most historically significant buildings in the world simply because he wants to reflects a broader pattern: governance driven by ego rather than principle. The White House is not Mar-a-Lago. It is not a luxury property to be remodeled at whim. It is a national landmark held in trust for 330 million people, and for generations not yet born.

Beyond symbolism, the precedent is corrosive. If one president can fundamentally alter the structure for personal or political spectacle, what prevents future occupants from further reshaping it to suit their own tastes or agendas? Institutions endure because they are insulated from impulsive, personality-driven changes. The White House should be preserved, not personalized.

Opposition to such a project is not about aesthetics alone; it is about defending democratic norms. The presidency demands humility before history. A rooftop ballroom would signal the opposite: that legacy, tradition, and institutional restraint are subordinate to spectacle and self-image. That is not leadership; it is indulgence.

The White House belongs to the American people. It should remain a symbol of continuity, not a billboard for one man's ego.

The project should have been reviewed long before the demolition occurred. There was no oversight on the claims of structural integrity issues, etc. A modernization does not normally mean bull doze and rebuild. What is the Total Cost of Facility Ownership, on this 90,000sf ballroom? How is the American public going to pay for the upkeep? Is this going to become the norm in DC, what's next, for the "modernization" wrecking ball?

Please stand up for our national historic places and treasures and be build the East Wing, as it was designed. Of course, upgrade the systems, and allow for better flow for services, but a 1,000-seat ball room and a subsequent addition the West Wing, so the aesthetic is maintained, should be a hard NO!

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. It has been home to our presidents since 1800 and is perhaps the most significant historic site in the United States. Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to be heard and to help shape decisions that affect our shared national heritage. The demolition of the East Wing of the White House violated the Administrative Procedures Act and National Environmental Policy Act. The project lacked proper public review and approval from bodies like the National Capital Planning Commission.

The WHite House is NOT in need if an90,000 sq ft ballroom. The intention of our forbears was to provide a structure to house the President and his family. It was never meant to have a grossly oversized and obscenely ornate ballroom attached to it.
White House dinners and special events have always been held IN the White House, and we Americans do not need a structure almost twice the size of the original building, just to satisfy the ego of someone who will soon no longer occupy the WHite House.

eternally damaged by the destruction of the East Wing, the destruction of the Rose Garden, and the destruction of the building's interior with cheap plaster and gold tone nonsense.

This ballroom must be halted and the money raised used to rebuild the East Wing as it was before Jan 20, 2025.

There is no reason for the white house to have such a huge and ostentatious structure dwarfing the original home. I believe the size and scope of the project is ludicrous and the plans are garish, ostentatious and abhorrent. I'd love to see it built as it was and certainly not the size proposed. The cost which is supposedly being paid for by donors needs to be provided and placed in an account that cannot be accessed by the President. The donations have all the markings of expected reciprocity to the donors and worries me. The White House belongs to the people of the United States and a monument to its citizens. I would like to see the East Wing returned to the way it was before it was torn down...exactly the same. I would not like it to be adorned with gold trinkets. I would also like the Rose Garden back to the way it was, not concrete. In my opinion, this should be done at Donald Trump's expense, since it was destroyed by him, without the consent of the National Capital Planning Commission.

It's been devastating to see this President treat the White House and its grounds as his personal Mara Lago North. Unfortunately, all of his taste is in his mouth. I think the East Wing should be rebuilt with necessary upgrades, possibly reconfiguring the interior spaces to be more practical/useful. The rose garden should be restored, maybe with a smaller, artsy patio area. I agree with the person who said that there are other buildings with room to host "balls."

I vehemently oppose any proposal that would impact the historic people's White House. It is wrong that this began without approval from the citizens who own this building. The residents should face consequences for their actions. . The current administration would do well to remember that The White House belongs to the American people, not to any temporary occupant, and its preservation must take precedence over personal vision or legacy projects.

As a U.S.citizen and a citizen of the state of Alabama, I urge decision-makers to reject any plan that cause the historic integrity of this national symbol to be in jeopardy. Work on the property should be strictly limited to restoration of the previous East Wing exterior dimensions and architectural style, along with necessary modernization of infrastructure, safety systems, and ADA accessibility improvements where feasible. All updates should follow long-established processes for historically sensitive changes, ensuring preservation, not reinvention, remains the guiding principle. There should be construction at a different space, rather than replacing or altering the current historic structure, if additional event or gathering space is deemed necessary.. There is no justification for sacrificing the character of one of our nation's most important landmarks for convenience or spectacle.

The White House is the people's house, entrusted to each administration only temporarily, and it must not be treated as a personal project or monument. Do NOT allow the President, now or ever to build a monument or likeness unto himself upon these or any other federally recognized lands. This is appalling that it even needs to be said, as it is one thing for future generations to decide to honor a former leader, but no present leader should require or even suggest such an idea.

Finally, historical features and landscaping should be restored and preserved. Recent exterior additions or decorative elements that detract from the building's traditional dignity should be removed, and future renovations should reflect restraint and respect for history, not personal taste or trend. The American public, including past and future generations deserve stewardship that protects this irreplaceable national treasure.

Late last October, millions of Americans awoke to the horror of images showing the East Wing being demolished. It was a shock to the system, and seemed incomprehensible that the president could independently order the destruction of this beloved piece of history.
The White House is a historic treasure that must be preserved and safeguarded as the "People's House."
The East Wing should be restored to its original design—incorporating intentional renovations and updates that make it safe and functional in the modern electronic/digital age.
Please interview the five living First Ladies of our nation and ask how they would have wanted their office, their staff's offices, and the general spaces in the East Wing modernized to better serve workers and visitors—from world dignitaries to groups of classroom children.
It is imperative that we set an example about the importance of historic preservation in our nation. These structures showcase architectural styles of days gone by and convey stories about our forebearers.
We must honor and cherish our historic sites and preserve them for the coming generations.
POST SCRIPT
As far as the proposed ballroom, it is a completely tone deaf project that is a slap in the face to millions of Americans who are struggling to make ends meet in this time of ever-rising costs.
It is financially irresponsible to build an ostentatious ballroom that will require perpetual maintenance costs and would only be utilized a few days out of the year.
If, for whatever reason, we need a ballroom, it should be built elsewhere and designed as a multipurpose space that will serve the people.

i am oppossed to the construction of the ballroom. It's proposed construction has already and will continue to deter from the original structures simplistic beauty. In my opinion it is a political stunt to enhance the status of our president and not a need. Projects like this should be debated and approved by congress and not just one persons pet project. Future generations will also be forced to live with this addition long after this present administration is gone. I would be in favor of rebuilding the original structure with minimal changes and modernizational.improvements.

Having destroyed the East Wing and bulldozed the adjacent area for an unauthorized and unnecessary ballroom, this administration has one again trampled the mores, rules and wishes of the American public. With the complete disregard for historic buildings and sites, trump has proved once again that he cares nothing for history or rules.
I am absolutely opposed to this construction and feel that the way this was implemented deserves a large fine, at the very least, to be paid personally by trump. If a ballroom is actually determined to be necessary, by the vote of a group of professionals and historians, then it should advance without input from the president, whose only goals are rooted in self-aggrandizement and ego. The size and scope should be commensurate with the existing buildings, designed and planned by committee, not fiat.Any recovery of the destroyed East Wing and subsequent repair of surrounding land should be paid by trump, as well.

The White House is the People's House and any extensive work should follow all processes set forth in policy and law, including contracting procedures. While a modern event space may be needed, the size and design, both interior and exterior, should reflect and complement that of the existing structure. All historic contents of the prior East Wing must be properly preserved and retained. A qualified and nonpartisan committee of historians, architects, and preservation professionals should oversee the project and approve the design. The process must be transparent and follow all existing laws and policies. Any Administration is merely a temporary tenant, the White House and its contents belong to the American people.

As a citizen, a White House visitor, a teacher of historical theory and criticism, and one of many who feel connected to our history through authentic structures, I'm deeply distressed by this project and its chosen procedures. From following the information and video you provided, it became clear to me that the architects and planners want no input and provide for it only when pressed to. From the images provided by the architect, it became clear to me that the proposed structure diminishes the White House's presence and stature, through its incredible footprint, its matching roofline, and its sheer presence through intrusion. There is no acknowledgement anywhere that this building belongs to the people, and the powers that be are there to protect and preserve if for the people.

I'm disappointed in some of the commissioners' support "without reservation" for the project that violated to the point of complete disregard correct procedure and still provides very little information, as well as very little respect for the Trust.

The final comments of the chair left me feeling he was eagerly rubber-stamping the project, suggesting we need something "fancier" in order to compete with countries without our history or type of government. He didn't seem to understand what the duties of the Trust are and that it exists to see that our history remains authentically ours. I've seen the office of the President remade in that sort of commercial image and fear for the White House.

Thank you for this opportunity for regular people to offer input. I hope in can be considered.

President Trump has already demolished the East Wing of the White House, which is not his house, it is the People's House. — in defiance of his own public promises, federal oversight, and basic respect for our shared national heritage. There are no approved plans for the ballroom, no permits, no historic-preservation review, and no indication that priceless historical artworks or artifacts were protected before demolition began.

Trump has said publicly that the new ballroom is privately funded by himself and friends. Those unnamed friends reportedly include corporate and defense-industry executives whose companies do business with the government — the very definition of a conflict of interest. This private financing makes the desecration even more disturbing. The White House belongs to the American people.

The National Capital Planning Commission must investigate the legality of the ballroom construction and determine whether the President violated the National Historic Preservation Act and the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act. Until such time as this can be determined, freeze current and future demolition until proper oversight and independent review are complete.

If it is decided that the construction is legal, then The National Capital Planning Commission must require full disclosure of all donors and companies funding the construction of the ballroom.

I am writing to indicate that I am totally against this project. I was horrified when I saw the destruction of the East Wing of the White House and how that was done without adequate input from the citizens of the U.S. and without proper oversight. The White House is the "People's House" and the president does not have the right to destroy it in the way that he did. And the concept of a "ballroom" to replace what was destroyed is also horrifying to me. Our government exists at the will of those governed and yet a "ballroom" indicates that only those with power, influence, and money would ever be allowed to use it. The plan for it shows it will be ugly, gaudy, and incredibly costly. Its construction is not a proper use of taxpayer's money. If billionaires fund it then there is no doubt that many of us who are ordinary citizens will be excluded from it. In addition those who funded it are likely to seek favors from the administration in response to the donations. Were this to happen, that would be grounds for an investigation of corruption. but if the construction of the ballroom is primarily funded by tax payer funds then the people should have the right to evaluate any plan for the construction and to reject it. I am completely against the construction of the proposed ballroom and believe it does great damage to our nation.

The White House is one of the most important historical buildings in the United States and a critical part of our national heritage. That it was summarily bulldozed without any public notice or input is alarming and heartbreaking and should be a clear sign that there must be a nonpartisan review process in place before any further action is taken.
Although the White House spaces may need updating and modernizing from time to time, current plans that show an enormous building dwarfing the main house are not consistent with the historical architecture nor are they warranted. There must be a rigorous and deliberate design and review process to ensure that the new east wing is proportional and in harmony with the main White House.

This process should be transparent and include public input and not turn on the whims of a single person.

Donald J. Trump has done despicable damage throughout our country. Please follow the law and stop this desecration of The People's House. It was built as a relatively modest building to represent what the United States stands for. The population of this country are hard-working people who spend carefully, and only as necessary. This administration does not intend to reflect We The People, in his ego-driven pipe dreams.

The current ballroom has history and has served all administrations well. Should the proper process decide that a larger ballroom is truly necessary, put it somewhere else, completely away from the White House. And don't allow tacky bordello gold to predominate!

Completely RESTORE the East Wing of the White House! Make any handicapped accessibility that is needed, as well as any health and safety accommodations.

Do not allow private donors to pay for either project. Charge Donald J. Trump for the costs, and force him to pay the contractors for what he caused to be destroyed or started so far.

In addition, the 90,000 sq ft desecration is almost two thirds again the 55,000 sq ft of the WH. I don't see the need for such an addition of this size for the stated purpose. 1. Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style,
2. Update wiring etc.
3. Make interior ADA accessible where possible.
4. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
5. If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.
6. Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding.
7. Please restore the Kennedy Rose Garden.
8. The new wing must not extend the previous footprint so as to preserve the symmetry.
9. Exterior additions should not overwhelm the original building.
The White House, the People's House, is not owned by ANY president living there. The president and his family are tenants and as such cannot make changes without permission.
The White House was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is.
The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

I am writing to express that I do NOT support this project. This is the People's house. At a time when there is so much true NEED in our country, I cannot condone spending any funds, even if they are all "donated," to this project. After it is built, it will still need to be maintained by taxpayer funds. Additionally, this ridiculous ballroom completely dwarfs the existing structure. It simply does not belong there. It is unnecessary, it is a vanity project, and it needs to be stopped.

The White House is an historic structure. Any changes must be reviewed and approved by the proper authorities. The people of the United States deserve to weigh in. Certainly, the United States Congress must be included. The fact that the complete destruction of the East Wing occurred without any prior approvals or input is unconscionable. Any "donations" earmarked for an unneeded ballroom should be instead be mandated to restore the White House to what it was.

Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to help shape the decision. The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800.
This review is also required under federal law. Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must undergo review by the NCPC and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act, and receive congressional approval.

I do NOT support the renovation and modernization of the East Wing. It is my desire that the space be rebuilt and restored to its intended use & former splendor - architecturally, historically, and culturally. Any renovation must respect the historical scale & design of the White House without exceeding the scale of the original structure. Any modernization must not be gilded with ugly gold accents, but only follow the historical norms of the rest of the White House and be in good taste and slightly understated.
The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800. It was a blatant disregard for the American people for one person to destroy it on an ego whim and was done without the proper submission to be reviewed by Congress as stated, "Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must undergo review by the NCPC and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act, and receive congressional approval."

What was done to the East Wing of the White House is a travesty and an affront to the American People. Now the taxpayers must pay for a completely new building rather than updating & repairing what needed attending to.
I submit my comments in good faith that they will be taken into account and help disregard the proposed modernization & expansion - We, the American people to NOT want an oversized, mega entertainment building - We want to have an historical place of memories, respect, and solidarity that we can look at and maybe sometime visit where we can relate with our heritage.

Our country doesn't need a ridiculously oversized ballroom larger than the White House just because they have them in foreign countries formerly run by Royals who were out of touch with the average man. The size of the event space and the overall building should be in keeping with the lines of the White House. Does the ceiling height inside need to be so tall that the building eclipses the White House? No, it does not. It is an insult to the memories of the two Roosevelt presidents, and totally out of proportion to the People's House. Plus, I don't believe the "private" contribution party line and feel that we, the taxpayers, will be funding this and the other grotesque vanity projects ramrodded through by Trump. Shame any architect who participates in this sacrilege. Future generations will long remember if the protectors of our national architectural heritage stood up to stop this defilement. Lay down in front of the construction cranes, if you must! All americans will thank you.

I would prefer that the East Wing be restored completely as office and small event space within the footprint of the structure that was removed without regard to its importance as an historical building. Updates to security, communications, power and temperature control are acceptable. The exterior design should replicate that which was destroyed.

After watching the presentation at the January 8 commission meeting, I am concerned about the size and height of the East Wing project. To say it won't matter because it will be hidden behind trees is disingenuous. I would like to see views from other parts of the property, such as the entrances to the White House. What will visiting dignitaries see as they approach the ballroom? I don't see any way to disguise the fact that in size and in height it totally overwhelms the White House. I also have concerns about the casual mention of renovations to the West Wing. Once again, there is absolutely no way to "restore balance" without demolishing the whole West Wing and starting over. Please please please don't do that! Since the damage has been done, something must be built to replace the East Wing, but please consider making that new structure less opulent and more in keeping with the rest of the White House complex.

The destruction of the East Wing of the White House, having been performed without permission of the Historic Preservation Advisory Council, was not only a disgusting breach of historical preservation protocol but a scar upon the psyche of patriotic citizens of the United States. It follows a pattern of destructive malice on the user of the current executive administration that includes the destruction of the Rose Garden and defamation of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

As such, while the reconstruction of the East Wing is necessary to continue its important role, the current admission has demonstrated a lack of ability to take on this project. The public cannot have confidence that this administration will take into account the history, purpose, or indeed even the architectural integrity of such a project. The public cannot have confidence in the funding of such a project - whether it be a waste of public funds or an investment of private funds looking to curry favor - would be in the best interest of the country and its people.

Review of any proposal for reconstruction and modernization of the East Wing should take this into account and consider that the best option may be to leave the state of the East Wing as it is until confidence is restored in the ability of the administration to construct a building (and grounds) that will not only be a reflection of the needs of the modern age but also respectful of the history and art due to one of the most iconic buildings in the United States.

The destruction of the East Wing of the White House and the plans for a gaudy "ballroom" are almost too outrageous for comment. The fact that a convicted felon, rapist, and failed businessman (six bankruptcies; numerous failed ventures) would desecrate perhaps the most significant American building for his own ego is such an obviously bad idea. There is no benefit for the American people. The business of the White House does not require an enormous ballroom. Plenty of ceremonial parties have taken place in the former East Wing over many decades with no need for "extra space." And don't get me started on the desecration of the interior of the White House with faux gold adornments.

Agreeing to this building is a dereliction of duty for any true American.

The White House is the people's house and a beautiful, historic building that should not have had the East Wing demolished. It should be restored to be consistent with the original construction, not turned into a huge, ugly, gold ballroom that Americans don't want. If the original building can't be restored to how it was, then minimally it should be kept to a size and style consistent with the rest of the architecture of the building.

I am opposed to the building of a ballroom in the site of the former east wing of the White House. Facts supporting the need for an enormous ballroom have not been presented. There was not any permission given for the destruction of the east wing of the White House. There has not been any oversight for permission, design, architecture, historical preservation or need for s ballroom. It should not even need to be said that no one individual should have authorization to tear down a portion of a national historical building. Since the destruction has already been done, any new construction should be carefully done with permission and oversight from the lawfully authorized agencies. An enormous edifice on the grounds of the White House would overwhelm the building and make the overall presence of the White House be diminished. Just because something could be done does not mean it should be done. Please stop this destruction of a national treasure, our White House.

1. Any White House new construction must adhere to the original intention of the design; that is, as a home for the president that reflects the ideals of this democratic republic. We rejected European aristocratic and kingship notions and thus the White House should not be viewed as a palace but a humble home that projects the people's vision of the purpose of the United States.

2. The fact that past presidents reconstructed and revised the White House should not set a precedent for overhauling an entire wing, offsetting the argument that other presidents undertook revisions.

3. The Planning Commission must question the need for a White House "ballroom." The White House is not the palace of Versailles.

4 . The President must follow the law in undertaking reconstruction as did past presidents.

5. The White House is not only a living space for its occupants but is more importantly our house. "We the people" must have a say.

6. The Planning Commission must consider the future of the White House given that this proposal will last with us long after the present occupant is gone.

I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the White House East Wing Modernization Project.

The White House is an historic building and national landmark. It is the people’s house. The occupants of the White House are really just “renters” of the space furring their term as President. They are not the owners of the building and should not be allowed to make significant structural changes without the approval of the owners.

I own my own house now, but when I rented houses or apartments, it was always very clear what I was allowed to do and not do. I could make minor adjustments, furniture, wall hangings, etc. and I was responsible for mowing the grass, changing lightbulbs etc. It is unthinkable that a renter could demolish an entire wing of a building without permission.

It is likewise unthinkable that President Trump would demolish the east wing of the White House without permission. And I am shocked that his actions were not stopped when the first wrecking ball was brought to the White House grounds! His actions should have been stopped much earlier in the process. And, he should be held fiscally responsible for reconstructing what he tore down. That is what a renter would be responsible for if they did a similar action to a property that they were renting.

If the east wing needed upgrades and or modernization, fine. If it is ultimately determined that some form of large event space is needed on the White House grounds and the east wing is the best place for it, fine. But the process should be done properly, through official channels, and with multilevel approval before even one shovelful of dirt is moved.

Please stop this tear down process of the people's house and return the proper approval processes to the project.

Thank you,
Scott Herceg

Modifications to historic public buildings (the White House is the people's house) should not be done to satisfy one man's ego. It should be a thoughtful process by historic preservation experts, in consultation with the "client," on how to balance contemporary needs with the historic qualities of the building. This should have been followed from the beginning. The process should be immediately halted and reconsidered by professionals. Returning the historic building to how it was before should be at the expense of the parties who demolished it, and then appropriate modifications to meet current needs should follow the appropriate process with the appropriate experts consulted and appropriate oversight included.

RE: Ethical and Temporal Implications of Project #8733 – East Wing Modernization

DATE: February 14, 2026

SUBMITTED BY: Eric A. Devezin, MPA, DPA Student

Statement of Concern: Challenging Administrative Chrononormativity in Federal Infrastructure

As a researcher in public administration, I am writing to object to the current implementation of the East Wing Modernization Project. My research focuses on administrative chrononormativity—the ways in which rigid, normative timelines (such as the four-year political cycle) are used to marginalize community input and bypass ethical safeguards. This project is a textbook example of "temporal exclusion," where speed is weaponized to serve private interests at the expense of public trust.

The administration's "accelerated" construction timeline is designed to ensure completion before the next inauguration. This adherence to a normative political window has directly resulted in the bypassing of essential oversight. By prioritizing the "fast time" of private donors and political legacies, the project excludes the "slow time" required for:

Understanding how such a massive private expansion affects the public nature of federal lands. The demolition of the East Wing occurred without the deliberate, transparent deliberation required by law. The "10-Year Integrity Block" as a Temporal Intervention
To counter this chrononormative pressure, I propose a 10-year access moratorium for all major donors (including Big Tech and defense contractors).

A 10-year block serves as an "anti-chrononormative" intervention. It ensures the impact of the donation outlasts the immediate political cycle (two and a half presidential terms). By de-linking the financial contribution from the donor's ability to access the space within a normative career or political window, we effectively neutralize the "pay-for-play" incentive. In conclusion, the NCPC must not allow the administration to use "urgency" as a shield for corporate influence. I urge the Commission to reject the current project timeline and implement a mandatory 10-year cooling-off period for all private financiers to ensure that White House infrastructure serves the public interest, not a temporary donor-class agenda.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the White House complex.

The White House, the People's House, is not a palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Restore the renovation to its prior exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring, plus any other interior modernization needed. Also, make the interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past processes and approvals for making needed but historically sensitive changes.

If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city or use an existing public space.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

Regarding the White House east wing, visual symmetry should be the guiding design feature. Please retain an appropriate size relative to the White House itself and congruent with the west wing. The need for an event space seems reasonable, but there cannot be a need for occupancy of 1000+. Determine a reasonable size for attendance, (250?), keeping in mind the additional expense of seating, tables, linens, flatware, and plates. Keep it a manageable number and the size of the space equivalent to the West Wing. The destruction by Trump is an outrage and his taste in decoration is too gaudy. Please don't replicate what was done in the Oval Office and other spaces.

I believe that the East Wing should be returned, as much as possible, to its original state, respecting the continuity of the rest of the building. I also believe that the garish plans for a large ballroom should be rejected. It is clear that the president wants to build a structure that is similar to those he has coveted in the middle east countries, and a palatial building to honor himself. We are the United States of America, and the White House should not be changed into a spectacle of "fake grandeur". This money could be so much better spent on more worthwhile things such as health care, reducing taxes for middle to low income families, and insuring that people do not go hungry. Refer to World Central Kitchen as a perfect example. Clearly this ballroom is being used to garner favor from the president by "donations". Please let this be an example of drawing a line on what can be done in the name of profit and bribes.

Dear NCPC,

The administration's proposed new east wing / ballroom is out of scale and poses a significant adverse effect both on the building and on the setting/cultural landscape of the White House. The ballroom is in stark contrast to the historic modesty and restraint of the President's House, and will throw the whole composition out of balance (even with the proposed second story addition to the West Wing--another adverse effect). These additions will destroy significant design features of both the original President's House and the wings.

If this were reviewed under Section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, it would be a clear case of anticipatory demolition (building and other landscape features) and the project would be moving to addressing how to mitigate adverse effects. Where is the documentation of the old East Wing that was done prior to demolition? Has the administration consulted the cultural landscape report for the White House? There are so many questions.

As a historic place of the highest order, the White House deserves careful planning and collaborative design. Thank you for taking public comments into account, and please take them seriously without influence from the administration.

As proposed—at least what has been shared with the public and not accomplished in secrecy, including the illegal and hasty demolition of the east wing of the White House—the project would inappropriately serve as a problematic monument to Trump that Trump thought he could circumvent the law to build. It would be a permanent stain on our nation's most precious monument.

The laws of the nation and of Washington DC must be respected and adhered to. Which also means that a full and comprehensive Environmental Impact Analysis must be undertaken, and a full and comprehensive Environmental Impact Statement must be completed and subject to public comment before ANY further work is completed. The analysis must be made considering the conditions prior to the destruction of the East Wing as the baseline, so that any adverse environmental, historical, or cultural impacts of that action can also be evaluated and mitigated.

Accordingly, it should include an analysis not only of the proposed ballroom and the destruction of the east wing, but also the destruction of the Rose Garden, which was also implemented without public input. And it should consider what is reasonably foreseeable about future proposals. For example, we should not be building anything or ever in the future be willing to consider anything that could be named or considered an "Arc du Trump," or anything remotely similar that could also degrade and devalue the worth and integrity of the grounds of the White House and surrounding areas, and anything that could be seen as a mockery of American principles, even by such a cheapened joke of a name.

While we're at it, the degradation of the Kennedy Center for the Arts should be corrected. No additional names or changing of the name on the building is allowed by law, and must be immediately reversed.

The proposals that have thus far been made public must not be given any preference in the development of alternatives, particularly since they were developed without public input and in an attempt to circumvent legal and historical requirements in a fait accompli action that resulted in monumental loss. The design that has currently been shared is a horrific example of a continuation of such hasty, inappropriate decision-making processes, and the proposed design dwarfs and mocks the White House, the symbol of our nation.

The analysis should consider wholistic and cumulative impacts, including the impacts of paving over the Rose Garden.

Demolishing the historic east wing without review or approval was catastrophically inappropriate; the loss of historic value representing our nation's history of "the people's house" will already serve as a black mark in our nation's history and will remind us of the consequences of hasty and impulsive decision-making, as well as of implementing and following improper and unlawful orders. It will always be a reminder of the divisions that can be created in our society when thoughtless or self-serving actions and policies are undertaken.

The destruction that has already occurred—which includes not only the destruction of the east wing, but also the changes made to the Rose Garden, the improper inclusion of additional names and wording on the Kennedy Center for the Arts, and any other projects that the public has not been properly informed of and given an opportunity to provide comment for, must be evaluated objectively, ameliorated and mitigated. Further adverse impacts must be prevented.

All future activities must not only to comply not only with the law, but respect the deeper historic and cultural significance of the site and the grounds and the building. No structure should ever be named after any president who has been impeached, and NO national structures should be named after presidents who have been impeached.

What is clearly needed at this time is a functional East Wing. You must thoroughly and objectively evaluate the need for a new ballroom, with an analysis supported by research and facts, based on a need of the PEOPLE of the United States. IF we genuinely need a ballroom, specify the uses and limitations. Specifically state that the design and siting must be compatible with and conform to the design standards and norms for the entire site and grounds. It must not be disproportional in size, and it must not be larger than strictly necessary. It absolutely must not dwarf the White House or in any way diminish the cultural or historical significance of the White House itself; the design must COMPLEMENT the existing site and complement the White House.

It absolutely cannot be a monument to any recent president, corporation or commercial entity, and it must not be named after any recent president, corporation or commercial entity. Its uses must be strictly limited to the public good and not for any partisan purposes. No private funding shall be allowed if any benefit is received from that private entity that is not available to any other member of the public, because this is an extension of "the people's house," and any commercial exploitation would be vulgar and inappropriate.

The design of the new ballroom itself must be based on historically and culturally significant styles and principles, in order to complement and enhance the White House and the White House grounds.

The style must not reflect or be similar to or make any reference to any privately-owned ballroom, including—but not limited to—any structure or interior design at the complex currently known as Mar a Lago in Florida.

The design must be singular and must reflect the broad and diverse history of the United States, so that ALL people, regardless of race, creed, gender, sexual orientation, religion, national origin, physical ability or disability, and political opinion, will feel and be welcomed. It must never be used for private gain or subversion of the principles of American democracy. It must be tasteful, not gaudy. It must not reflect the style of any single individual.

Nothing about the style, function, operation, or uses of the structure can benefit any single individual, private entity or corporation. It must not be used for private or political fundraising or campaign events.

Its design, style, siting and uses must not reflect any single individual or entity. It must reflect the totality of the American experience, and must not be limited by any Executive Order that excludes or denies the full diversity of the American population. In fact, it should reflect and continue to tell the story of how the White House came to be, and the history of our nation, for better or for worse, including, for example, a solemn recognition of the genocide and mistreatment of the original Indigenous inhabitants of this nation, the errors of slavery, the Jim Crow era and the racist and exclusionary laws and policies that followed, such as the Chinese Exclusion Act and the unlawful internment of Japanese American citizens during World War II.

It should reflect the benefits of inclusion and the necessity of recognizing the civil rights of all people. It should strive for the future inclusion of all, as outlined in our Constitution. It should recognize the contributions of women. It should reflect that we are a society of Indigenous and immigrant peoples, who should continue to strive for a more perfect union. Given the historically divisive time in which our nation currently exists, this project should serve to acknowledge and correct our exclusionary tendencies and work toward healing the national divisions of the 21st century.

My stance is that the demolition of the east wing on the white house was/is a horrible decision and probably unlawful. This project must stop now and any funds collected towards the Ballroom should be used to rebuild the east wing. Any temporary occupant of the white house has no ownership of the building.

To destroy part of THE PEOPLE'S HOUSE deserves a prison sentence. This was not only WRONG, it was a CRIME against our nation. I don't care what deluded and frankly EVIL people who support a PEDOPHILE CRIMINAL who somehow stole power think - we want our EAST WING BACK. Rebuild what has been destroyed and put these criminals in prison.

TRUMP IS AN EVIL CREEP AND EVERY SINGLE PERSON WHO SUPPORTS HIM AND HIS BULLSHIT REGIME IS GOING TO HELL ONE DAY - THEIR SOULS ARE FORFEIT. TRUMP RAPED CHILDREN REGULARLY AND NOW HE'S RAPING US.

The true American People who did not vote for ANY OF THIS will not stand for much more. We have a right (paid in BLOOD BY OUR ANCESTORS) to expect and DEMAND that our leaders (paid handsomely while we struggle) do GOOD THINGS with power.

Instead, we are drowning in a CESSPOOL OF WICKEDNESS AND ONE DAY SOON WE WILL TAKE BACK WHAT HAS BEEN STOLEN BY RUTHLESS, EVIL MEN AND WOMEN WHO WILL NEVER SEE THEY ARE BAD FUCKING PEOPLE.

trump will not be in POWER FOREVER AND WE CALL UPON GOD TO TAKE HIM OUT.

First things first. Will my questions be answered?

1) Why is the Project called the East Wing Modernization Project when the entire East Wing has been demolished to make way for the ballroom? This is not a modernization project it has already been a desecration of a U.S. Citizen space without any input. I am heartened by this opportunity to voice my opinion.

2) The East Wing should never have been demolished without proper oversight. It has taken too long for this oversight to become a reality. Where was this group when the demolition was taking place? The law has been broken and someone needs to be held accountable for this action. I am aware that accountability is a popular word in this time. Where is the accountability for this demolition? As you noted "The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. It has been home to our presidents since 1800 and is perhaps the most significant historic site in the United States. Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to be heard and to help shape decisions that affect our shared national heritage." Since this did not happen prior to the demolition of the East Wing where is the accountability and who will be held accountable for this?

2) I would like my voice to join others in shaping decisions. I want the East Wing rebuilt as it was prior to demolition. Can a tally be made of those in agreement with me? If they are the majority will anything be done in that direction?

The White House is not just the president's office and residence it is the people's house and the unbelievable speed at which this project is moving does not give we the people time to comment. One day the East Wing was there and the next it was gone. That brought me to tears. My daughter was a White House intern and worked in the East Wing for the first lady. There must be oversight for this project because Mr. Trump will only be living there for less than three years from now. Other presidents will use this space and to make it all glitter and gold is not the American style. There must be input from someone other than the current president. That's why we have preservation groups, to prevent things like this from happening. Unfortunately it's too late to bring back the East Wing but it shouldn't be replaced with a monstrosity that overwhelms the rest of the White House just so Mr. Trump can party in a Mar-a-Lago type ballroom. No president no matter his/her party should be allowed to do this unfettered. Thank you.

I am opposed to Donald Trump's excessive idea of a ballroom!! I understand that the East Room can only hold 200 people, necessitating tents outside for larger gatherings. Past presidents have made due with that arrangement, why can't future presidents do the same, after all Trump will be out of the White House soon enough? Larger gatherings result in less ability to connect with everyone and then what's the point?

Then there's the matter of the money it takes to build this ballroom. I have NO DOUBT in my mind that the American taxpayers will pay for a large portion of Trump's proposed ballroom, if not all of it. I do not want my tax dollars spent that way!!

Finally, given the way Trump trashed the East Wing before asking for permission - showing tremendous disrespect for the Nation Capital Planning Commission, a well as the American people - I propose that the Commission grant permission to rebuild the East Wing, preferably on Donald Trump's dime, not the American people.

Thank you and good luck with this process. I really do not see a need for a grandiose, gold and crystal filled ballroom in the People's House. Let Trump build it in Mar-a-lago.

I am adamantly opposed to the East Wing Modernization Project, including the proposed construction of a 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House complex. The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must be reviewed by the NCPC and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), and receive congressional approval. The key issues here are complying with NEPA and receiving congressional approval. Neither of these has been done. The National Trust for Historic Preservation sued to stop the project, alleging the Trump administration violated federal laws by beginning demolition and construction before obtaining necessary approvals from the National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC) and the Commission of Fine Arts. The decisions were made in complete secrecy and undertaken without public disclosure or proper consultation. The claim that this project must go forward due to national security reasons is blatantly false. The demolition of our national historic landmark without proper authorization or public input is a travesty. This administration does not own the White House or any part of its grounds. The American people do. This administration's actions violate the US Constitution's property clause, which grants Congress authority over federal property.

Of all the depredations of the second Trump administration, the summary destruction of the east wing somehow hits me right in the heart. The building was so beautifully symmetrical and quietly elegant as it stood. To see the heavy equipment rolling in and demolishing it was such a shock, and it seems to symbolize how so many of our cherished institutions are under attack. Nobody needs a 90,000 square foot building. Rebuild The East Wing and add a ballroom. A regular sized ballroom. There is no need to dwarf the living quarters. As a citizen of this country I am appalled that this project was started without any plan for the build and without prior appoval. It was a tragedy that the East Wing of the White House was destroyed without consent or approval. It will be an even greater tragedy to build a ballroom in its place. The American people own the White House! We have lost the historical value of what has been destroyed without our approval or your approval. It is too late to do anything about this tragedy so fill it in, landscape it, and maybe put a new Rose Garden in to bring beauty not cement and umbrellas back to the White House.

And, as has been shown, not only do I think it outrageous that billionaires would bank this build so they own a piece of our property but that the costs are outrageous when the typical American is struggling to pay their bills. And, as with so many other things, ultimately we should not be obligated to pay for construction we don't want when they decide to silently back out or not absorb the outrageous expense to build this monstrocity.

I plead that you deny the request to replace the historic East Wing with a gaudy 90,000 square foot building we do not want.

Comments by the American people were to provided PRIOR to any construction, demolition or enhancements. This administration thinks that they are above the law and that no rules apply to them. We certainly would NOT have approved the demolition of an historical building. The original plan called for a separate building that would have not touched or affected the White House. The White House belongs to the American people NOT Donald Trump or any other president or entity. The demolition of the East Wing is an affront to the American people and the Constitution.

The American people do NOT need a ballroom. There are other available options to host a large gathering or ball.

The new (2 times the original estimate in value and size) is unacceptable and unnecessary.

After the historic East Wing was summarily demolished without the input of its owners (the American people), it's still worthwhile to try to forestall the construction of this grandiose manifestation of Trump's bloated ego.

When Americans are challenged to buy groceries or pay the rent, squandering millions of supposedly-donor dollars on this boondoggle makes no sense. The American people have not requested a grand ball room, nor will its construction do them any good.

The people will not escape investment in this travesty - disrupted traffic, ancillary costs, personnel expenses will all wind up on our doorstep, not to mention usurpation of public space in pursuit of one narcissist's fantasies. The East wing is part of the history of the White House. It had a lot of structures in it that can't be easily recreated, and its destruction is absolutely shameless. I am appalled and disgusted that the Trump administration would have done this without any warning and without a moment's notice for the public to comment or to really take a look at what was being destroyed.

We need to do all we can to reconstruct what was lost. We cannot allow such a precedent to go unchallenged. It is never OK for a president to randomly go in and destroy the people's house. It is not his. It is ours. Had this gone through the proper channels, that would've been one thing, although from what I've seen of this ballroom, I can't imagine I would've ever been OK with it. The depictions of it are absolutely hideous and would dwarf the historic White House. This needs to be stopped. And the East wing needs to be reconstructed to the best of our ability – at Trump's personal cost. He destroyed it. He needs to rebuild it.

I'm writing as a preservationist, and I'm alarmed that the East Wing was demolished before going through the appropriate public review, approvals, and documentation expected for a nationally significant historic resource. That sequence is backwards. When historic fabric is removed first and the process comes later, it's not modernization; it's a fait accompli.

Modernization of the White House complex should follow accepted preservation practice: transparency, alternatives analysis, and review before irreversible actions occur. Demolishing the East Wing without proper approvals undermines public trust and sets a dangerous precedent for how landmark public buildings are treated.

I'm also deeply concerned by the design direction for what is proposed to be built in place of what was destroyed. A replacement should be guided by the White House's character-defining qualities with restraint, legibility, hierarchy, and human scale paramount in the process without demands that force an oversized footprint or a showpiece interior. In particular:

Scale and massing: Any new construction should remain subordinate to the White House, not compete with it. A large ballroom or ceremonial volume risks distorting the architectural hierarchy of the complex.

Proportion and rhythm: The White House complex is defined by disciplined proportions and a coherent façade rhythm. Replacements should not introduce bulky elevations, oversized fenestration, or a "grand" composition that reads as a new primary building.

Siting and setting: The East Wing's role in the overall campus and viewsheds matters. Additions that expand outward or upward can permanently alter the setting and the historic experience of the site.

Materials and detailing: A credible design must use compatible materials and detailing without veering into pastiche or value-engineered imitation. Compatibility is not the same as copying, and neither is it a license for a dramatically contemporary object that shouts over the historic architecture.

Function driving form: If the proposal requires a building that can only work at a monumental scale, then the proposal is the problem, not the historic resource.

At minimum, the public should receive:
- environmental impacts of lead and asbestos released during demolition and what safeguards were taken to protect the public and workers,
- where items removed from the East Wing were taken, how they were cataloged and what is the plan for restoring many of the items back in the new design, including space for the First Lady and her staff even if the current temporary one has no interest in the space,
- a full alternatives analysis (including smaller or off-site options),
- an explanation of what review/approvals were bypassed and how compliance will be restored,
- an independent preservation impact assessment for the replacement design going forward.

The White House is a public trust. Process matters and so does design discipline, especially when the loss is irreversible and should not be at the whim of the temporary occupant of the White House without following the legal and required process for approvals.

I oppose the proposed 90,000 sq foot ballroom beccause it would not be in scale to the White House. I believe that the original East Wing should be restored with the same exterior dimensions and matching architectural style as the White House. Update wiring and any changes which would make it in line with current ADA accessible access throughout within the guidelines of current codes. If a ballroom is needed, then an appropriate site should be found, not on White House property, and processes should be followed to make it cohesive with other buildings in Washington DC. Also a budget for a new ballroom, located elsewhere, should be passed by congress, not private donations. Since the East Wing was torn down without consent, the money that was "donated" for the ballroom project should be used to rebuild a modern East Wing. The American people should not have to pay for something that was done without consent.

The east wing of the White House, which is the people's house, must be restored to its original design along with Jackie Kennedy's rose garden. The American people do not live under a monarchy and any modifications of the east wing should have begun only after the approval of the American people.

Dear NCPC:

I was exremely alarmed and saddened by the disgraceful, authoritarian actions of Donald Trump in tearing down the historic East Wing. He willfully ignored all legal and traditional procedures for submitting project plans for a required federal review and obtaining approvals. The fact you are now reviewing plans and requesting public input after the East Wing has been destroyed shows the disasterous results of Trump's distain for rules as well as the inability of federal agencies to carry out their preservation management roles.

I no longer trust any aspect of this project to Trump. He is already planning to enlarge the ballroom beyond the size shown in your documents, and its height may block the view of the White House. If Trump is left in charge, he will answer only to his own ego. I expect a Trump Ballroom would be a gilded monstrosity that pays homage only to himself. In my view, planning for any East Wing building must be done without Trump or postponed until he is no longer in office.

Sincerely,
Christine Olgren

I find it disgusting that the East Wing was abruptly torn down without any permission or review. The plans that I have seen are garish, and so oversized that they will dwarf the actual White House. While the need for a larger social area, and/or modernization, may have been legitimate concerns, there was a right way and a wrong way to go about it. Trump chose the wrong way. He holds the public and the proper review and regulatory authorities in contempt. The project gets larger and more garish with every iteration. PLEASE - find a way to prevent this monstrosity from utterly ruining the White House complex and grounds. A cement Rose Garden can be torn out relatively easily - this, not so much once completed.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide suggestions from the people of the United States of America as to how to proceed with the reconstruction of the east wing of the White House.
Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible.
Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace.
It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics.
Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is.
The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding.
Please restore the Kennedy Rose Garden.
The new wing must not extend the previous footprint so as to preserve the symmetry.
Exterior additions should not overwhelm the original building.
It certainly would have been nice to consult with the People prior to the demolition of this!

I live in a home designated historic by my town. We were required to maintain a number of original items on our home's exterior due to this designation after research by our town's historic preservation panel's research. None of this was done before the desecration and destruction of the current administration of the historic White House--the people's home. This is a disgrace of untold magnitude to appease one man's ego!

At very least, more concerns should be voiced about how this project continues.

We the people do not need this monstrosity of a ballroom on the grounds of the White House. Considering that the East Wing was illegally dismantled without proper approval, it should be restored to its former state with the funds that were collected for this unnecessary ballroom project.

This ballroom project and the destruction of the East Wing are a travesty, and should not be allowed to stand. The ballroom design is tacky, and the size and scale of it will make the White House complex an eyesore and an embarrassment.

The East Wing of the White House should be fully restored to match the outside of what was torn down. If changes to the inside need to be made in order to better use the space - such as plumbing, room structure, security, etc. - that's fine, as long as it matches the integrity and dignity of the original east wing, and the windows, dimensions, etc. conform to the original placement of the original exterior. If additional windows are desired, they should be added in a manner that does not disturb the symmetry of the overall White House so that both the east and west wings appear symmetrical from the front and sides.

I strongly object to the construction of a ballroom of the size being proposed in place of the White House East Wing. Nothing built on the White House site should dwarf the White House itself, which this ballroom would do. The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people. No demolition of any structure on the grounds should have been allowed to happen. Unfortunately, that is a ship that has already sailed (and, truthfully, there should be some punishment imposed for having demolished the structure without proper permits or public comment). But just because there is now a demolition site where the East Wing previously stood that is an open and ugly scar doesn't mean that it is right to allow something to built in its place without required public comment. Especially something that is out of scale and inconsistent with the historic nature of the site and its existing structures, as this ballroom most certainly would be. This is our shared national heritage! No one President has the right to alter it without allowing the public to be heard and to help shape decisions regarding this important historic site. DO NOT SELL OUT THE AMERICAN PUBLIC BY APPROVING THIS BALLROOM!

Please do not allow the proposed, huge ballroom to be built to dwarf the The White House, which was designed and built with modest dimensions, balance, and restrained aesthetics. A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design. If a larger space is needed for a specific event, use existing space in the city.

If possible, restraints should be set up and enforced to keep the dignity of the White House and all monuments and memorials.

This would deter from the stately appearance of the White House, the Peoples house. It would also be historically inaccurate. I would also express that any building materials that are used in this project be historically sympathetic and preserve the visual historic integrity of the entire complex.

The Founders never intended the White House to be a palace, and I think we need to honor their vision, especially in an era when billionaire excess has become anathema to the American people. There is no need to turn the people's house into Mar-a-Lago north, or to provide a ballroom large enough to contain multitudes. If a large reception space is deemed necessary, it should be tastefully decorated--not Las Vegas gold--and it should honor the design and proportion of the rest of the building. If the Trump project is allowed to go ahead, it should be destroyed by a future President.

The East Wing Modernization project as currently depicted by President Trump is tasteless and intrusive on the architectural sensibilities of the White House campus. I lament that the East Wing was torn down in such a sneaky and underhanded way, However, what's done is done.
I strongly urge that the scale and scope of the new East Wing be proportional to the EXISTING White House and West Wing. Do not illegally tear those down too. The White House is the People's House.
The East Wing interior must be imbued with quiet, understated class and elegance. It's not supposed to be a gaudy homage to one person's aesthetic, but rather a commitment and constant reminder that "We the People" choose who is temporarily allowed to use the White House, associated buildings, and campus.

Respectfully,

Robin Henderson

Sadly we can't undo the damage done to the historical East Wing of the White House. This building belongs to the people of the United States and should've never been demolished. While I understand the desire to modernize things, it was uncalled for and a degradation of history. I would like to see it restored but given the cost perhaps a memorial garden honoring the former first ladies similar to the rose garden that was also destroyed. We are a disgrace as a nation with every single action the current administration takes. I'm okay with waiting for a final decision on what to do with the space until we have some adults with full cognitive abilities making the decisions.

Public Comment on NCPC File No. 8733 – East Wing Modernization Project

To the Members of the National Capital Planning Commission:

I am submitting this comment regarding the proposed East Wing Modernization Project at the White House.

While I recognize the stated need for improved event capacity and reduced reliance on temporary structures, I urge the Commission to approach this proposal with the utmost caution and rigor in the following areas:

1. Historic Preservation

The White House is not merely an executive residence; it is one of the most symbolically significant historic sites in the United States. Any permanent expansion must be subordinate in scale, design, and visibility to the Executive Mansion and consistent with the historic character of President's Park.

The Commission should require:

-Clear visual impact studies from Pennsylvania Avenue and E Street
-Strict limitations on massing, height, and architectural prominence
-Demonstrated compatibility with the historic cultural landscape

A permanent ballroom-scale structure risks altering the historic composition of the White House grounds in ways that cannot be undone.

2. Landscape Integrity

The White House grounds function as a carefully composed civic landscape, not simply open space available for development. The relationship between built form and garden space is central to the site's identity.

The Commission should ensure:

-No net loss of meaningful open landscape
-Preservation of sightlines and ceremonial axes
-Landscape restoration plans are equal in quality and permanence to any new construction
-Minimization and thoughtful integration of security infrastructure

Temporary tents are visually intrusive, and so too can permanent structures fundamentally alter the spatial balance.

3. Ceremonial Continuity

State functions at the White House are ceremonial expressions of the presidency on behalf of the American people. Any new event venue must clearly reinforce, not compete with, the historic East Room and the established ceremonial procession.

The Commission should require documentation demonstrating that:

- The new space remains architecturally and symbolically secondary
- The East Room remains the ceremonial anchor
- The new venue supports state functions without redefining them

The White House is a working institution, but it is also a living monument.

4. Fiscal Responsibility and Governance Safeguards

Given the scale of this proposal, the Commission should require transparency regarding:

- Full lifecycle cost estimates
- Funding sources
- Long-term maintenance obligations

In addition, I am deeply concerned about the risk that a permanent ballroom-scale venue could be used for purposes that blur the line between official state functions and personal or political gain.

The White House must never be modified in ways that create even the appearance of enabling private gain, political fundraising, or commercial-style events under the guise of state functions. Appropriate safeguards, use limitations, and oversight mechanisms should be clearly articulated as part of the project reviews.

The Commission's role is not only architectural but also civic.

In closing, I urge the National Capital Planning Commission to apply the highest standards of preservation, transparency, and institutional integrity to this proposal. The White House belongs to the American people, and any permanent alteration must reflect long-term national stewardship rather than short-term functional convenience.

Respectfully submitted,

Amanda L. Christian

My first comment is that, "the public deserves an opportunity to help shape the decision." The East Wing is already gone, so it's kind of hypocritical to say we deserve an opportunity to shape that decision.

Second, my general philosophy is that any changes to significant historical places should follow the vision of the place and the surrounding area. Any White House modifications are not exempt. They are not exempt from environmental regulations and hearings. They are not exempt from being a part of the historic scale and design of the White House and surrounding buildings.

It was criminal to undertake such a project without the appropriate brainstorming, planning, hearings and input.

Maybe it's time that the president and his or her staff have a building that is not a historical building as office space.

Immediately, I suggest the project be scaled back to retain the look and feel of the property.

While I do not oppose modernization, I do think the proposed ballroom reeks of faux-splendor and is truly only meant to exist as a permanent reminder of our present President and nothing more. It adds no value to the White House and has already destroyed a historic wing. The proposed plan would dwarf the White House, making it seem like entertaining is the main goal of the building versus governing and preserving both history and the current nation. While already grand, the White House was always meant to be The People's House. The Library of Congress building was created and decorated to be an impressive place of grandeur to impress foreign dignitaries. The White House should remain the grand building it is and not be overshadowed by one man's quest for immortality and power.

The President of the United States had no authority to begin work on the East Wing of the White House because the White House is a National Monument. Federal law required a review. Major construction projects, like the East Wing Modernization Project in Washington, D.C., must undergo review by the NCPC and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act, and receive congressional approval. President Trump has done none of this. This project should not continue until the letter of the law is observed. As a concerned citizen, I urge the administration to respect the established protocols for our nation's historic landmarks. We must ensure that the East Wing Modernization Project is conducted with the transparency and legal oversight that Washington, D.C. landmarks require.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
The occupant of the White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

No gold applique. Those who did not get approval for the teardown should be held accountable.

Any modernization project for the White House must go through appropriate approvals and vetting before construction and demolition begins. That obviously did not happen here, and I am beyond heartbroken and angry that a piece of our American heritage has been attacked in this way. My views for this project: 1) further work must include funding to restore what was damaged, 2) full inspection of the remaining structure must be conducted and prioritized to ensure no future issues due to the demolition, 3) provision to ensure public White House tours can still be conducted, 4) any new structure cannot dwarf the existing structure and must be in keeping with the original architecture (eg, same style, smaller than the existing structure, etc.), 5) construction of a new building on the site needs to demonstrate clear need (eg, space required as existing spaces are insufficient, etc)

To the National Capital Planning Commission,

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed White House Ballroom and the associated East Wing Modernization Project.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and a symbol of our shared national heritage, owned by the American people and stewarded for future generations. Major changes to this iconic structure should not proceed without full transparency, rigorous review, and meaningful public engagement.

My concerns include the following:

Lack of Transparency and Review
The demolition of part of the historic East Wing began without the project undergoing the legally required federal review processes that ensure public input and accountability. These include review by the National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC), the Commission of Fine Arts, compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), and congressional oversight.

Impact on Historic Integrity
This proposed 90,000-square-foot addition risks overwhelming the existing White House architecture and permanently altering sightlines and historic balance. Preservation experts, architectural historians, and national preservation organizations have warned that the scale and massing of the new ballroom are incompatible with the White House's classical design and historic character.

Public Stake in the People's House
The White House belongs to all Americans, not just the current administration. Major alterations should reflect the public will and respect the public's historical, cultural, and democratic significance. Proceeding without proper public input undermines both preservation law and public trust.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Commission to reject the proposed modifications in their current form, require full compliance with all relevant preservation laws and review processes, and ensure that the voices of the American public are genuinely considered before irrevocable changes are made.

Thank you for your consideration.

I am totally opposed to replacement of the East Wing with a garish, oversized ballroom. Since destruction/demolition of the previously existing East Wing of OUR White House has already happened, it's too late to oppose that part of this modernization project, but what I'd like to see is reconstruction of the East Wing as it appeared prior to demolition, but constructed to current code. I'd also like to see restoration of Jackie Kennedy's Rose Garden at some point.

I am deeply concerned about the unapproved destruction that has taken place at the White House. This “house” belongs to the people of the United States of America. Each elected president only resides here during their term and while it serves as their home it has a historical significance and value that are truly priceless and should never be changed without approval of the people.

Donald Trump had no right to destroy a public building for his own fantasy. Please require that the White House exterior be returned to its previous appearance and that previous functions such as the First Lady’s office be returned. Modernization of the space and function should occur as long as the decor fits with the vintage design of that beautiful PubMed building

Dear Members of the Capital Planning Commission - The enormous scale of the proposed East Wing addition (Modernization Project), does not meet the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties at nationally-designated historic sites, which provides that:

"With new additions, the massing, size, scale, and architectural features of new construction on the site of a historic building must be compatible with those of the historic building. When visible and in close proximity to historic buildings, the new construction must be subordinate to these buildings."

https://www.nps.gov/subjects/taxincentives/new-construction-in-historic-properties.htm

Because the massing, size and scale of the proposed East Wing addition will significantly encroach on the National Landmark White House, please reject the current proposal. Thank you.

The East Wing and Rose Garden were destroyed without proper process or approvals. They should be restored to their original scale, architecture and function, with updates to meet current codes including ADA. A ballroom is an unnecessary waste of space and taxpayer dollars. If built, it will be both an eyesore and a reminder of a very dark chapter in this nation's history.

My opinion is that this should not be a ballroom, it should be a useful room for the purpose of conducting the business of the government and DOES NOT NEED ANY GOLD GLITZ added ! It should be a useful and tactful structure adding needed work space it should also be adorned with displays that have to do with our country past and present.

It should include display pictures and stories that remind people who work there of the disasters, murders, and grift from the current administration as well as watergate and the 45th presidental term; to remind the people who work there of the horror that (our Gov.) has done to it's own people. IT SHOULD SHOW THE PUNISHMENT those people endured for their misdeeds to OUR COUNTRY'S PEOPLE ! HISTORY SHOULD NOT BE DESTROYED IT NEEDS TO BE STUDIED AND PREVENTED FROM HAPPENING AGAIN !!

In other words this rebuild needs to be a functional room for business of our government, as well as a display of misdeeds and punishment for those who dishonored our Gov. and it's people. I sincerely hope this is an honor to our Gov. not a gaudy ballroom to entertain and encourage more grift, not a giant party room for the elite rich of our country.

Re: White House East Wing monstrosity
Dear Members:
I beg of you with great urgency to thwart the unfortunate, ongoing process of destroying the East Wing of the White House. Clearly this ill-conceived disaster is meant only to satisfy the impulses of a loose-cannon egomaniac.
The heartbreaking damage already done and inevitable redesign will push costs further into the stratosphere of hundreds of millions, sure to be shouldered by taxpayers. (I seriously doubt private donations will cover a fraction of the estimated $400 million expense.)

A bloated ballroom soldered to one of our great national landmarks and its grounds is a blight without the oversight of the country's best and most sensitive architectural and landscape designers. This project, along with the insulting treatment of the Kennedy Center, national parks and proposed D.C. archway, makes me weep for the future.
I wholly support close supervision of this runaway horror show.

I am shocked an appalled that the East Wing was torn down without any review or plan in place. While expanded event space may be needed, additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure. Please hire competent architects with knowledge of history to design something compatible with the White House and stop the proposed abomination from being built.

I am looking at the current design of the Ballroom proposed by President Trump. I would hope that the architects would be able to determine that this plan is wrong for this location. The proposed Ballroom should not be larger that the White House itself. This would detract from any view of the White House. It also should not be higher or as high as the White House. It needs to look smaller than the White House for esthetic purposes. If need be, place a large part of the Ballroom underground so that it's placement does not make it look too large. If that restricts the size to 500 people or less, that will be OK. What would be the purpose of a Ballroom larger than the White House itself.

I understand the need for a Ballroom since there is no place currently on the White House grounds to hold an event. However, it needs to be compatible with the White House itself and not overshadow it.

Thank you.

This is the People's House.
Speaking as one of the People, I would ask that the East Wing be rebuilt to the same size, symmetry as the former East Wing, but with the updates required to make it the best modern East Wing possible.
If there is an occasional need for a ballroom space, make a contract with one of the many other large spaces that are already available in the DC area for important gatherings. A new huge ballroom for occasional use is a waste of money—money that could be directed to address some of the real needs of the citizens of this country.

To whom it may concern,
I believe a ball room of these enormous dimensions would be a detriment to the People's House. Our lovely White House has always been a symbol of our proud nation. I think it should be restored to it's original beauty. If there is a need for a larger ballroom in fitting with the proportions of the landscape, there should be a study where it would be the most convenient to parking, since not many Americans have access to limousines and where it could be easily protected, and a elegant moderate building on it's own.I truly believe overpowering a beautiful symbol of our country is a mistake of grand proportions.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide suggestions from the people of the United States of America as to how to proceed with the reconstruction of the east wing of the White House.
Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible.
Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace.

It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics.
Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is.
The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding.
Please restore the Kennedy Rose Garden.
The new wing must not extend the previous footprint so as to preserve the symmetry.
Exterior additions should not overwhelm the original building.
It certainly would have been nice to consult with the People prior to the demolition of this!

East Wing Modernization?? What? You mean the DESTRUCTION of the East Wing, which has already taken place? This building was a national treasure, and is owned by THE AMERICAN PEOPLE. Trump should be tried in a Court of Law for his crime of destroying it without any prior approval. YOU ARE THE ENTITY THAT HAS THE POWER TO DO THAT. Declare him a criminal in violation of all regulations that apply to any construction concerning the East Wing.

BALLROOM? Do the American people need a 90,000 square foot BALLROOM? When people are being kidnapped and sent to concentration camps? When Americans are struggling to meet their monthly bills? WHO LIVES IN A WORLD WHERE SPENDING $400 million dollars on a place to have parties for rich people is even on the table!

Absolutely not. We the People do not want, or need, a ballroom of any size at the White House. There are plenty of spaces available for large gatherings, both at the White House and elsewhere in DC. In the current state of the administration, I doubt there are enough allies out there to fill the press room, much less a ball room.

Our government representatives should be governing instead of partying.

To the National Capital Planning Commission,

I am writing to express my concern regarding the proposed ballroom project at the White House complex. The White House is not simply a residence for any one administration; it is a historic symbol of the American people and a site of national and international significance. Any changes to its historic fabric should be approached with the utmost care, transparency, and respect for preservation standards.

I am troubled by reports that the project involves major alterations to the East Wing and that the process appears to be moving forward without broad public input or clear justification tied to long-term public benefit. Decisions affecting the White House grounds should reflect the values of stewardship, continuity, and respect for history, rather than short-term political or personal priorities.

I urge the Commission to carefully review this proposal through the lens of historic preservation, public transparency, and the long-term integrity of the White House complex. The American people deserve a thoughtful, open process when it comes to changes at one of the nation’s most important landmarks.

Thank you for your consideration.

Not larger than the previous building.
The same size as the previous building.
It can include a ballroom. The current ballroom holds 200. Tent events hold 300. We do not need nor want a 900 person ballroom. Something holding 300 - 350 would be fine.

As the country celebrates our 250th birthday, honoring our collective history and heritage, it is ironic that the administration has acted in bad faith thus far ignoring the very framework that enables us to protect that heritage until court ordered to follow the National Historic Preservation Act (which celebrates its 60th anniversary this year). Irreversible changes have already been made and there is little trust that the NHPA will be followed going forward. There must be real assurances that the process will be followed, including following the Deptartment of Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties. The historical integrity of the people's house must be maintained. It should not be garnished with the tawdry gold decor evocative of a medieval child king's desperate need for creating a legacy that us peasants see for what it is: unbridled pleonexia. A ballroom for kings does not belong at the people's house and Donald Trump is merely a guest. I oppose this "proposed" change and wish to see the East Wing restored to its original design. Other gathering spaces for wanna-be oligarchs are available elsewhere, like Mar-a-Lago or Epstien's Island.

While I do not disagree that the White House needs an APPROPRIATE meeting space, the current project as planned would deatroy the essence of the People's House. I respectfully ask that the scale be brought to a reasonable size; restore the original East Wing as it was, with a new purpose, as an enlarged meeting space that can accommodate large gatherings, without the ostentatious, unsighly visage that dwarfs the White House and serves no purpose other than to accommodate a fragile ego.
My objection to the current plan is not driven by politics, but the knowledge that the planned ballroom will most certainly drive further discourse and division among the American people.
Personally, I feel that moving forward as planned will allow a monument to self-aggrandization that would forever be a wound to the People's House that will never heal.

To Whom It May Concern,
It was shocking to see the East Wing of the White House destroyed without any comment or feedback from the public, including guidance from historians, architects and preservationists. A piece of history was destroyed so thoughtlessly. While perhaps arguments might be made that a larger ballroom would be useful, the size and scale of this is completely unnecessary and is not in keeping with the size and scale of the White House. The East Wing is gone, but before something new is erected I hope time is taken to consult with historians and preservationists to build something that all Americans can be proud of and that maintains the dignity and beauty of the White House. We can not turn back time, but we can hopefully build something that is not a tribute to one very vain person, but a tribute to the legacy of the White House and the needs of the building now and for future generations.

From the Preamble to the Constitution..."to ensure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity..."

Our architectural heritage is as important as other aspects of our unique American culture, telling our story in more than words. The fact that we choose to honor and set aside buildings and plots of land as National Heritage sites affirms this philosophy and our commitment to celebrating a shared history. We may not always like or "feel good" about the sites - but they are part of our history.

Changes this administration has made to the Oval Office make it look gaudy and cheap - decrying the importance and gravitas of the office and the Office. The illegal razing of the historic East Wing was, unfortunately, not halted before the damage was done. This ill-conceived plan must not proceed.

I strongly oppose any efforts to turn this space into an aggrandizement of greed, and ask the Planning Commission to embark on a process to rededicate this space to support the work of the Executive Branch, the needs of the nation, and the First family who must live nearby.

I oppose the obvious prioritization of the rich and powerful playing in our faces rather than working for global peace and prosperity. I oppose the loss of a white house wing that serves the work of the first spouse. Prior First Ladies have always had an important function for the country. Future first spouses will also, and need a place dedicated to maximizing their service to us.

Our current president seems to believe it's better to do whatever he wants and not even bother to ask permission or go through established channels and processes. The East Wing project should be halted if for no other reason than it was illegally begun, without advance notice, public review, or projection of plans. The resulting demolition of the wing and storage or disposal of its contents, along with irreverence for previous administrations' designs and efforts, shows this president's disregard for The Peoples' House. We would not have sat still if a bomber took out the entire east wing. How is this any different?

As a citizen of the United States of America and retired National Park Ranger, I humbly suggest to the NCPC that no building next to the White House should ever overshadow that structure. It is the home of our Presidents, the symbolic seat of overseer of our democracy and the People's house. No structure should ever make it appear smaller or less important to the world.

Thank you for this opportunity to express my opinion.

Sincerely,

Good day,

The White House is a National treasure not only for its architecture but its rich and varied history in the function of this country. For an ‘‘administration’’ to just start demolishing part of The White House is just abhorrent. It does NOT belong to the current ‘‘leader.’’ It belongs to The United States of America and all Americans.

Please do what you can to stop this travesty. Can it be rebuilt as it was? One only hopes. A 90-thousand square foot ballroom is ludicrous. It is not Las Vegas.

Please take the time to think of our forefathers and all past American Presidents. What would they think?

Thank you for your time.

Respectfully,

Paul Manzon

Simply put, this atrocious abomination must be stopped IMMEDIATELY, and the astounding insult that "President" Trump perpetrated on the American people must be rectified by reversing the utter destruction that he caused. His egomaniacal, unilateral decision was egregious and offensive to every American, and the reckless waste of money involved -- and that will be involved if this banal project continues -- proves that he is financially irresponsible. THIS MISGUIDED AND UNNECESSARY PROJECT MUST BE STOPPED.

The White House is not merely an executive residence, but a living symbol of the nation, safeguarded by law. As an American citizen and tax payer, I want the East Wing restored to its original form. I definitely do not want a nearly 90,000 sq.ft ballroom added. Any additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House.

No! This is the people’s house not the President’s house. In addition, based on review os his prior personal properties and recent White House renovations, tacky, exceedingly tacky style does not fit with the image America should project. This is not the residence of some grand personage in his castle.

First and foremost, this ballroom project is an entirely unnecessary and ridiculously expensive vanity project. It should be scrapped entirely. Rebuild the now destroyed East Wing to the purpose and dimensions it originally had, updating it with the latest technology as needed. Restore Jackie Kennedy's Rose Garden to what it was before 2016.

There are processes and procedures in place that allow for the discussion and approval for renovations to any and all historic sites. NO ONE - including the President of the United States should be permitted to bypass them. Donald Trump has single handedly destroyed a piece of history and that action of his needs to be stopped right now. And the East wing needs to be restored to its previous construct at his personal cost.

To the Committee.
The White house is the People's House.
Please restore it to original design with upgrades to wiring and structure to make it restored to design. . If ADA upgrades are appropriate or needed make sure that is accomplished. Any process should go through review and acceptance by the historical preservation returning it to it's original glory and splendor. The Rose Garden should also be restored.
I reiterate. Rebuild the former East Wing in the same style and scale as it was, but install functional updates that bring it up to code/modern standards that may not have been possible in the former structure.Please use the original plans include the upgrades to systems as needed. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical. It is not a palace but the People's House. There are plenty of large spaces in DC that can be used as a ballroom and are during inauguration balls.
The occupant of the White House is a temporary guest not a king.He should not be able to demolish or build to his taste since it is the Peoples' House.
Since it is called modernization please approve just that not changing the intent size or shape of the East wing .
Thank you for considering this as any changes should be considered before demolition.
Respectfully
B-Ann Swaney

We are a nation of rules and laws. The White House, and all federal buildings, are assets that belong to the American people, not to any one individual, party of Administration. There are rules governing architectural changes to these buildings and grounds for a reason...so one person's whim or ego cannot destroy historically significant buildings and grounds, and so these treasures remain a source of pride, use and value for all Americans. Donald Trump's illegal, unauthorized destruction of the storied East Wing of the White House is an afront to all Americans and a contempt of the established due process for any demonlishon or construction. The project should be haunted immediately. Donald Trump and the backers if the project should be held financially and criminally responsible for the same, and be mandated to pay restitution to the American people. A separate committee should be firned to manage the replacement of the East Wing to its original status.
Furthermore, Donald Trump and his Administration should be barred from making any other architectural changes changes for life.

The resident of the White House is NOT a home owner. His tenancy is more akin to service members in military housing. There would be hell to pay and damages due if we had ever demolished part of our military housing while serving overseas.

Mr. Trump should be required to reimburse the US for ANY costs associated with the unauthorized demolition and for costs associated with making whole the rebuilding of the East Wing as it was, with US only paying for modernization such as appropriate computer LAN rooms and wiring for 21st century needs, IF and only IF they were not already installed in the East Wing building

This man has no authorization for changing buildings and should be held responsible for any damage he has or will do to these historic buildings.

This building is an abomination. It doesn't even reflect the architecture of the actual white house. It looks more like a convention center overly gilded and too large. It is there to satisfy the ego of one man. It will stand forever as a monument to corruption and the over the top lifestyle of the rich and famous. It is a building that is out of touch with the American people and serves no purpose in the running of our country. A much smaller building plainly in scale with the White House would be much more welcome. Also requiring the donors and their gifts to be made public and approval by congress is an absolute necessity here. In the name of everything that America actually stands for it must never be built. The size and eventual use of the proposed White House State Ballroom is a blatant accommodation to the billionaire and elite class and a blatant rejection of democracy. If this project goes through as Trump has planned, it will permanently render "The People's House" obsolete through its size, dominance in relation to the rest of the structure, and future use. The cost to taxpayers regarding the extensive dinners, servicing, and security of the elite class utilizing this space will be astronomical.

My suggestion for the rebuild of the East Wing of the White House is that it must be no larger than the West Wing so that it is balanced and does not overpower the White House itself. It should keep the style of the building including the decor matching that of the original. In my opinion the removal was done illegally with no concern to the possible harm to the original historic structure or the grounds around it. There should be compensation from the people who allowed this destruction.

I would like to submit my objection to the proposed ballroom at The White House.

The proposed ballroom is not in the same scope and size of the current White House and would actually make The White House, the Peoples House, look unsubstantial. Instead of being the focus, The White House would be diminished by the proposed structure.

A replacement of the recently demolished East Wing is called for. I would propose instead that it be as close to the original as possible. A grand dining room with a dance floor and stage for musicians/speeches with perhaps a small vaulting of the ceiling and extending towards the back of the White House footprint would be acceptable as long as the ceiling does not exceed 1 1/2 stores. The West Wing could then have its ceiling vaulted to assure symmetry.

DO NOT allow this proposed monstrosity to be built.

I object to the construction of a 90,000 sq. ft. ballroom on the site of the torn down East Wing of the White House. It's size alone is totally out of keeping with the current buildings it will complement (overshadow).....it's cost will eventually end up being a drain on the US taxpayer as I expect it would outlast the current POTUS who is prone to large parties and grandeur on a scale we don't need.....are we a nation of party-goers and revelers that we need such a huge space to party???? Donations will build it???? I think we've heard that before and without money in hand, I don't trust donor promises.

A facility of that size would require additional staffing, utilities, maintenance, and security resources. Over time, these recurring costs would be borne by taxpayers, making it important to evaluate whether the functional benefits justify permanent budgetary commitments.Even if privately funded, a massive ballroom looks tone-deaf during a period when Americans are dealing with high housing costs, healthcare struggles, and numerous disaster recoveries. Expanding entertaining space at such incredible costs feels disconnected from everyday concerns.

Could large events be hosted at other federal venues in Washington when needed? Washington already has major federal and cultural venues capable of hosting large events, including: The Kennedy Center, the Library of Congress and the National Building Museum. These facilities regularly accommodate events far larger than White House state dinners.

Demolition of the East Wing was done illegally and without public comment. Therefore, it is my opinion that the East Wing should be rebuilt meticulously to preserve the dignity of the original historical structure.

I will also add that I do not believe the White House needs a giant, gaudy ballroom. It sounds incredibly tacky. At a minimum, any addition to the White House should match the historical scale of the building. The proposed height of the ballroom is ridiculous and should be reigned in.

Dear NCPC,
I was horrified when Donald Trump raised the East Wing to the ground without any type of approval in order to allegedly construct a ballroom. He solicited donations from powerful business people in order to construct it. Those "donations" were obviously bribes. What an absolute disgrace.

We the People own the White House. Trump had no right to destroy the East Wing. I fully believe it was done to erase the work of former First Ladies, as well as provide an area for him to actually build a bunker with a ballroom on top. He has no intention of leaving when his term is up.

The NCPC needs to block him from constructing anything new where the East Wing once stood. The only exception is to make Trump rebuild the East Wing as it once stood. I'm talking an exact replica. While he is at it, the Rose Garden needs to have the same treatment. No permission was given to dig the garden up and replace it . What was once a gorgeous outdoor area is now a disaster of a 1980s style hotel patio. What a total disgrace.

I won't even begin to go into the gaudy gold lettering and trim throughout the entire White House, or the disgusting remodel of the Lincoln Bathroom.

Everything Trump touches turns into a gaudy piece of trash.

The destruction of the East Wing and plan for the construction of an obscene, gilded monument to the ego of Donald Trump - the worst President to ever hold the office - marks one of many “low points” in the history of this nation. Beyond its sheer aesthetic bankruptcy, its overwhelming ugliness and lack of elegance, it is unconscionable that a convicted felon and credibly accused sexual predator who has done everything within his power (and much outside of it) to dishonor every principle the White House is supposed to protect, would be allowed to raze the East Wing and raise this abomination of a monument to his massive, fragile ego in its place. Donald Trump, a cruel, racist, profoundly ignorant criminal who history will eventually recognize as the black stain on this country that he is, should not have the ability to deface the White House as he has.

I am writing to express my outright opposition to the White House East Wing Modernization project initiated by President Trump in violation of existing law.

The White House complex is a designated National Historic Landmark and among the most symbolically charged architectural ensembles in the United States. Although the East Wing itself dates largely to 1902 and was substantially rebuilt in 1942, it forms part of the evolved historic fabric of the Executive Mansion.

Under preservation standards—particularly those articulated in the National Park Service Secretary of the Interior's Standards for the Treatment of Historic Properties—new construction must:
• Preserve historic character-defining features
• Avoid conjectural additions
• Be differentiated yet compatible
• Not destroy historic materials or spatial relationships

A substantial East Wing expansion risks altering the proportional balance between:
• The Executive Residence (1792–1800, rebuilt 1815–17)
• The West Wing (1902 onward)
• The East Wing (20th-century evolution)

Even if technically reversible, scale and massing changes can permanently disrupt the historic composition of the site.
In addition, the White House grounds, shaped significantly under Frederick Law Olmsted Jr., are integral to the historic setting. The East Wing fronts areas tied to ceremonial and diplomatic arrival sequences.

The proposed expansion will:
• Alter historic circulation patterns
• Encroach on designed open space
• Interrupt long-standing axial views
• Disrupt archaeological resources beneath the grounds

The site itself—not just the building—constitutes a protected cultural landscape.
Historically, additions to the White House complex have been incremental and reactive to functional needs (e.g., wartime offices in 1942). A large contemporary expansion could set precedent for:
• Functional over historic considerations
• Escalating executive footprint on a highly symbolic civic landscape

Preservation practice evaluates cumulative impact, not just individual projects.

The White House site contains layers of 18th- and 19th-century archaeological deposits, including service buildings, landscape features, and infrastructure. Excavation associated with a major East Wing project could:
• Disturb undocumented subsurface resources
• Permanently erase research potential
• Compromise interpretive opportunities

Archaeological stewardship is a core principle under federal preservation law.

Although the White House is federally controlled and not subject to all local preservation controls, responsible stewardship historically involves consultation under:
• National Historic Preservation Act (Section 106 review)
• Advisory bodies and preservation experts
• Transparency regarding alterations to nationally significant sites

If a project proceeds without robust public and scholarly review, it will conflict with best practices in cultural resource management.

The White House is not merely a residence—it is a national symbol. Architectural alterations are perceived as statements about governance and legacy:
• Perception of executive aggrandizement
• Disruption of a long-recognized architectural icon
• Alteration of a structure associated with shared national identity

Historically significant buildings demand restraint; preservation ethics prioritize continuity over expansion.

From a preservation standpoint, alternate solutions exist…functional needs can be met through:
• Reconfiguration of existing interior space
• Off-site administrative relocation
• Temporary or reversible structures
• Digital and operational modernization

Preservation doctrine holds that new construction should be a last resort when historic fabric is at stake.

In conclusion, I am adamantly opposed to this project for the following reasons:
• Protection of historic integrity
• Preservation of designed landscape
• Archaeological stewardship
• Avoidance of precedent
• Adherence to federal preservation standards
• Protection of national symbolism

The White House complex represents over two centuries of layered architectural history. I favor minimal intervention and careful continuity rather than an expansion that will permanently alter one of the most significant civic structures in the United States.

According to the law the time for public comment was BEFORE construction started. Since the law was not followed here are my comments:
The exterior of the East Wing should be restored to its original appearance and the necessary modernizations (electrical, security, etc.) should be made to the interior of the building. There is no need for an enormous gaudy ballroom as tall as the central portion of the White House. If the administration wishes to construct such a monstrosity they should locate a different site within the city.
And while we're on the topic of making significant changes to the White House without public comment - The rose garden should be returned to its original appearance and all of the tacky gold gilding that has been applied to every possible surface should be removed.

Restore the building back to the original design. The destruction of this historical building should never have happened. Any modifications should have been approved, in advance of demolition! This unlawful activity should not be tolerated. Rule of law should apply to all (if we hope to keep our democracy).

I urge you to RESTORE the historic East Wind as well as the Rose Garden. the proposed monstrosity of a ballroom is a vanity project and is neither needed nor wanted by the citizens of the United States. It will also ruin the clean lines of OUR White House and is an embarrassment.

Please restore the East Wing of the White House as before and up to current building codes. The cost of repairing the destruction of the East Wing should not become a tax payer burden. The Trump Organization should be made responsible for all restorations.

The unnecessary ballroom should be located in a different area of the city, as not to take away from the beauty of our White House.

Thank you for the opportunity to express my opinions on the destruction and restoration of our national treasure; The White House.

I strongly feel that the destruction of the East Wing in order to build a huge ballroom is wrong. The East Wing was apart of the White House, the people's house. Trump should have gone through the proper channels to have this approved. Congress and the entity that governs over public projects of historical buildings definitely needed to be involved. Trump only wants this gold tacky ballroom to feed his ego. I want the East Wing to be restored. Trump needs to be stopped.

To whom it may concern. I am 63 years old and don't understand how a president can just do whatever he wants to the "People's House" . This isn't just a little remolding, redecorating thing. He has tore apart our history of some great memories that will never be replaced. There needs to be some sort of accountability for this and over site for what will be put there in place of "our" East Wing. What he has done to the East Wing is a prime example of what he has done to our country. Heart broken, senior American citizen in Indiana. (Jane Surowiec)

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

I am grieved by the demolition of the East Wing and the complete lack of transparency with the planned rebuilding. The White House has been known for years as "the people's house." This demolition occurred without any input from citizens, any consultation with appropriate historic preservation groups or, for that matter, Congress. Please halt this process as soon as possible, and allow the Historic Trust to take charge of the plan and the reconstruction.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center. Most importantly, the White House is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical. The federally recognized Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation offer clear guidance for construction projects affecting historic properties. The Standards provide that new additions should not destroy the historic fabric of the property and that the new work should be compatible with existing massing, size, scale, and architectural features. The total square footage of the White House is 55,000 square feet. It seems to me that adding a 90,000 square foot ballroom would be out of step with the requirements put forth in these Standards.

The occupant of The White House works for the People of the United States and lives there as a temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild the structure to his own personal tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. How is it possible for Trump to knock down much of the White House without ANY approval and then try to build an unnecessary and garish ballroom that dwarfs and decimates the WhiteHouse and is a vanity project to Trump?? Where is the oversight by congress and appropriate departments? To Whom it may concern,
I am submitting this comment in opposition to the proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House complex.

This proposal raises concerns regarding federal spending prioritization, statutory review standards, and long-standing preservation principles governing nationally significant historic properties. While expanded event space may be operationally desirable, federal capital investments must be evaluated against competing national needs, including critical funding demands within health and human services systems serving vulnerable populations across the country.

Under the federal review framework applicable to this project, including interagency planning review, environmental impact considerations, and congressional oversight, projects of this scale should demonstrate clear necessity, proportionality, and consistency with federal stewardship obligations. The scale of the proposed addition — approximately 90,000 square feet — would exceed the size of the existing 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. This introduces legitimate policy concerns regarding precedent-setting expansion of federally protected historic executive facilities.

Federal preservation standards have historically emphasized that new construction associated with landmark properties should remain subordinate in scale, visually compatible, and minimally impactful to defining historic features. A structure exceeding the primary historic residence in size challenges those long-established preservation principles and risks altering the historic hierarchy and character of one of the nation's most symbolically and historically significant government properties.

Additionally, federal capital planning should consider opportunity cost. Large-scale construction expenditures for ceremonial or event capacity expansion must be weighed against documented national needs in public health infrastructure, community health access, and human services delivery systems.

I respectfully urge the Commission to apply strict scrutiny to the necessity, scale, fiscal justification, and preservation compatibility of this proposal, and to consider whether alternative, less impactful solutions could meet operational needs while maintaining fidelity to federal preservation and stewardship standards.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide public comment and participate in this review process.
Signed,
April Mishler, CT

Please ensure that the replacement for the White House east wing is of a size that doesn't overwhelm the actural White House. Many of the proposed pictures look much larger than the White House. Also please consider the use that past Presidents have put the space to. We have the current President campaining for a hugh ballroom. But is this really needed? Have any of the past presidents indicated that the current entertaining spaces were inadequate? What do the living past Presidents say - did they feel the lack of a large ballroom. Historians who are familiar with the writings of deceased Presidents may be aware of thier need (or lack of need) for a large ballroom. Please ensure that there is a sound design that can be accomplished in a timely manner. It should reflect reflect the good taste of the other Federal buildings which have met the test of time. It should not be built to satisfy the whim of a single president. Ideally it should be funded through normal federal funding methods, not by donations which do not allow transparency and appear to by bribes.

The proposed renovation of the East Wing is in poor taste. It will dwarf the White House, which should be the main attraction at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. The cost and size far exceed the supposed need. It does not even match the existing structure. The East Wing never should have been demolished without public input. I am certain that the plans for the project will be as gaudy and hideous as this president has made the Oval Office and nearly every other project he has been involved with. There is no need in this country to have a ballroom this size. It has not been needed for any function in the past, nor will rational future presidents need it, and it would degrade the historic appearance of The Peoples' House. Please require it to be reconstructed with the exterior appearance as it was, with whatever interior and structural improvements are necessary to bring it up to modern structural and security standards.

The proposed new building is an abomination. Obviously, it has to be much smaller in scale, 20,000 sq ft. No gold gilding, the architecture and decorations are to be in line with the White House - prior to the current resident. It was a disgrace that the East Wing and so much of the historical areas have already been destroyed. Since there obviously has to be something in its place (without a concrete patio with picnic tables and umbrellas ala Mar-a-Lago, it should be distinguished and tasteful, not gaudy and tasteless.

I was horrified when I saw pictures of the demolition of the East wing of the White House. An American landmark, the White House and it's iconic configuration, has been a staple in Washington DC for decades. Countless students have gone on DC field trips, including my own family. Countless souvenirs have been purchased with the East Wing still intact. Countless photos are in Americans homes with the East Wing still intact. The loss of this landmark really hit the American people emotionally, because of the assumption that it was indeed the people's house, and not owned by any one person. The loss is incalculable already. With the building of a huge ballroom, the pain would be magnified for many Americans. Please do not allow this construction.

I am absolutely heartbroken that the East Wing has been demolished before people ever had a chance for input, or that the legal procedures were followed. If there is a necessity to expand the ballroom, it should not be a ridiculous, Las Vegas-style, over the top monstrosity. It should reflect the spirit of the 1800s when the building was constructed. It can be elegant, but colonial in an architecture. It is the people's house, not a palace. It should not be adorned with massive amounts of gold. The most precious thing in that addition would be the people who attend events in it from all walks of life - a reflection of a democracy, not an autocracy.

The vanity project that resulted in the demolition of the East Wing in order to replace it with a gaudy, oversized ballroom must be stopped. The addition to the structure, as presented, would dwarf the White House in size. It is unnecessary as the government has facilities to house large gatherings, and although claimed by the President as being funded by donors will ultimately cost taxpayers. The White House is the People's House. It belongs to no one person. Therefore, it must be treated as a national treasure and not a private residence. Any actions that alter the function or appearance of the People's House must be reviewed AND approved by the Committee for the Preservation of the White House (initiated under President Lyndon B Johnson), the White House Historical Association (started by Jacqueline Kennedy and responsible for accurate and historical restoration) and the National Parks Service. None of this has happened, and some of those entities have in fact spoken out against the architectural disaster that is the Trump design: oversized, which skews the classic proportions of the White House, and is designed to be gaudy and faux throughout. A random pastiche of classic styles, replete with overwrought gilding, is inappropriate in a functioning democracy. Rather, it bears more than a passing resemblance to the mansions of tinpot dictators such as Saddam Hussein. What does that say about the state of our democracy, then?

For all these reasons, I state for the record that I am in resolute opposition to the gargantuan ballroom proposed for the site of the rudely demolished East Wing of the People's House.

Despite assurances to the contrary by the White House staff, the demolition of the East Wing proceeded in haste in 2025 without the legally required reviews of the project. The intent was to proceed with construction of the new East Wing without review. This project is in violation of numerous laws as a result. It took an injunction to halt it. The damage is done and cannot be reversed. However, a proper review of the plans for the new construction can at least ensure that the new construction is compatible with the architectural style and mass of the White House.

The White House has been the home and workplace of every president since John Adam's moved in. It is arguably the most significant building in the United States. The proposed massive 90,000 square foot ballroom (whose size has been growing since last year) is totally out of proportion with the White House and West Wing. It is overly grandiose and the need to seat 900 guests at any one event seems questionable. In my opinion, this project does not fall in line with historic preservation standards and, at its present scale, would be a waste of funds. I urge that the proper reviews proceed as legally required, and that modifications to the plans are done to bring them more in line with the existing structures.

The White House is an American icon. It belongs to the American People and not the current occupant. Any changes to it should be thoroughly reviewed. That the destruction of the existing East Wing was allowed without public input shows an absolute lack of respect for the will of the People.

The proposed ballroom design completely distorts the White House. If it is indeed imperative that a ballroom is needed for the good of the People, then it should be designed so the majority of the structure is below grade so that the above grade portion resembles to East Wing prior to its destruction. It seems to me that all the stated goals can be achieved with such a design direction. The above grade portion would allow natural light and the high-ceiling desired for the ballroom could still be achieved by building some of the height below grade. Moreover, such a design would make the structure safer and more secure from an attack.

While a larger, more secure space for holding diplomatic functions may make sense, it should be done aesthetically and in character with the size, scale and design of the existing structure (and particularly the former East Wing).

I also highly object to the idea such a large space would be needed for inaugurations, since such ceremonies should be performed in public, in the light of day and with enough space to accommodate the historically-sized crowds attracted by popular presidents.

Rebuild and upgrade the original East Wing, along with restoring the rose garden. IF a ballroom is necessary it should be constructed as an offsite structure, AFTER plans are submitted and approved. And NO GOLD finishings!! Would prefer art work depicting historical events in American history.

STOP THIS PROJECT NOW. Under no circumstances should any version of this project be approved. All steps that have been taken to date should be restored to original condition, including complete rebuilding of the historic East Wing of the White House, without any added marble or gilt. The people, citizens, voters of the United States - of whom I am one - have long viewed the White House as a symbol of our history and of suitable decorum for an icon of our country, not a party venue for oligarchs. No temporary resident should be permitted to impose questionable (at best) personal ideas of "taste" on OUR property. (If any resident wants a solid gold quilt on his bed, or mirror on the wall, fine. Let him take it with him when he returns the property - broom clean - to us, his landlords.) The White House has, and should, house serious efforts to build a world of freedom and justice for all persons everywhere because we hold it as self evident that all people are created equal and endowed with inalienable rights. It should not be reduced to a post-golf hangout for the few who can afford to flaunt their wealth, and especially not at the expense of those who contribute to coffers designed to serve the best interests of us all. The White House is NOT a private palace, it is a public monument. And don't permit it to be renamed after anyone either.

This is an abomination.

The United States is not a monarchy. The White House is not a palace.

It does not belong to a president but rather to the people of the country. We were not asked for our permission.

The 45 previous presidents didn't need a ballroom. They never asked the US taxpayers to come up with something like that and asking crony capitalist friends to fund your vanity project is just completely wrong.

Put it back the way it was.

Please reject ballroom expansion project. The East Wing should be reconstructed in a design and scale consistent with its previous stature as a component of the White House. Offices and rooms consistent with previous designs and uses should be restored. Necessary upgrades to Building Codes and security measures should be incorporated. Please also consider replacement of the Rose Garden.

The ballroom proposal would overshadow the remaining White House structure and project an image of grandeur unbecoming to the “People’s House,”

I strongly object to any part of this project moving forward. This administration destroyed the historic East Wing to build a monument to his ego which is not needed or wanted by the true owners of the property, the American People. The President does not personally own this property and does not have the right to independently destroy historic structures and then reap the reward of erecting a monstrous, unwanted, unneeded structure. I strongly request this entire project be stopped. I also vehemently request that all historic pieces of art, furniture and other items removed from the East Wing be accounted for and placed in a museum or other secure location to ensure they remain for the benefit of the American People.

The White House is the "People's House." It is a treasured and world renowned building. The current desecration is indicative of what happens when commissions and processes that are there to protect the nation's architectural heritage are circumvented and rank amateurs seek to impose themselves on the building. Any process arising from this admirable opportunity to comment should focus on the description of this as the People's House. it's repair must be a collaborative venture including architects, historians, qualified members of the public. Change is a fact of life and has to be managed. Heritage is a collaborative thing, requiring mindful consideration and consultation. Society as a whole should be included and a wide variety of opinions taken into account. I have no expert credentials really to comment other than those of a deeply concerned and offended citizen that this house, the People's House, should have been so desecrated and what is to be done about the damage to our national treasure. Thank you for this opportunity to contribute.

Gold oppulance is not associated with the values of the founders of the United States. We are a relatively young country, founded by immigrants looking for opportunity to change the life they lived under Kings and Royal Families who ammassed weath on the backs of the people. The rise of an oppulance ballroom would only exist to usher us in the direction of Kings and Royalty and celebrate their wealth. I would hope that is not what we are all about. That we will not celebrate wealth until w e are all living in comfort, with full bellies, safe housing, and good health. Life, Liberty and the pursuit of happiness. No golden monstorous ballroom to impress other heads of state and oligarcs is needed to remind us we have a long way to go for everyone to live the "American dream."

The White House belongs to the American people, provided for the use of a duly elected President and his administration. It is, especially, a rental property and should be treated as such. If changes are sought, it has to be done with the consent of, and the approval of, the owner.
One does NOT demolish something that does not belong to him first and then seek approval. In fact, I do not recall this President ever seeking approval. Ever.
He insists he has such good taste that he will build some structure that everyone will love. I see how he cheapened the Oval Office- his tastes are not mine. Glitter may belong in a bordello. It does belong in the People’s House.

Demolishing to fundamentally alter the idea of one of the most iconic buildings in the United States with a program that is fundamentally at odds with the ideas this country was founded on is another. The White House, the People's House, is not a palace. A showy ballroom is not needed, there are plenty of venues already in D.C.
It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics to fit the ethos of our budding democracy.
Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is, I know I was.

Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding.

Since the legitimacy of Trump's 2nd ascent to the presidency is in question, as he was publicly witnessed both inciting an insurrectionist attack on the nation’s capitol and taking further steps, for example his call to Brett Raffensperger attempting to convince the GA Secretary of State's office to "find" him 11,780 votes, toward overturning the results of the 2020 election, and should therefore have been disqualified from either running for or holding office, and since all his actions and those of the nongovernmental underlings and the executive administration over which he presides have shown zero regard for law, regulations, court orders, rudimentary decency, the Constitution, fairness, or rational debate, whether with others or internally, it is obviously unwise that allowance should be given to such a feckless and transgressive administration to make any alterations or additions to government property, especially so public a building as the White House, unless they are willing, as guarantee with moral and material collateral, to simultaneously undergo comparable alterations, including demolition already having taken place, to the physical flesh of their own persons.

The proposed ballroom is quite out of proportion with the White House itself. Is an "event space" attached to the White House truly needed? If so, a case needs to be made for it, including consideration of size. If the East Room can host events with up to 200 persons, why is a 999-person space necessary? The number seems arbitrary, and is a third again higher than what was proposed in mid-2025.

I feel that it was a travesty that the East Wing was demolished. It should be rebuilt in the style that is befitting the original style and decor of the White House as it now stands. No tacky gold sconces or flourishes. Also, this needs to be done BEFORE any work is done on a ballroom. The proposed ballroom is ridiculous in size and decor and does not give an appropriate respect to the historical deign of the White House. In destroying the East Wing and putting up a modern structure that looks more like a gilded office building is an affront to the pride and the history of our Capitol. Lastly the amount being spent on the ballroom is horribly offensive to all those citizens who now cannot afford healthcare and groceries. I don't trust that the "donated" funds will go towards a project that represents our country in a gracious and welcoming light. As a proud citizen of this country and having visited our capital and admired it's beauty, I was appalled to see the destruction of the East Wing. The proposed ballroom is so very disproportionate to the building itself that it would be a monstrosity ill-fitting the overall aesthetics of the White House, and is wholly unnecessary. The amount of space typically needed can be easily ascertained from prior events and the addition built accordingly. No one is saying an event space is not warranted, just that it should be done within reason and preserve the look and history of the White House as much as is possible. And I honestly think most citizens would be willing to foot the bill of a smaller ballroom to avoid the possibility of "pay for play".

Further all gold ornamentation, etc. that has been added to the oval office and other areas of the White House should be removed, further there should be complete restoration of the Rose Garden. The White House sits on 18 acres of property. There is sufficient area that a ballroom scaled to be appropriate to equal or lesser size than the White House could be built on that property in back of the White House connected to the east wing via a breezeway. Any ballroom should not be visible from the front of the White House.. any other changes that have been made or alterations to the White House during this administration should be removed.

Dear National Planning Commission:
It was very upsetting to see the East Wing demolished. I am opposed to the proposed ballroom. It would be an eyesore. This proposed ballroom is so large that it would overshadow the White House. Furthermore, the ornate design is not in keeping with the colonial style of the demolished East Wing, or the White House. This is the United States, not Napoleon's France. A building somewhat resembling Philadelphia's Independence Hall would look better. I feel a more modest redesign is in order. A structure that would be in keeping with our colonial origins would be mush more fitting than an oversized room with an ornate interior.
Thank you for the opportunity to express my opinion.

Shame on President Trump to think he has a King-like mandate to change landmarks and historic places owned by the American people. He lived in the White House once before for four years, and he is in again for four years, but he is just a temporary resident of our national property. As a landlord of the historic White House I'd first like to ask to have all the tacky gold painted nick knacks be removed from every room on the White House. Phony golden flourishes are a reminder of the King we overthrew 250 years ago and have no place in the home of our Democratically elected temporary resident.
Now, about the ballroom. There are plenty of places in the District of Columbia for balls and ceremonies to be held. Cancel the extravagance of an outsized ballroom and restore the historic East Wing to it's appropriate design. This time it should include a large sign that states "This Building is the Property of The American People. Mind Your Manners and Do What is Best for the Owners of the Building in Your Short Time Here."

Due to the improper adherence to process, destruction of a historic structure with the highest significance to the United States people & its story, it is of my firm opinion that this project should not be allowed to move forward & that reconstruction of the East Wing in exact detail be mandated by the ACHP & other governing bodies. The East Wing for many symbolized the seat of power for the First Lady, a structure that represented that women can make a difference in government even as we await the first elected female president. The destruction of the East Wing underscores our president's disdain for women in power and highlights in bright white spotlight that he believes he is above the law. The practice of renovation in the White House has processes, review committees, and required compliance to Secretary of Interior Standards - none of these processes were considered, used, and were wholly ignored. This is just one of many reasons I believe the committee should consider this project dead on arrival. If we as Americans, who care about historic structures are required to follow the SOI Standards when nominating, owning, or rennovating structures on the National Register of Historic Places, so should the president. In fact, that office should be the greatest defender of the historic places and structures that underpin our very identity as Americans. If our laws are so easily worked around, this becomes a chink in the armor of all that protects our history, our country's legacy, and represents the longstanding democracy we have fought to keep.

The ballroom is an abomination on many fronts. Singularly, I object to any tax dollars being used to support this space being built - including those which are being used to spend time even reviewing this abhorrent proposal. The space harkens back to czarist times, with lavish parties thrown and expended for on the backs of the unknowing and repressed commoner. Is this truly what our democracy is now expected to represent? Replace the seat of women's power in the People's House with a structure that represents debauchery, overindulgence, and mirrors palaces of dictators, kings, and queens in places that until recently were our enemies. This ballroom is out of character for not only the structure itself but the democratic values the structure represents. When we look at the SOI Standards, you cannot in good conscience look at this newly proposed ballroom and think that it does not change the integrity of the White House significantly, both in structure and significance to the American people at large.

I ask you to strongly rebuke this proposal and any others that come before the committee that do not represent a keeping with American values, based in standard. The criteria in the SOI Standards are laid out thus that they are used to judge for overall significance and integrity - these projects wholly diminish both at this site.

Keep the President and his office bound to law and precedent. Deny the construction of this defilement to the People's House.

A much smaller , relatively plain large room should suffice for any purpose where people need to gather and interact socially. Instead of "ballroom", I think "Gathering Room" should be the term used. NO GOLD DECOR OF ANY KIND! It shouldn't look like a palace. An architect may be able to design a few necessary offices integrated alongside the Gathering Room.

Please reconsider this project. I don't think anyone would disagree that the WH needs constant renovations and upkeep, as any building of its age would. I don't think anyone would disagree that the WH is residence, workplace, and historical site. I would hope that whoever manages the maintenance would attend to all of those purposes. I am saddened to see that lack of forethought that went into the demolition of the East Wing and the manner in which funding and permissions occurred. The White House reflects American strength, which at its best, does not need to oversized and flashy. We are at our best when we are steady and balanced, and the proposed addition does not convey that message at all. I'm also saddened to see the loss of the First Lady's Office. Recent First Ladies have had such robust programs to improve the lives of Americans, and losing that center does additional damage.

It is still, and always, the PEOPLE'S house. And the people don't want this.

I wish to register my objections to the proposed East Wing Modernization project. This should not be a vanity project for our current administration. MarALago style is suitable for those who like gilt and gaudiness. If people want to join private clubs celebrating that... then it is their prerogative. But the White House is the people's house, and its form and function should be determined by preservationists and designers who consider our history and future. That disqualifies the current administration which seems hell bent on turning national monuments into casinos catering to billionaires. What has already happened to other redecorated areas of the White House is an illustration of the crassness and contempt inherent in the current administration.

I am writing to express my disapproval and despair of the demolition of the East Wing of the White House. I believe it is illegal to ignore all rules and codes of such a beautiful historic property and President Trump plowed ahead and destroyed the building without asking US, THE PEOPLE what we thought of his giant ballroom plan. I am very heavy hearted that history has been lost without going through the proper channels to preserve what is normally catalogued with a project like this. I fear that no one really knows what happened to important relics here because it all happened so fast.
Thank you,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide suggestions from the people of the United States of America as to how to proceed with the reconstruction of the east wing of the White House.
Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible.
Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace.
It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics.
Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is.
The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding.
Please restore the Kennedy Rose Garden.
The new wing must not extend the previous footprint so as to preserve the symmetry.
Exterior additions should not overwhelm the original building.
It certainly would have been nice to consult with the People prior to the demolition of this!

The proposed ballroom inappropriately will dwarf the original iconic White House. The size has been steadily increasing and is not necessary to provide sufficient entertainment space, particularly in its height. It has been publicly stated that if it is built as currently proposed, MORE destruction of historic structures on the West Wing side will be necessary to balance the structure. That is an outright admission of its out of balance scale.

All this in addition to the blatant disregard for the approval process before the destruction began and the obvious attempt to pack the approval bodies with supplicants.

It is also unclear regarding funding sources and maintenance expenses. Nothing has been said about how to fund the West Wing destruction.

As a taxpayer, I respectfully request disapproval of the current proposal.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

I believe that the East Wing should be restored/reconstructed. The exterior dimensions and architectural style should be kept if possible. Physical plant updates were needed for the old East Wing and can be accomplished with an appropriate restoration. It is important to have any new construction reflect the scale and historical significance of the White House campus.

If a large ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.

Creating a 90,000 ballroom at the White House is absurd. Additions must be historic in design, and relative in size.
An addition of no more than one third of the 55,000 sq feet of the White House should be the maximum! Also, an architectural firm of renown should be engaged to ensure that the addition conforms with the historic value, size, and scope of our revered White House.

Dear NCPC,

I think a reasonable case can be made that having an adequate entertainment space at the White House is worthy of consideration.

However, there are procedures in place to ensure that the project is well thought out. In the case of the proposed "Ballroom" for the White House, this clearly is not the case.

The previously existing East Wing was torn down and some subsurface construction has already started with no approvals from either the NCPC or the US Commission of Fine Arts. This is just another example of the Trump Administration's disregard for law.

Please ensure that the ballroom is no larger than is required.
Please ensure that the addition does not detract from the existing White House.

It is also concerning that the project is being financed by contributions, primarily from companies that have business dealings with agencies of the US Government. At the very least, the names of the donors and the amounts contributed by these entities should be a matter of public record. Contributions over some reasonable amount, perhaps $1 million, dollars should be made public. Avoiding the public record for these contributions by splitting the donations into small amounts to avoid the cut-off, should be prohibited.

Sincerely,

John J. Landers

Please, do not let the current administration move forward with the plans to build a ballroom where the East Wing once stood on the White House complex.

Built in 1902 and expanded in 1942, the East Wing served as an important place for the First Lady and her staff and was where guests and visitors were welcomed.

The current administration has already demolished the Rose Garden and turned it into an unappealing picnic area.

The architectural style of the East Wing complemented that of the existing complex, while a ballroom would appear garish at best.

Restore the East Wing to it's previous beauty and functionality and maybe the American Public will sometime welcome the First Gentleman as its occupant.

Thank you for allowing me to comment.

The proposed ballroom addition is too large. It is almost twice the size of the White House itself, which will be dwarfed by this new building. How can we project power and discipline to the world if this administration is allowed to dwarf the singular symbol of said power and discipline? There is no need for a ballroom and the people of the Inited States don't want it.

The historic East Wing was demolished with no thought of the people of the United States, to whom are its rightful owners. As such, this ballroom cannot go forward as it would be the fruit of an act that went against the wishes of the American people.

Please listen to The People.

I submit herein my concerns as to the East Wing Modernization Project.

What is not of concern so much is the ballroom; it's fundamentally what lies beneath: an AI generated security facility to be run by Palantir. Public information has stated that Palantir requires 90,000 square feet for any such AI headquarters; note that the administration has stated that exactly a 90,000 square footprint is required for the "ballroom."

This project was never about a ballroom. It was always about what lies beneath.

Ownership of this security facility has never been any secret; for a commercial entity - and indeed, a partisan one at that - to control any, or much, of our nation's security - especially in its physical position relative to the White House bunker (previously known as the White House Fallout Shelter, during President John F. Kennedy's administration - a security program of which my father - Dept. of Agriculture - was included). Indicating thus, in times of national breach that any such private entity would be stationed within the walls of "The People's House" has been proven by past effect to be consequential to productive resolution for our democracy and its citizens, and not to benefit our democracy so much as the commercial entity.

I am an American citizen and I oppose the East Wing Modernization Project. The White House is the People's House; it belongs to the people of the United States and not the President. The proposed ballroom is entirely inconsistent with the architectural design of the People's House and will be used not for the American people but for a select elite few. This project is wasteful and an affront to the true needs of the great majority of Americans.

This project should not have been started without going through this process. I believe the East Wing should be restored to it's original configuration. An event space may be needed, but it does not have to be on the White House grounds. The illustrations I have seen show an oversized, tacky box sticking out of the side of the White House and overshadowing it. Scrap this plan and return the White House to what it is meant to be; the home of the president and his office, not a tacky showplace.

Greetings:

Thank you for allowing me to share my thoughts on the "Modernization Project" of the East Wing of the White House.

We, as Americans, do not realize how little opportunity we have to appreciate history. Our own country's history is only not quite 250 years old, and our naivete stands out to the rest of the world's citizens like a flashing neon sign. Even the older areas in the Northeastern United States, like Boston or Newport, Rhode Island, which have establishment signs from the early 1600s instill a sense of awe in those of us who are connected to our ancestors and our history. We have so little connection to it on this continent.

Because the White House itself is a historical landmark and a public building, it literally belongs to us, the citizens. The destruction of the East Wing in 2025 to make room for a gilded ballroom - which, now, several months later remains to be paid for so the building area stands in ruins - is an ugly metaphor for what is happening to our country and to the hearts of every American when we look at the People's House. A significant and beautiful piece of our past has been purposely ruined by someone who spun fanciful tales about what was supposed to replace it but now there is only rubble. It is a glaring and obvious symbol of the America of today.

Please rebuild and restore the East Wing of the White House, but only when it is safe to do so. The building itself will never be able to be replaced, but perhaps it will be one piece in a foundation to repair a very broken country purposely torn apart.

I appreciate your consideration.

It has always been my understanding that the White House belongs to the people of the United States of America. No one person has the right or the authority to make any change to that structure without the consent of the American people. The East Wing, that was destroyed, needs to be rebuilt to match the West Wing and create symmetry. Any and all other changes and/or additions to "Our" house should be removed immediately.

We are totally againist this project and the destruction of our national treasured White House - we are gravely saddened that this man has been allowed to destroy this treasure at his whim without any recourse. This Ballroom has nothing to do with our culture or history, they can't be trusted to care and preserve these monuments to our history and people, as they are purely being done in support of his own selfish vanity and desires at the expense of our culture and history. This needs to be stopped, so much damage has been done to the White House already - if continued and they are allowed to proceed we feel we could loose the current White House completely. As the damage already done is irreparable, you can't restore history and memories. Because the White House is a recognizable symbol of our government, I believe nothing should take away from its original design. A 90,000 sq ft ballroom would overpower the building and change its appearance in a totally undesirable way. The rationale for such an addition is also questionable, as occasions where attendance is 1000 or more are rare if not nonexistent. For those reasons, I firmly oppose this addition.

Lies and breaking the law is all we ever see from Trump. Our family is totally against it. We are independent voters. The Republicans are complicit in his lies and schemes, Dark times for our country.

Dear National Capital Planning Commission:

The White House is the People's House. Donald Trump is a only a temporary resident.

This is why I do not want to see this ballroom built. He did not get the traditional congressional approval or any input from the National Park Service, the National Capital Planning Commission or the Committee for the Preservation of the White House for the demolition. He has an administration and Republicans in Congress who turn a blind eye. He has been allowed to not divest in his businesses and to take “bribes” from corporations and foreign governments. It appears that he has no accountability.

The East Wing was demolished in days to make way for this 90,000 square foot ballroom with an initial cost of $200 million. It is now at $400 million, with donations coming from private donors, which raises significant ethics concerns of its own. It will dwarf the People's House.

We know that Donald Trump does not care about history and tradition. We just need to look at what he has done to the Rose Garden and the interior of the oval office.

This is America steeped in tradition and history and our decisions should reflect this. Not the whims of one man who wants his name on everything and to gold plate everything.

Please do everything in your power to stop the construction of the ballroom.

Thank you.

I do not believe the American people need a ballroom of that magnitude. A place to hold meetings/events of a substantial size is acceptable (maybe the size of the tent). There needs to be a room for the public to meet and the first lady to have like the old wing. We do NOT need to spend that much money building this ballroom while millions of American's do without health care and food and gas prices are high. Thank you for allowing my input.

Asking for public comments now is like closing the barn door after the horses are out: a little late. Maybe someone could cite the reason why a ballroom is necessary? Sounds really antebellum and definitely not something the average American (me) would use or care about or benefit from.

The demolition and proposed rebuilding of the East Wing of the White House is an abomination for multiple reasons. All previous Presidents respected the historical weight of that building. This man does not. This renovation is endemic of his disregard for the country, its history, its people -- anyone but himself. The White House belongs to the people, not the President. Please don't allow him to dismantle our history any further than he already has. Thank you.

I would like to share my disappointment in the razing of the White House East Wing without a comprehensive approved replacement plan. Going forward, I would like to see a reasonable, not expansive wing replacement in a style that compliments the White House architecture. The goal would be to include modern construction and utility upgrades that would reduce economic upkeep to the extent possible, while maintaining the historic look our country has come to identify with the home of our highest office holder. While my comments seem blatantly obvious to me on how to address this unfortunate turn of events, I appreciate the effort to reset the required (originally ignored) process. I also believe the original committed “donations” secured should be pursued in covering the costs of replacement.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

I am totally against the proposed addition of the ballroom to the White House. Such a building would destroy the architecture integrity of the White House. The White House is not a venue for weddings or other celebrations and never should be used as such.
The scale of the proposed ballroom is out of proportion to the rest of the structure and would look ridiculous. The White House does not need a ballroom. In addition, there are plans to add a second story to the West Wing. No president owns the White House. It is the peoples' house and all planned changes or additions need proper approved. The demolition of the East Wing was a tragedy. The demolition company should have asked to see papers of such approval and should also be held accountable. The White House just does not need a ballroom!

As someone working on making the congregation I serve ADA compliant, I understand the need for modernization.

I also understand the need to keep the project to scale and in the style of the existing building.

What has been shown on the news about "the ballroom" does neither. It outsizes the White House itself and the drawings make it look like a convention center draped in gold. As a country, this does not reflect our values.

The east wing should never have been torn down. It could and should have been modernized without demolishing it.

The Lincoln bathroom is now absurd. No one needs a toilet right with a window that goes the length of the toilet! The marble is a mockery of who Lincoln was and what he stood for as a leader.

The rose garden should not have been paved over.

Modernization did not require any of this.

Please bring in historians AND architects for any future projects on the White House.

Sincerely,
Rev. Clare L. Petersberger

The East Wing should be restored to its original plan and if necessary, update it with modern wiring, accessibility, etc. If an additional space is needed for events, such as a ballroom, it should be built somewhere else. The White House should be restored to its original version prior to the Trump administration. And by this, I mean, the East wing and the rose garden. The White House is the “people’s house” it should not be changed at the whim of any president. What has been done under the current administration is an insult to the people of the United States and the plans for a ballroom are vanity project for a man who has no respect or understanding of what it means to be president or to follow the constitution of the United States of America. It is the plain act of a man attempting to leave his mark on anything so he’ll be remembered. And he certainly will be remembered as one of the most vile individuals ever to sit as president. The funds raised for this so-called ballroom should be used to restore the East Wing! I urge this committee to vote down this ridiculous ballroom and to restore the East Wing to its original version now! Thank you for allowing us, the people and citizens of the United States, to comment on this plan.

There are so many things I want to say but I will keep it rated PG. The White House belongs to the people and there are rules that are to be followed as to how things are to be done. This administration has done none of that and destroyed part of our beloved house for the purpose of stroking his own ego to put up a ballroom that is not needed (nor a bunker) and certainly not to the scale of which he wants. This administration has destroyed he beauty that once was part of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. He has made a beautiful rose garden into a common concrete patio and torn down the East wing. I am totally against any sort of ballroom being built on the grounds and the East wing should be rebuilt as best as can be since the original masonry is forever gone. All construction equipment should immediately be removed from the White House grounds until a final decision has been made by NCPC. Please do not let any more of our history be destroyed just because it is not "glitzy" enough for one person.

The abhorrent, unnecessary need for this project requires careful planning to RESTORE the East Wing of the White House to pre-demolition status. It is obvious that best building practices including state of the art materials would be employed in the redesign of this beloved space. I can also envision modern/updated restroom/kitchen spaces. In no uncertain terms shall a ballroom of any size be included in the design. Square footage of the final wing shall not exceed that of the demolished structure.

The scale of this proposed addition is wrong for the site to the point of appearing ridiculous; when I initially saw images of the planned structure, I thought they were fake because I could not fathom that anyone would propose such a building in this location. No amount of professional architectural design and classical features can overcome the outsized scale of this building. It will diminish the prominence of one of our nation's most important historic buildings, the White House, and be a blight on the landscape of Washington, DC. As a historian of early America with a focus on early Washington, DC, I believe this project would subvert decades of thoughtful historical preservation and city planning, permanently harming the city's historic fabric. The symbolism of a ballroom to host exclusive gatherings, paid for by wealthy donors seeking political favors and looming over the people's house, is an affront to the ideals of the nation's founders, particularly George Washin! gton.

The proposed ballroom is ridiculous. This is the People's house, not a convention center or Las Vegas hotel. The East Wing of the White House must reflect dignity of the office and the United States, and no matter what the architecture, the proposed ballroom will not do that. The previous East Wing was sufficient to host any number of events, including diplomatic functions, so a space that dwarfs the White House itself is insane. The only purpose of this proposed ballroom is to host events for lobbyists and other people to ply their trade directly to the Executive Branch in wild schemes to violate the emoluments clause. Since it is necessary to rebuild the East Wing after its premature demolition, we must have something, but this insane edifice complex cannot be allowed.

The proposed modernization of the East Wing of the White House is a misuse of taxpayer dollars and reflects a troubling overreach of executive priorities. At a time when Americans are facing pressing economic challenges, allocating public funds to redesign or “modernize” a historic structure sends the wrong message. The East Wing is not simply office space — it is part of the architectural and historical fabric of our nation. Rather than altering it to reflect contemporary preferences, efforts should focus on restoring the building as closely as possible to its original blueprint. Preservation — not modernization — should guide any renovation, with a commitment to salvaging and utilizing rescued or historically appropriate materials whenever possible. Stewardship of public property requires restraint, respect for history, and fiscal responsibility.

Please, restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.

The White House is the people’s house. Again, please make the restoration of the west wing as historically accurate as possible! Restore the historic rose garden and make this the people’s house as it is meant to be.
Please maintain the historical integrity inside and out, bringing it up to code and provide the offices of the First Lady and staff, restoring the inside as well, back to its original decor, architecture and exquisite craftmanship, with all the historical artifacts from former fist ladys, and NO GOLD extras.
Please return the Rose garden and Jackie Kennedy garden as they were.
If that requires demolishing the newly installed patio well, so be it!

Please respect the existing historic White House building. A ballroom that may be appropriate for a hotel may not be appropriate for this historic shared national treasure. Designs which show a wing equal in size to the existing Executive Mansion destroy the classical balance of the building.

If more space is needed for special events, there may be other options. One option may be to bury the ballroom underground and have a smaller proportional entrance at the surface.

I have been deeply concerned regarding this addition to the White House. Many comments proceeding the demolition stated no demolition would take place, the structure would not take away from the integrity of the White House and several other assertions. While there may be a need for larger facilities, there is no need for a structure to resemble Versailles. There has been long standing tradition of this complex being the Peoples House and I feel “we the people” strongly object to the plans as they are being presented. We have already been subjected to the loss of the Rose Garden and paving of the lawn for a gawdy patio, all without the proper planning and authority in my opinion. Raising $400 million dollars for this monument to greed and ego is absurd. The billionaires who have donated to this project are expecting favors and thus like so many other things in this administration reeks of favoritism and graft. Thank you.

This project is ill conceived and demolition was done without consent from the American People. It is strictly a vanity project for the current President and I oppose the use of the space for a lavish ballroom that has no regard for the aesthetics of the White House complex.The demolition has already destroyed historic magnolia tress and the Jacqueline Kennedy garden, plus the history of the building itself.

The fact that this was planned and implemented without consent of the citizens of the country is a red flag that the planners knew the majority of the people would not approve. Since the demolition has already commenced, other plans to rebuild this part of the White House should be discussed with care for the story it will tell for history, and approved by us, the citizens..

Dear Respected Committee Members,

The destruction of the East Wing of the White House was a travesty that should not have happened without over site and input before it was destroyed. The White House is the people's house. The destruction of the East Wing of the White House is just one example of actions of this president who continues to ignore and defy procedures and policies. It speak volumes to the graft that is taking place in this administration.

Now that it has been demolished it is imperative that it be restored to its former beauty and not be built as a craven monument to a despicable man. This is an opportunity to update and improve the structure but should in no way overshadow the composition of the completed White House building. The current plan to build a massive ballroom is disproportionate to the architectural grace of the White House and I believe is only being done to build a bigger bunker and take bribes from the president's rich friends.

The cost to this country and its people is tragic and makes us an embarrassment on the world stage as is everything this administration does.

I pay with my taxes to maintain its beauty and integrity of this national monument. I do not want some garish, ill placed, gilded "ballroom" to sit on the property I own.

Most Sincerely,

Sunny Powel

Dear Planning Commission,

The East Wing is part of the "people's house," and changes should be reviewed by this commission, preferably before initiation. Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring, and other infrastructure. Make any possible interior and exterior changes to comply with ADA accessibility guidelines. Make the necessary changes, but maintain the wing's historical accuracy as much as possible. If a ballroom is required, consider constructing it on a different site. The Rose Garden should be restored. I'm not sure this is within your scope of work.
Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding. Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to help shape the decision. I reiterate, the White House is the people's house. Please do not move forward with the proposed ballroom project. While it seems reasonable to increase space for state dinners and offices somewhat, the proposed project is too big as it dwarfs the original White House building. The East Wing renovation should not exceed the size of the original White House in height or square footage and should be no more than 2/3 it's size for appropriate scale. This should provide ample room for state dinners and office space without wasting precious taxpayer dollars and creating the appearance of pay for play by soliciting donations in exchange for political favors. And please, no tacky gold silliness stuck to the walls everywhere. Please decorate the space to match the traditional decor of the White House prior to 2025.

The East Wing needs to be rebuilt and renovated as close to original plans as possible. The current President needs to pay for all costs associated with accomplishing this. All costs to plan, rebuild and renovate will come from the President's own, personal coffers. Any monies that was spend on the demolition of the East Wing will be reimbursed, by the current President, out of his own personal coffers. He did NOT get proper authorization for any demolition of the previously existing East Wing, and it is NOW HIS RESPONSIBILITY to fix what he created, NO donations, NO taxpayer dollars or grants.

If he wants a ballroom, he can build one with his own money on one of his golf courses.

Please do not allow Trump to build his gaudy monster ballroom. It is a tribute to his own enormous ego, and nothing more. It would not suit the dignified history of our nation's most recognizable building, the White House. Nor would it be a contribution to the "people's house" since no regular citizen would ever be invited to use it. Instead, I propose that Trump be ordered to return the East Wing to its former glory, undoing all the damage that he has inflicted on this precious, irreplaceable historic site.

The East Wing of the White House is not being 'modernized,' it has been demolished. You can't 'modernize' something that no longer exists, except as rubble.

The President, who ordered the demolition of the East Wing of the White House without asking anyone's consent, wants to replace it with a gigantic ballroom that would dwarf the White House proper. This would be an abomination and should not be allowed to proceed. It should be left to either Congress or some future Administration to propose a replacement for the East Wing that is more in keeping with the East Wing that was, and is no longer.

I am writing to officially register my opposition to the proposed ballroom addition to the White House by the Trump administration. The scale of the addition (both in footprint and in height) is out of proportion to the original structure and will overwhelm and diminish the sanctity of this historically significant residence. The main structure (iconic White House) should remain the largest component of the complex, both in terms of footprint and height. Furthermore, the current administration had no right to bulldoze the preexisting east wing.

I feel that the project is too large for the scale of the White House. I am concerned that a “ballroom” is not congruent with the home of the leader of a democratic republic, as ballrooms are elements in palaces. Therefore the scale should be reduced and decorative elements should be modest to reflect a more humble design. The good lead that the president seeks to favor should be eschewed in favor of more classic and humble coloring and design.

The White House is a historic building, the People's House. We the People do not need a 90,000 square foot ballroom as part of our house.. If there is an actual need for such a building, it should be separate and apart, not part of the White House or its grounds. I am shocked that the East Wing was demolished without any oversight. Again, we own that house. The current resident is temporary.

Making small changes, such as improving the tennis court or a swimming pool, that do not affect the actual structure of the White House, are fine. Structural changes should never be done without public agreement.

I am against the East Wing Modernization Project. The East Wing should be rebuilt as it was before, same style, same functions.

I am absolutely horrified that the traditional East Wing was bulldozed without a thought to preservation of the history and tradition of that edifice! The proposed ballroom area is too big and gaudy to serve as an addition to Tge People’s House. It should not be as tall as the White House or as large as has been proposed. I would prefer it to be rebuilt EXACTLY as it was before, perhaps with bunker modernization. The People don't need a huge ballroom that few of us will ever see. Trump's destruction of the East Wing of the White House to be replaced by a grand gold tinged ballroom is antithetical to democracy. It was his decision alone. We the people were not asked to participate at any level on the destruction of part of our beloved White House to be replaced with a huge, out of scale, ballroom. We should not alter it significantly for anything other than truly necessary reasons. It is our history, both good and bad, and we must maintain it for the generations to come. We the people do not need -nor did we ask for- a garish ballroom. It’s despicable that this project proceeded without following the proper channels. 1. Size: footprint and height. The proposed State Ballroom building is grossly disproportionate to the core White House and West Wing.

2. Access: parking. Presumably the 650 guests (seated) or 1000 guests (standing) will mostly arrive by car, the nearest Metro stations being Farragut West and McPherson Square. Events will require support of 200-300 servers and additional security staff. Total 1000-1300. Where's the parking for the majority of these people? This ought to be part of the plan.

3. Access: security. Access to the facility, whether or not for Presidential events, will require security screening at least at the level required for the White House, the West Wing, and the Executive Office building. Has adequate space been identified in the building design to accommodate security screening for 650-1000 guests?

4. Operation: kitchen facilities. The present White House kitchen can provide seated meals for 140 guests. The new facility is intended to feed nearly five times as many seated guests. Are the intended kitchen facilities adequate to this magnitude of food service?

In sum, the proposed State Ballroom grossly distorts the historic balance of the White House overall, and the project design is unclear as to the building's provision for secure access, parking, food service, and other event support for 650-1000 guests.

I think it is entirely acceptable to update electrical services, and modernize to allow for ADA requirements, but please restore the East Wing to its previous footprint. The destruction of the East wing is sad. I'm glad my child was able to see our country's White House in tact prior to this monstrosity that they have planned. It's disgusting that a "party room" should be the focus of our White House.

The rendering is awful & I hope the project scale is greatly reduced so as to not take away the focus of the prior layout of the exterior of the White House. Since the public was not asked for their opinions prior to the destruction of the East wing I can only hope a compromise can be made with the new construction.

I know my comments won't matter but at least I can tell my young child I made an attempt at preserving our country's history.

As a citizen of Alabama, I strongly oppose any proposal that would further demolish or substantially alter portions of the White House. I am appalled that the current resident thought it was acceptable to demolish and destroy OUR house with zero impunity, repercussions or consequences. The current administration would do well to remember that The White House belongs to the American people, not to any temporary occupant, and its preservation must take precedence over personal vision or legacy projects.

I urge decision-makers to reject any plan that compromises the historic integrity of this national symbol. Work on the property should be strictly limited to restoration of existing exterior dimensions and architectural style, along with necessary modernization of infrastructure, safety systems, and ADA accessibility improvements where feasible. All updates should follow long-established processes for historically sensitive changes, ensuring preservation, not reinvention, remains the guiding principle.

If additional event or gathering space is deemed necessary, while I feel strongly it is NOT, it should be constructed elsewhere in Washington, D.C., rather than altering or overshadowing the historic structure itself. There is no justification for sacrificing the character of one of our nation's most important landmarks for convenience or spectacle.

I further urge leaders to remember that the White House is the people's house, entrusted to each administration only temporarily, and it must not be treated as a personal project or monument. Do NOT allow the President, now or ever to build a monument or likeness unto himself upon these or any other federally recognized lands.

Finally, historically appropriate features and landscaping, including Jackie Kennedy's Rose Garden, should be restored and preserved. Recent exterior additions or decorative elements that detract from the building's traditional dignity should be removed, and future renovations should reflect restraint and respect for history, not personal taste or trend.

The American public deserves stewardship that protects, rather than diminishes, this irreplaceable national treasure.

The project is titled "East Wing Modernization Project" but it isn't, is it? The East Wing has already been arbitrarily destroyed, not to support the people, not from any need, but because of one man's whim.

And the proposed ballroom is an excess, not only size, but also in style. Out country's building have always reflected both simplicity and dignity. They demonstrate restrained elegance as befitting a powerful nation that doesn't have to drape itself in gold. The new ballroom is tacky and gaudy—a better fit for a gambling casino than a government building. Only someone with incredibly bad taste would think this building is an asset. If it's built, we will eventually have to tear it down for the ugly monstrosity it is.

I am actually astonished any architect would sign their name to this project. I guess some architects just have no self-respect.

It would be to everyone's best interest not to build this ugly thing. Because if it does get built, it will be torn down in the future and something better adapted to the land be built. What a waste of taxpayer money.

The East Wing Modernization Project should reflect the original scale and design of the previous wing. The project should conform to current ADA standards, incorporate the latest technology and provisions to make it "future proof" so further expensive renovations won't be necessary. Since this is truly the "People's House", it should be open to the public, and be used for public events, not as a gilded set piece for the political Elite. The interior and exterior details and decorative aspects should harmonize with the rest of the White House, an understated elegance reflective of the long history and temporary nature of any single administration, not a monument to bloated excess and the personal taste of one occupant.

Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes. Do not include any gold filigree that is currently covering the White House.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city. Has anybody justified the actual need for a ballroom? How large of a ballroom would be needed anything at the current location would need to remain within the previous sizes. The White House and connecting east and West Wing were symmetrically pleasing and should be that way in the future. This is not a chance to take bribes. This is for the purpose of restoring what the temper tantrum tore down.
The White House is the people's house.
Also, we don't need a new arc and we don't need the current presidents name on anything else also all of the precious items that were in the east wing can they be recovered and returned to their places also, we should include something that would prevent this from ever happening again.

Thank you for allowing citizens the opportunity to express their opinions on how OUR historic buildings are being demolished and altered. I am incredibly angry that President Trump was even allowed to demolition the East wing and destroy all its historical significance without any type of consent or approval from the American public. That being said, I do not agree with his current plans to build this oversized, gold gilt laden ball room which will no doubt be a tribute to himself and not the America citizens. I do not know what the needs are for such a structure but if in fact it is needed, then the construction of it should follow all necessary protocols to ensure that the size is consistent with the White House and will not overshadow it. It should be built and furnished following strict guidelines along with other similar historical building in our nation's capital and not be designed and furnished as to the wishes of one man. Especially when that man has no regards for the wishes of the American people, no respect for the historical significance of our historical structures and does not even have the support of most of the American people. I would like to see several things happen after the wanton destruction of the East Wing of the White House and the adjacent Rose Garden. First, I believe that Donald Trump must be held responsible for the iconic Rose Garden , the historic East Wing of the White House, the missing pictures of the original decor and the portraits of the First Ladies who graced the offices created for their use. To not do so allows the disrespect for this building, and the chauvinistic disrespect for the women who have served this nation to be tacitly approved. He should pay for the disrespect he has shown for the People's House.
Then, the first priority is to rebuild the offices for the First Ladies and First Gentlemen to come. This is a recognition for the tremendous contributions they give freely to these United States. Remembering the use of the building and the events held in the Rose Garden as testimonies to the role of beauty, grace and elegance in the life of this nation, part of our responsibility is to maintain the most recognized structure in America. Allowing for improvements to match current building codes, and to fill expanding uses, the East Wing, at DTs expense, should be restored for the purposes for which it was intended. All portraits, files, mementoes and other historical artifacts must also be restored. Further, laws and policies must be instituted to prevent this from happening again. Sincerely, The Rev.Susanne Nazian

The White House, with its symmetry, had long been a symbol of the balance of power between the presidency and the other branches of the government. At no other time has this balance of power been so sacrificed, and the plans for the mega-ballroom attached to The Peoples' House is a glaring example of how this president has plans to sacrifice a national treasure to his own whims. The companies and wealthy who have donated to this plan, to gain favors from the president, in other words, bribes, should ashamed. When there are so many dire issues needing attention and money from the government, focusing on making an ugly palace out of The Peoples' House, is a travesty. Not only does the planned huge extension to the White House look grotesque, but it flies in the face of history and the needs of present day America.

I think the East Wing should not have been torn down without first getting approval and submitting an architectural plan. This is a historic building and needs to have plans that are aligned with its historic significance. I live in a historic town and my house is circa 1890. To change anything about our house requires us to to present a plan to the Historic Commission for approval and then get a permit. That the East Wing was summarily torn down without any review process is an affront to those of us who play by the rules.

Besides, the people of this country own that house, it does not belong to the President. A 90,000 square foot ballroom sounds really wrong for our White House. Its not like any of us regular people will ever be invited!!

And I don't like how the project started at $200 million and has crept to $400 million. What stops it from becoming $500 million? And since this White House appears to trade favors for $$, what are the people who have donated money getting?

Respectfully,
Madeleine Yates

A 90,000 sq foot ballroom is a poor use of taxpayer dollars and as a taxpayer and a US citizen, I outright reject this idea. Instead, restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. Restore any safe bunkers below, but protecting the plans from foreign assets. Sadly these have probably already been compromised. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.
The White House is the people's house. We don't need a ballroom.

To whom it may concern,
As a tax paying citizen and lover of American history, I resent all work being done to the White House, Capital Building or the Mall. These are simply vanity projects and serve zero purpose for the American people. This administration has already destroyed the East Wing. I am pleading with the powers that be to save the People's House from their vanity projects. America does not need a ballroom they will never see. This is a waste of funds. This administration cannot be trusted when they say it will all be paid by donors. These "donors" will now own Washington DC.
This destruction will be your professional legacy. What a sad thing. Please….do the right thing for Washington and for the American people. If they don't matter to you….do it to save your legacy. So you can look your grandchildren proudly in the face and say "I stood in the breach when DC was threatened". Sounds dramatic….but what is happening in America calls for nothing less.
Thank you. Thank you for doing your job and not 47's bidding. Your descendants will thank you.

I believe the east wing should be restored to its previous style and use. I do not believe we need a larger ballroom than we previously had. I also think decoration of this wing should be consistent with what was removed: no garish gold accents are necessary. Any renovation needs to be in keeping with the previous style. This is the people's house, it is a White House. Furthermore I think President Trump ought to be replacing this using his own funding. He had no business using taxpayer dollars to tear down the existing structure. And at a time when people are going hungry and cannot afford their healthcare insurance taxpayers should not have to be putting the bill for something that was not necessary. Thank you for taking my comment.

All construction on this project should be stopped immediately. The destruction of a historical portion of the “People’s House” is a disgrace to our country’s rich history of freedom for all. Whatever damage has been done should be corrected and a beautiful lawn with a plaque should be erected in the area indicating the history of the East Wing and why it was destroyed.

As a tax paying citizen of the United States I object to the destruction of the East Wing of the White House for the creation of a ballroom. The White House belongs to the citizens of this country not the current occupant or his family. I believe this entire enterprise had been done illegally. Congressional approval was not saught nor given nor was approval of the American citizens saught or given. The NCPC and the historical society should be the ONLY groups who have ANY input, with the suggestions of the public, on the PEOPLE'S HOUSE. Since the demolition was done unilaterally, Trump should be responsible for ALL the funding. The outside design should compliment the previous structure with updated electrical, plumbing, heating/air conditioning. It should be ADA compliant. This is not a palace so none of the over the top gold gaudy decorations and interior design. I don't object to a larger formal dining room for state dinners but with tasteful decorating. The Trump Administration should no longer have ANY say, just provide the money. This is not to be a replica of Mar La Go.
I also feel that the Rose Garden be returned to the way it was. I believe this was removed without any input of your groups at whose expense.

The White House is the people's house! The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

The reconstruction of the East Wing should be similar in architectural style, size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

scale is where most bad projects fail.

The White House does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center, I'm sure DC has plenty of those. There are many large buildings in that immediate area that, I'm sure must have large areas that could be used as ballrooms.
The White House, The People's House, is not a palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
The occupant of The White House is not a king, he works for the people and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, style, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure.

Having grown up during the Kennedy era, I was mesmerized while watching Jackie Kennedy tour us through the White House. Widely considered the most recognizable and symbolic building in the United States, I was heartbroken when a wrecking ball ripped down an entire wing, with the realization that it would be replaced with an oversized ballroom that would dwarf the original structure. The size is completely out of scale and would forever alter the gracious appearance of our beloved White House. The previous ballroom was obviously large enough to host Princess Diana and John Travolta. It is absolutely unnecessary for a new one to be that large. Please ensure that the new structure balances the existing structure.

While I am glad to have a way to share my feelings on this project, I am deeply disturbed and disappointed that we the people had no say in the demolition that has already taken place and can never be made whole again.

I do not know what type of gathering space is needed for OFFICIAL White House activities but I can tell you a gold gilded monstrosity of this magnitude is more fitting for kings and palaces; it seems inconsistent with who we are as Americans.

The timing, while us regular folks are struggling to keep gas in the car, food on the table and afford our health care, is absolutely tone deaf. I believe it is a lie to say private "donations" are funding this. Donations are given without strings attached and without the expectation of repayment in any form; I am confident this is billionaire quid pro quo.

One man should not have this level of unchecked control over what does not belong to him as an individual. This is the people's house and the people should have been consulted long before now.

I am APPALLED at the destruction of OUR White House.

There must NEVER be a “ballroom” allowed.
Especially one almost twice as big as what is left of our White House.

As depicted, it is tacky, grotesque, and a waste of our money. It is proposed to cost much more than originally stated, and will overshadow our House. It adds NOTHING to the White House and is in no way necessary. Plenty of state dinners have been held (many in the East Wing) without that huge monstrosity that is being proposed.

The East Wing must be rebuilt. I would prefer we close to the original plans as possible, but I realise that might be very difficult.

Right now, it’s a huge, ugly wound. We must restore OUR house. Rebuild the East Wing in some way.

Growing up in a DC suburb, I had the opportunity to visit the East Wing many times. Two of my children, one who went to GW and the other who worked for the NRC, also toured and attended events there. It was heartbreaking to see the casual demolition of a part of the White House that contained so much history. It is also infuriating that the contributions of the First Lady, beginning with Eleanor Roosevelt, be reduced to rubble without a thought of their significance. Jackie Kennedy’s amazing restoration of the White House, as shown in her 1961 documentary, was a testament to the importance of maintaining the history of The People’s House. I have read several stories about the intentions of architects who rebuilt the White House after it was destroyed by the British in 1812. Maybe it is folk lore, but it seems their goal was to create a modest residence for our President and not a palace for a king. The East Wing has been called the heart of the White House, balanced with the brain in the West Wing. I hope for a complete restoration of this balance, both literally and metaphorically.

Regarding the proposed ballroom, why now and why so huge?
We (the United States) have managed to go 225 years without it. We are not some European monarchy and the White House is not, nor was it ever intended to be a palace.
I understand and applaud the need for renovations to keep the White House safe, but not random ideas to add unnecessary and, most likely underutilized space that will destroy the aesthetic appeal of the current structure.
Please have the current president restore what he has destroyed and leave the building as he found it.

As an Architect of almost 70 years old, I have spent my entire life and career trying to reconcile the needs for modern development alongside of existing environmental conditions (I worked predominantly in the UK where conservation zones and Grade II listed buildings are the norm) and of course respecting ANY adjacent or protected historic structures. In my opinion, the current "design" presented by the Administration would be an utter disaster in terms of scale alone when viewed against the Whitehouse itself.

If this has to go ahead, I would like to see the proposal reduced considerably in volume and scale with architecture that respects closely the original building.
In terms of detailing and design, please can we NOT resort to the current predilection for adding tacky gold leaf decoration to any / all forms and surfaces?
Also- if a more modern solution is explored,(which is possible if sensitively handled), is there any opportunity I wonder, to at least recess the form into the landscape and possibly explore sustainable/green roofing, which could give back external garden space to replace that which has been so thoughtlessly destroyed?

The peoples' house deserves a much much better solution.

Hi-

I am writing to say that I oppose the commandeering and destruction of the People's House by the current administration.

The White House is not Trump's private residence to do with as he pleases. There are regulations, rules and a process to follow for such historical entities, and none of those were even considered. The White House is not meant to serve as a Presidential memorial or to boost an ego.

The corruption, both financial and procedurally, needs to be held to account and haulted. I ask that all future reconstruction follow the rules and protocols already set forth and that the current administration be forced to cease the destruction of our American heritage and property and abide by the law.

Thank you.

To the NCPC, I would like to express my distain for the off the charts disproportional planned replacement for the East wing of the White House. This is the Peoples' House, and should be treated as such, rather than how the current administration is acting as if it is owned by just the president.

James Hoban designed a symmetrical White House to reflect the dignity and stability of the American government. For the most part, subsequent additions have respected that symmetry and scale. At nearly twice the size, a 90,000 square foot addition to the East wing will dwarf the symbolic original building and sadly ruin the symbolic symmetry of the People's House. I am also concerned about the interior decor being made to look like a palace instead of the classically modest look the White House has maintained for two centuries.
Any changes to the symbolic historic buildings in our nation's capital should be coordinated and approved by this commission, which was formed to protect and preserve all of the peoples' buildings and distinctive layout of Washington DC.

Unless a President is able to provide concrete proof of multiple situations where there was not adequate space for event activities, no changes should be allowed. Since no previous President, to the public's knowledge, has experienced problems with event venue sizing, it seems that the burden of proof on the current President should be very substantial.

In the event that such proof cannot be substantiated, President Trump should be required to restore the East Wing to its original state. Where are the historical art objects and furnishings from our country's history? The White House is the people's house. It is the single most important, most recognized building in the United States government. It's historically significant, which is a vast understatement. Part of this building, the east wing, was torn down on a whim of the President of the United States. This should never have happened. Unfortunately, there's no way to take it back, so how do we move forward? I think it should be built back to look essentially as it did before. Expand it slightly, with emphasis on the word slightly, to provide more area to be able to have state dinners or whatever entertainment might be needed if that's a concern. I do not feel that a humongous ballroom is appropriate or needed.
Whatever is done, needs to be done with the full approval of the people of the United States of America to whom this house belongs. Not just to satisfy the whims of the current occupant of that house. I also feel that the current occupant of the house should be the one that has to pay for the restoration personally, because he is the one responsible for destroying what was there.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Physical destruction of the White House is not the sole prerogative of any president. The destruction of the East Wing before allowing for full review and approval by all stakeholders, including the American people, who collectively own the building, was both illegal and unethical. Americans never asked for a "ballroom," nor do most of us want one. The question remains, what should be done to rectify the widespread damage that has occurred?

For the East Wing Modernization Project, I recommend rebuilding the East Wing exactly as it appeared before, using photographs and architectural drawings of the original construction. As for modernization, construction should emphasize energy efficiency and wiring that accommodates modern day uses. Construction materials and approaches should be chosen to minimize the impacts of climate warming gases and environmental impacts. All costs should be borne not by the taxpayers, but by those who made the initial decision and order to destroy the historical East Wing.

Thank you.
Mark Wilson

I believe the modernization of the East Wing needs to restore the outside dimensions and style of the original East Wing. The interior should be updated to be ADA compliant, and the electrical and mechanical systems updated. This building had significant historical meaning to the citizens of the United States and should not have been destroyed without their input, especially without following required guidelines and laws.

A ballroom should be constructed elsewhere, not on the grounds of the White House. The size of the planned structure overwhelms the entire site. Please restore the White House East Wing to it's original look.

Public Comment on Project #8733 – White House East Wing Modernization

To the Commissioners of the NCPC,

As a citizen who deeply values the historic and symbolic integrity of Washington, D.C., I am writing to express my strong opposition to the current scale of the proposed ballroom addition at the White House. The White House is, first and foremost, the "People's House," and any structural changes must respect its status as a shared national monument, not just a functional venue.
My visits to the capital have always centered on admiring the White House for its iconic Palladian symmetry and neoclassical design. The introduction of a 90,000-square-foot structure—nearly double the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence—would fundamentally destroy this balance.

I urge the Commission to require that:

Scale and Subordination: Any new structure must remain subordinate to the main residence. A building that exceeds the footprint and massing of the original home diminishes the White House as the central focus of the campus.

Footprint Preservation: Development should be restricted to the footprint of the prior building to maintain the historical spatial relationship between the residence and its wings.

Symmetry: Any addition must harmonize with the existing architectural landscape rather than overwhelming it.
The White House belongs to the American people. We must ensure that its historic character is preserved for future generations rather than being permanently altered by an oversized addition.

This building needs to restored to its original condition. The process by which it was ‘destroyed’ was illegal, and a theft from all Americans. No one asked for or wanted this to take place. There appears to be many code violations in this project. We do not need this ballroom. If a ballroom were to be built, the proper protocols must be followed. Taking the control of our precious landmarks is a crime, and Trump should be prosecuted and forced to pay for the rebuilding of our property.

Restore the East Wing to its original footprint. If additional space is needed for special events such as a State dinners, interior design could be modified for reasonable space. Anything larger should be at an offsite location. Interior decor should be in line with historical precedence, no ostentatious or gaudy extras not in keeping with the overall decor and the historic nature of the White House. Thank you for considering us in this process.

To the esteemed members of the National Capital Planning Commission:
The White House is the People's House. It is the temporary residence of our Public Servant-in-Chief and its design should reflect the democratic republican values of the United States of America: balanced, proportional, open to the public to the greatest extent possible, and transparent in its construction and spending. The White House does not need a ballroom; showiness and opulence have no place in the People's House.
The new East Wing should be proportionate to the rest of the White House rather than overwhelm it. It should include any necessary upgrades to wiring and other infrastructure. It should also be designed to physically accomodate and welcome visitors of all ages and abilities.
Thank you for your consideration of my comments.
Sincerely,
Jacqueline Cremos

President Benjamin Harrison proposed a dramatic and guilded expansion to the White House during his 1889 to 1893 term. Thankfully it never happened as it would have irreparably destroyed the classic elegance of the People's House. The current proposed expansion is a monstrosity that also must be stopped. The White House belongs to the people of the United States and not to Donald Trump. No president should be allowed to construct a Domus Aurea.

Trump's destruction of the East Wing of the People's House, the White House, is both folly and egotistical. Creating a gigantic structure that will leave the rest of the White House in its shadow symbolically sends the message that the partying of the rich and powerful is more important that the work needed to be done for Americans of all stripes. Will he be permitted to put his name on the ballroom as well? Will he gild it in gold as he has done to so much of the White House? When he tore down the East Wing as bit of my heart, and that of many Americans, sank as a part of our House was defaced. Please do not permit this to continue!

The White House is the People's House occupied on a temporary basis by the First Family. No significant modifications should be made to the White House that serve one person's sense of aesthetics or "need". The East Wing should be restored to its former architectural form and function with modernization of mechanical, electrical and security systems. In the history of the USA, there has never been a "need" for a 90,000 square foot ballroom monstrosity to "serve" the White House, and there is no need for one now. As with other aspects of law and procedure, the Trump administration ignored the laws and regulations that govern significant modifications to federal public buildings. This is not acceptable on any level.

Not only should the East Wing be restored to its former self, the rose garden should be restored, the hideous marble bathroom should be restored to its former self and all of the gilding applied to all parts of the White House to serve Trump's vanity and sense of style should be removed.

The White House has never looked as tacky as it currently does, and all to stroke the vanity of a single megalomaniac with horrendous taste.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

As to the White House, restore the East Wing using existing exterior dimensions and architectural style, update the interior and make it ADA accessible where possible. Follow any process needed for making it historically sensitive.

A Ballroom is NOT needed. There are plenty of venues available to be used in the area. A large conference room may be needed, but should be constructed elsewhere.

The White House is the people’s house, and the President only a temporary occupant.

I am vehemently against the proposed replacement for the destroyed East Wing. The destruction was the action of one man's biased and uneducated decision and the wishes of the American people were not consulted, nor were the guidelines set for historical buildings in our nation's capital.
This project is an exorbitant waste of public funds at a time when our economy is already cutting back on services such as health care, education, and food assistance.
We can do so much better than build a monument to one person's ego. I am ashamed about what he has done to the People's House.

I am against the building of Trump's ballroom. He's already destroyed a large part of the White House complex, and this would only compound the damage. The huge ballroom would dwarf the White House, the people's house, the symbol of the United States, and it would make the White House look ridiculously small by comparison. Holding large events in the greater DC area not only supports DC businesses, but it gets the president and his political guests off the White House grounds and into the public eye, where the president should be. The White House is not a fortress where the president can hide away - it's a house.

Restore the East Wing to its previous construction.

The White House is NOT a party event venue, nor should it be treated as such. While meetings ARE held at the White House, the addition of a "ballroom" would present a dangerous security breach access point. Hence, no, the East Wing should be restored, with additional attention to security protections included in this rebuild.

As for "where" to host large groups exceeding 1000 attendees for Approved Political Events, I suggest consulting the 200+ years of documented records for where large events have been securely held previously. Or have Carpenter's Hall, The Liberty View, The National Constitution Center, Mount Vernon, The Jefferson, and Hilton Chicago all become "nope" venue locations?

The proposed $300-$350 million garish White House ballroom project is unnecessary and lacking clear authorization, potentially impacting a historic, protected public building. This is not private property.

It is important to remember that the White House is a public building, and decisions regarding its future should consider the perspectives and interests of all Americans.

The 90,000-square-foot, multi-story structure is too large. It will overwhelm and dwarf the existing historic and iconic White House.

The alarming and sneaky process of using private donor funds to bypass federal review for this project raises concerns about transparency and honoring proper procedures.

The brazen and unauthorized demolition of the East Wing destroyed part of our American heritage; the proposed design is vulgar, garish, and crass. An embarrassment. The embodiment of this vulgar and ugly period in our democratic history, and we do not need to be saddled with this gargantuan eyesore for generations to come.

This ballroom raises legitimate questions about priorities and motivations. It is important to consider the ethics of allowing substantial private funding for changes to the "People's House," whether such actions are even legal, and whether they align with public interest.

This project exemplifies this administration's misplaced priorities and unethical, sleazy tactics.

It is not his house; it is ours, and he is destroying it.

The East Wing demolition is an act of violence against the American people. It was not permitted.

The Capitol grounds are sacred, and bringing in bulldozers, which by the way, the occupier of the White House said he loved because it meant he'd make money on a new building soon, has hit us in our heart. The White House is our house, not the plaything for one mad authoritarian dictator.

The person who ordered this act should be punished to the full extent of the law.

The new ballroom wasn't even more than a figment of the man's imagination when he ordered the demolition. The photo he showed for the new room/building was an existing room in a building in Europe. He had no plans, no permits, and no concern for the property which includes the underground rooms there where he did the demolition.

The new vision for a building is out of scale, and a casino dance hall is not appropriate for the capital White House property. I want this act of violence to be stopped, and a plan to be made that reflects what the people think is best moving forward.

To whom it may concern:

I hereby submit my written comments about the purposed 90,00sq ft ballroom on the grounds of the White House.

I believe it to be a travesty of architectural design,, scale and style. The size of this monstrosity is totally not in keeping with the architecture of the White House itself and it is also completely impractical given the tremendous increase in the number of people it is proposed to accommodate. The kitchen would have to be completely enlarged to be able to handle the increase in meal preparation for the added numbers of guests and just about every other aspect involved would have to be increased.

The scale and size would throw the entire appearance of the White House off balance and it would look gargantuan.

This administration MUST be held to the same standards as every other Administration in our history..they must NOT be allowed to just knock down, dig up or destroy whatever they want without following the proper channels as EVERY OTHER PRESIDENT HAS DONE. That blatant disregard for the standards, rules and practices should be enough to deny them to continue with this architectural disaster and the entire project should be shut down and not be permitted to proceed.

I am 77 yeas old and have lived through many administrations of both parties...I have NEVER seen anything so destructive both literally and figuratively as this one and they should be stopped before they do irreparable harm and damage to OUR monuments and buildings. The White House is the PEOPLE'S house it is NOT the property of whatever President happens to reside in it at any given time. Please hold them accountable and make them follow the rules like everyone else has. Once you give them an inch, they take EVERYTHING.

Thank you for your time and consideration of my opinions as a tax-paying American citizen.

The White House is a treasured landmark belonging to the people of the United States. It is only a temporary residence of the current President and he does not have the authority to make these drastic changes. He most certainly does not have the authority to construct a great "ball room" with his name on it to serve as the " kings palace" while he is in office. I question that the funds for this palace will be raised by donors and even if this happens, what will they expect in return for the millions of dollars that they donate? I also question how the cost of the demolition of the East Wing was paid, no doubt by the tax payers who did not even want this to happen.

It is long past time for Congress and the courts to reign in this would be king. Put an end to this madness that we are seeing every day and that is alienating friends and allies worldwide. This is not what the American people want or deserve.

Thank you.

Our White House was a beautifully structured testimony to our founding principles of balance of powers between the three federal powers. The White House stands as a grand "People's House," not one which stands to express an unnecessary grandeur and opulently ornate superiority. This ballroom as currently planned is not intended to stand as a site in which celebrate the accomplishments of Americans. It will, under Donald Trump, become his place for fundraisers, corruption, and the pleasing of his rich supporters.

Is it really necessary to have a 9,000 sq/ft office and ball room complex attached to the White House? It's bigger than the White House! If they need more office space they have plenty of building that they fired staff from to use. As far as the ball room goes it is something that is used rarely and no need to seat 650 to 999 guest. They say that private individuals will be paying for it. Sorry but I don't believe that. It will go over budget and the country will stuck with another bill. And get rid of all the gold inside. The is not a French Palace.

The proposed ballroom to replace the destroyed East Wing is unacceptable in so many aspects. Proper channels have not been used, necessary approvals have been railroaded by partisan appointees. While expanded event space may be needed, additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure. Construction should be blocked and further work halted until proper and unbiased approvals and plans are ratified.

I am sickened that the east wing was callously and recklessly demolished. I want it restored to its original condition with functional improvements. No building should outshine the main building that contains the Oval Office. No tacky gold embellishments should disgrace the building. It's not a palace. It's the people's house. The rose garden should also be restored and the building should be rebuilt to its historical accuracy. Make the White House great again by returning it to the people and to its original glory. I am appalled at the destruction and disregard of the historic value of the East Wing of the White House. The president's plans are vague and have no redeeming vallue. The design looks cheap and tawdry and looks more like a bordello than a place that represents the people of the United States. I request that you do NOT approve any plans submitted by the president and instead have a commitee formed of architects and historians to design the replacement of what has been lost. I pray and hope that the historic contents of the East Wing were preserved and stored before the destruction happened. If not, then shame on the president for his wanton disregard of our house.

In my opinion, this project was not necessary, and certainly should not have been started before being given permission to do so. If an update to areas of the East Wing are necessary, then rebuild and do the updates. If POTUS needs a larger venue for an event, then host it somewhere else. In any case, rebuild the East Wing back to its original size and design, make necessary updates, and clean up the mess that was created on the once beautiful grounds.

First of all it should not have been torn down without congressional approval and public comment. But now: Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes. It should follow the past footprint and not interfere with line of site of the White House itself. A larger area could be created to entertain more guests.
If a ballroom is needed (not sure if it is) construct it elsewhere in the city.

I am writing as a basic American citizen who is appalled at the level of disrespect that has been shown to the White House, one of the most iconic American buildings in our history. The fact that the East Wing was just pulled down with no warning and no legal process is shocking enough but President Trump has made it clear that he feels no need to be bound by the laws and rules that guide any renovation project for such an historic building. The proposed designs are wholly inconsistent with the architecture and scale of what is left of the building and his intention to carry on through to materially changing the West Wing must not be allowed to proceed.

First of all, the destruction of the East Wing was done illegally and there should be repercussions to all those involved. The East Wing should be rebuilt with modern facilities, full ADA accessibility, and be approximately the same size as before. No gold plating, no obscene ornateness, no gaudy textiles should be used. A huge ballroom is not needed for the peoples house, it is only required to feed the huge ego of our current president. Please don't waste the money or resources by building a ballroom. Build a modest structure that will have usefulness far into the future for the a large number of staffers, not a ridiculous ballroom that only the very rich will ever be invited to use.

As a Maryland resident who grew up visiting Washington, D.C.'s historic sites, I've always seen the White House not just as a working building, but as a shared piece of our national story. Generations of families experience history there, and that public connection is part of what gives the place its meaning. I understand that facilities evolve and that modernization can be necessary, but the White House is a historic landmark first—and changes to it should be handled with the highest level of transparency and care.
What concerns me most about the East Wing modernization project is not the idea of improvement itself, but the process. Moving forward without fully engaging the public comment process undermines public trust and sets a troubling precedent for how we treat nationally significant historic resources. Public review isn't a formality—it's a safeguard that ensures changes are thoughtful, balanced, and accountable. Skipping or minimizing that step suggests urgency is being prioritized over stewardship, when both should be possible.
I urge the responsible agencies to pause, fully engage the proper review channels, and invite meaningful public input before proceeding further. Careful, transparent planning can still address functional needs while honoring the White House's historical, cultural, and symbolic importance. This building belongs, in a very real sense, to the American people—and decisions about its future should reflect that shared responsibility.

This is the the East Wing is the People's House, not yours. To tear down a historical building, without seeking permission from the People, to make a monument of glory for yourself (in a ballroom) is unacceptable, unpresidential, and a disgrace to the history that's already been destroyed by you. Seek only the advice of historical architects anchored in the preservation of all American history, not just the history of which you approve and want to elevate. To the National Capital Planning Commission:

The unlawful demolition of the White House East Wing is an outrage that should alarm every American who cares about our nation's heritage and the rule of law.

This wasn't a routine renovation. A 123-year-old structure—expanded during World War II and serving as the heart of the First Lady's office for generations—was razed without NCPC review. Your commission exists specifically to prevent this kind of destruction, yet you were bypassed entirely. If that's not unlawful, what would you call it?

The East Wing wasn't just bricks and mortar. It was part of our national story. When I visited Washington on my 8th grade trip, walking through our nation's capital was a core memory. These buildings aren't just government offices—they're living connections to our history. They're where millions of Americans, young and old, come to understand what our country is and what it stands for. The East Wing was part of that experience, part of that story. And now it's gone. Forever.

That's what people don't seem to grasp. This isn't like renovating your house where you can change your mind later. Once you demolish a 123-year-old building, it's gone. You can't rebuild history. You can't recreate the walls that witnessed decades of American life, the rooms where First Ladies from Eleanor Roosevelt to Jackie Kennedy worked, the spaces that evolved alongside our nation through depression, war, and social change. All of that is now rubble to make way for what amounts to a personal vanity project.

As an interior designer who works in the museum space, I can tell you that conservation is paramount in historic preservation. It's well known that this president's taste and grasp on historically accurate architecture and design is nonexistent. We've already seen his "improvements" to the West Wing—gaudy gold plastic appliqué moldings that look like they came from Home Depot. His understanding of good design is an abomination. And now he's been allowed to demolish an irreplaceable piece of American architectural history to replace it with whatever tacky vision he has in mind. To say nothing of balance, symmetry and scale. This is a national nightmare.

These are cultural and historic institutions that belong to the American people—not to one administration, and certainly not to one man who treats our national heritage like his personal property. We've had presidents renovate the White House before. Truman gutted the entire interior in 1948, but he worked with Congress, preservation experts, and commissions like yours. He understood that the White House doesn't belong to him—it belongs to us. There was transparency, oversight, and respect for the process. What we're seeing now is the opposite: secrecy, circumvention of established procedures, and a complete disregard for the idea that these buildings are held in trust for future generations.

My kids will never see the East Wing. Their 8th grade class trips won't include the building that mine did. That piece of American history is just gone, and for what? So one president can stamp his name on something with his signature tasteless aesthetic? That's not how this is supposed to work.

Here's what terrifies me about this precedent: if the president can demolish historic portions of the White House without meaningful oversight, what's next? The Kennedy Center is already facing extensive alterations. What other national monuments and memorials are vulnerable to being remade in the image of whoever happens to be in power? How many more pieces of our shared heritage are going to be erased?

The NCPC needs to act. You need to issue a formal finding on how the East Wing demolition proceeded without your review and what that means for your authority going forward. You need to conduct rigorous review of any other planned alterations to historic federal buildings—especially the Kennedy Center. And you need to establish clear procedures to prevent this from ever happening again.

These buildings aren't ours to destroy. They belong to every American—past, present, and future. They belong to the schoolkids who come to learn about their country. They belong to the citizens who visit to connect with their government. They belong to future generations who deserve to inherit the same American story we did. The East Wing is already lost. Don't let the rest of our architectural heritage follow.

I'm counting on your commission to stand up and do the job you were created to do: protect our nation's capital from this kind of reckless destruction.

The total destruction of the East Wing was an abomination to the White House. The current president had no right to unilaterally decide that a ballroom was needed. His acceptance of money, if any has actually been donated, is a sure sign of quid pro quo. We just don't know what he has traded for those 'donations.' The public has had to put up with the current president accepting bribes to get this done. The price has doubled already with probable price increases in the future.
We have been told that past administrations have renovated the White House. Yes, after careful studies where done to determine what needed updating, what could be reused and the benefits to the building. There has been no studies on how much asbestos was released into the air around the White House and how damaging those fibers could be to employees and tourists alike.
There has been no good reasons why a ballroom of this size even needs to be built. Over 1000 people converging on the White House will result in massive traffic jams that even on a good day Washington is sometimes hard to navigate. Who will provide food, setup, takedown and cleaning services? There has been no mention of how much on-going maintenance will be once completed, which WILL be covered by the American citizens.

The current president has stated that the space will be large enough to hold the presidential inauguration there. This is slap in the face of every citizen who has ever travelled to Washington to see a presidential inauguration live and in person.
And lastly, how many times will this space be used per year?

Bottom Line: I don't want my taxpayer dollars going toward this obscenity of a project. The White House East Wing does not need any modernization or upgrade. I know it is already destroyed; it should have been left historically intact!

While the administration maintains that the White House ballroom project—currently estimated at $400 million—is being funded through private donations and the President's personal resources, several taxpayer-centered concerns and legal challenges have emerged.

Hidden Long-term Costs: Critics warn that while initial construction may be private, taxpayers like me will likely bear the long-term costs of operating and maintaining a 90,000-square-foot facility, which is roughly the size of a mid-major college basketball arena.

Bypassing Oversight: US District Judge Richard Leon has expressed skepticism, describing the use of private funds as an "end run" around Congressional oversight. Taxpayers often rely on this oversight to ensure public property is not altered without a transparent, legal review process.

Ethical "Pay-to-Play" Risks: Watchdog groups and lawmakers have raised "pay-to-play" concerns, arguing that allowing corporations (such as Amazon, Google, and Lockheed Martin) to fund White House additions could create conflicts of interest or the appearance of selling influence.

Economic Optics: During periods of federal financial strain or government shutdowns, critics argue that pursuing "opulent" aesthetic projects is inappropriate while ordinary citizens face economic difficulties.

Loss of Historic Assets: The National Trust for Historic Preservation filed a lawsuit arguing that the President is a "steward" rather than a "landlord," and that demolishing the East Wing without public input or environmental studies violates federal law.

The White House, the People's House, is not a hotel nor a convention center nor a palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. If some aspects of the White House are outdated then they surely should be addressed, but not at odds with the values that we as a country have held for nearly 250 years.

We have a ballroom and there are other, larger spaces available for events as needed. The inauguration takes place on the steps of the Capitol and that's where it belongs.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. If there is need for a larger space then it should be documented. And if alternatives have been exhausted, then the new ballroom's size and shape should be in harmony with what exists. Or, the ballroom can be built elsewhere.

Please restore the Rose Garden too. A "club" on the grounds of the White House speaks to exclusivity which, again, is not an American value.

Thank you for your consideration.

Calling this an "East Wing Modernization Project" is disingenuous and deceptive after totally demolishing the East Wing to erect an out of scale, 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. It has been home to our presidents since 1800 and is perhaps the most significant historic site in the United States. Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to be heard and to help shape decisions that affect our shared national heritage.

The proposed ballroom on the White House grounds is much to large and will diminish the presence of the iconic and historic White House. Our nation's historic home of the Presidents needs to be respected and not dwarfed by this proposed new structure. It is time to throw out this proposal and go back to the drawing board for an East Wing addition that respects the integrity of the nation's most historic home.

I believe, the East Wing should be rebuilt in the original foot print, resemble the previous style to blend with the rest of the house. Up dates, i.e. electrical, plumbing, ADA should be put in place and it should return to working areas for the first lady and staff. The Rose Garden should be replaced and the 'cement resort patio' removed. If the reception rooms are not large enough - rethink the invitation list, or hold the reception elsewhere.

Comments should have been solicited before the destruction was done. However, now that it is done and some sort of rebuilding is on the agenda, I am happy to comment on what should be done with the People's House. i believe that the East Wing should be rebuilt on the exact same footprint as the old, at the same height and with the same exterior features. The building should be ADA accessible. The Rose Garden should be rebuilt. There should be NO BALLROOM. Washington DC has plenty of spaces available for such things. This does not belong in the People's House. There should be no gold features like have been added to other parts of the White House. This is NOT a palace belonging to any president. It is the people's house and presidents are temporary stewards of the historical building. I would also request that since the destruction of the East Wing was done solely by the current president with your consultations or approval, the current president should pay for the reconstruction out of his own pocket, and not the pockets of the American people. It is absolutely baffling that one person can single-handedly decide to alter landmarks that belong to the American people with no input or advice from our legislative bodies. While the White House has been altered multiple times over the two centuries, each significant renovation has been done with Congressional approval. My vote would be to force the administration to restore the East Wing using the private funds and go to Congress to receive authorization to make the changes he desires. If allowed to stand, while the project MAY be initially funded using private funds, it will fall to the taxpayers to maintain it, and the question of ownership is murky at best.

I am writing this in opposition to the proposed ballroom project at the White House. The project was first described as not impacting the East Wing, would be adjacent to the existing structure.
The complete demolition of the East Wing was an affront to all Americans. It was deplorable.
The East Wing needs to be restored to its original footprint. Not a massive ballroom that dwarfs the rest of the White House.

Dear sirs and madams,

I think it's horrible that the people's house was defaced by the President. I think the East Wing should be restored to its former fashion. I think that there should be no ballroom erected. The monies collected from oligarchs should be returned. Our President should not be allowed to grift in the White House.

Rebuild the former East Wing in the same style and scale as it was, but install functional updates that bring it up to code/modern standards that may not have been possible in the former structure.

Do not decorate it in the gaudy gold that the current administration prefers. That is tasteless and embarrassing.

The ability to create a hospitality center at the White House is clearly in the National Interest. Politics, national and public policy needs spaces for large gatherings of policy makers, citizens and foreign leaders to meet and share ideas, experiences and perspectives that will enhance the future of not only America but also the world. The establishment of such a venue at the center of American Democracy will be a benefit to our nation and the future of peace and prosperity in the world.

The design of the new East Wing should be the focus of this hearing, not the appropriateness of the project at this site. The traditional design that has been proposed is preferable to any egocentric architectural concept of a modern design for the site. Keep the design traditional and complementary to the White House itself.

To Whom It May Concern,

It is absolutely outrageous that the federal government is even considering expanding the ballroom at the White House at a time like this. This proposal is profoundly out of touch and tone deaf to what Americans are facing every single day.

Families across the country are struggling with skyrocketing grocery bills, higher rent, rising utility costs, and an increasingly competitive job market. People are working longer hours, taking second jobs, and still finding it hard to make ends meet. Small businesses are fighting to stay afloat. Young adults can't afford homes. Parents are cutting back on essentials just to keep food on the table.

And yet, instead of focusing every available dollar on policies that directly support working Americans, lower costs, strengthen job opportunities, and stabilize housing, the administration wants to spend taxpayer money expanding a ceremonial ballroom? How does that benefit the general public in any meaningful way?

This is a misuse of public funds, plain and simple. Government spending should prioritize infrastructure, education, healthcare, public safety, disaster relief, and economic relief — not cosmetic upgrades to an already historic and functional building used primarily for high-profile events.

The message this sends is deeply troubling: that appearances and prestige matter more than the real financial pain people are experiencing across the country. At a time when millions are worried about paying rent, affording groceries, or finding stable employment, allocating funds to expand a ballroom feels not just inappropriate — but insulting.

If leadership wants to demonstrate that it understands the urgency of this moment, it should shelve this proposal immediately and redirect attention and resources toward the everyday Americans who are asking not for grandeur, but for relief.

Dear Sirs,

I am writing to express my concerns regarding the proposed construction of a new ballroom at the White House, while advocating for the restoration of the East Wing instead. I believe this path aligns with both historical preservation and responsible use of resources.

Firstly, the East Wing is a significant part of the White House's architectural heritage. Restoring this historic area would not only honor the legacy of past administrations and the architectural integrity of the White House but also ensure that we maintain the historical narrative that defines this cherished institution. The East Wing has served various essential functions, including housing important art collections and serving as a site for diplomatic events. Revitalizing this space would allow it to continue to serve meaningful purposes without the need for new constructions, which might alter the character of the grounds.

Moreover, constructing a new ballroom could divert crucial funding and resources from pressing issues that require immediate attention. In an era where budgetary constraints are prevalent, directing funds towards the restoration of existing structures would maximize the impact of our investments. This approach not only preserves our history but also allows us to allocate resources more effectively to address contemporary challenges.

Finally, building a new ballroom raises questions about necessity. The current event spaces within the White House and its grounds have successfully accommodated a range of functions for generations. Rather than creating a new venue, enhancing and adapting existing spaces would provide flexibility while respecting the unique architecture of the White House.

In conclusion, I urge you to reconsider the proposal for a new ballroom and instead focus on the restoration of the East Wing. This decision would honor our past, respect our resources, and maintain the character of the White House for future generations.

Thank you for considering my perspective on this important matter.

Sincerely,

Julie Lahman

I feel that the genesis of this project shows the current administration's disregard for the input/will of the American people. Allowing any further movement on this project would assume that the administration would continue on their desired path, rather than take on the historical and civic responsibility of such a huge alteration to the peoples' house. Their stated goal in several pursuits has been to "move fast and break things", and that seems to be consistent here.

We need the Rose Garden re-estabished true to form, The East wing needs to be rebuilt to specificatgions, Hopefully he did not get rid of the furniture, art work, ETC... We will never be able to match the materials the East Wing was made of but we can make it better and still represent all the Historical actions that were made in the East Wing. If we need a bigger place to entertain, the Kennedy Center was always available, or we need to build on another piece of National park land in Washington DC.
What trump did was disrespectful to the people of the United States. NO other tennat in any other home has the right to make renovations without the owners agreement, I was not asked and would not have agreed to the addtion to an ostentatious ballroom that trump envisoned. I strongly oppose the idea of modernizing the White House by adding a new ballroom. The White House is not just a residence or event venue — it is a historic symbol of the nation's heritage and democratic traditions. Altering its structure for aesthetic upgrades, ego pandering, or expanded entertainment space risks diminishing its historical integrity. Preservation should take priority over expansion, and any changes to such an iconic landmark should be approached with extreme caution and respect for its original character. Washington is awash in event space. The Executive Mansion does not need a gargantuan "ballroom" as if it were a Palm Beach resort. And it most certainly does not need a gargantuan subterranean Führerbunker — which, I speculate, was the actual plan, for which the "ballroom" was merely a pretext. The regime should be compelled to restore the former East Wing to its most recent configuration and to disclose the identities of the alleged "private donors" supposedly contributing to the cost of the unauthorized demolition and planned disfigurement; provide a detailed accounting for every dollar actually received and every dollar already spent; and remit funds equivalent to the entire amount received to the US Treasury for such use as the people's elected representatives in Congress shall determine.

Dear Members of the National Capital Planning Commission,

I am writing to express my concerns regarding the proposed expansion plan put forward by the Trump Administration. While I understand the desire to enhance our nation's capital, I believe this particular proposal raises several significant issues that warrant careful reconsideration.

First, the excessive scale of the expansion threatens to overwhelm the existing urban fabric and disrupt the architectural balance that defines the character of our capital city. The proposed structures appear disproportionate in size and style compared to the surrounding historic buildings, which could undermine the aesthetic harmony that has been carefully preserved over decades.

Second, the cost of this project is substantial, and I question whether the funding sources have been fully vetted and transparently disclosed. Given the current economic challenges, it is crucial that public funds be allocated responsibly and with clear accountability.

Third, the expansion poses a serious risk to our nation's historic sites and may violate the National Historic Preservation Act. Protecting our cultural heritage should be a paramount consideration in any development plan, and I urge the Commission to ensure that all preservation laws are strictly upheld.

In light of these concerns, I respectfully ask the National Capital Planning Commission to reconsider the scope and design of this expansion. I encourage a more measured approach that respects the historical significance, architectural integrity, and fiscal responsibility that our capital deserves.

Thank you for your attention to this important matter.

Sincerely,
Margaret James

I am 100% opposed to this ballroom being built. It is WAY too big, and way too gold. It is not a palace. The White House is not a personal residence and it should not be altered to accommodate the ungainly visions of one person. Absolutely not. Money of this magnitude should not be spent on ballrooms when we have hungry veterans living in tents on the street. To the Board:
As an American citizen who loves our Country I implore you:
Our History in written word, geographical importance and historical structures are to be protected for all Americans to learn from, to enjoy and to feel that they too are valuable to the fabric of this Country from generations past to the unseen future. I have always felt an affinity to the Old. The before. The beginning of our beautiful Country in all its forms. I personally have owned historic structures and have loved the stories that they encompass from times gone by. An old Grist Mill, with stories of wagon stops, monthly mail collection, campfires and the songs emitted from that shared experience. I have owned a pre-Civil-war home that was once 100 acres of cotton fields where I could feel the burn of the Sun and the Whip upon the backs of those whose only crime was to be captured and sold. I have owned a 1920s American 4-Square and heard the echoes of the Great Depression with lines of men blocks long praying to be chosen for one of the few jobs available at the Textile Mill. All these voices have a great story to tell. The story of America. Its struggles, its mistakes, its triumphs. When the East Wing of the Peoples House was demolished without a Eulogy to its great purpose the American people lost more than a building. They lost Trust and Faith in our Nation, Of being a Nation of People who collectively chose their destination. We the People were blinded by the rash action of one man who decided our future without our consent. This action tells us so much more about our Nation than its physical structures and I hope one day the Rebirth of the East Wing will be the Rebirth of Trust and Faith in our Nation. I am only one voice; I wish for all voices to be heard. I want what is the Peoples House returned to us. I wish that it will be re-built just as it was except for modern convenience. To Restore the Faith and Trust of the American People. I also feel that a law has been broken along with our Trust and Faith and that there should be a reckoning. So, you have my view. I am sure you all take your assignments seriously and will do what is right. Thank you for allowing me to speak.

I am concerned about the demolition of the East Wing without any public input (or knowledge for that matter.) Now that the damage is done, I respectfully request that the exterior dimensions and architectural style be restored in order to match the White House itself and not dwarf it. They can make it ADA accessible and make only historically significant and sensitive changes. While there is a need for entertaining, there is no need for a ballroom designed for dancing. President Trump has Mar a Lago for his ballroom dancing, and no other presidents have required that much space. By the time it is built, his term will be expired. Moreover, there should be no gaudy goldleaf splashed all over the place as the next administration would probably have it removed. The public was reassured that private donors would pay for this, but it appears that will not happen and this will be taxpayer funded, so we, the people, need to have a say in it.

The East Wing of the White House should never have been demolished, and it definitely shouldn't be rebuilt to look like a gilded Versailles Palace. The United States rejected monarchy in 1776, and we should not be building a monument to wealthy people with too much power in imitation of royal palaces. The demolished section should be restored as historically accurately as possible, and sanctions against those who destroyed it without proper consent put in place to ensure such desecration of the public heritage that belongs to the American people doesn't happen again.

I can't express how strongly I oppose this project as proposed. The sheer size of the proposed ballroom alone make it an eyesore that will overshadow the people's house. It appears less of a necessary and appropriate renovation as more of a vanity project and some type of attempt to create a lasting monument to one man's ego. This does not serve the people of the united states. Obviously, damage has already been done, but any reconstruction should go through a rigorous, transparent, and legal review before anything is approved. Ignoring traditional channels and legal requirements for rebuilding a property that belongs to the people of the united states must not be allowed.

These comments are directed to the proposed building of a ball room on the site of the East Wing. The NCPC should reject this proposal for a number of reasons.

1. The proposed "ball room" is out of proportion to the two historic structures to which it will be attached. The proposed Ball Room is much larger than the historic White House and West Wing. While certainly it would be appropriate to provide a new East Wing, such design must be proportional to the extant buildings.

2. The proposed "ball room" is dissimilar to the buildings to which it will connect. The White House has, historically, been "the people's house" with comparatively straightforward decoration and a singular lack of "gold leaf" and the like. While, for the moment, the White House has been bedecked with gold leaf paint (for which no approval was received) it will likely be restored to its former look upon the end of the residence of the current occupant. In contrast, the "decoration" being proposed for the ball room would appear to be more permanent in nature.

3. There is no need for a ball room. Washington DC has numerous facilities which are appropriate for this action. For example, when the Ronald Reagan International Trade Center was built, it included a central rotunda which was designed to double as a ball room and large ceremonial space. In addition, the RITC has in place the support structure for such operations.

In sum, the proposed ball room is not only unneeded, it is excessive in size and will negatively impact two major historic structures. To the extent that a new structure is needed to replace the East Wing, it must be proportional in size and design to the buildings to which it is being connected. If the ball room is approved as currently proposed, it should be built with inexpensive materials and designed to be easily torn down.

We have been horrified by the plan that has been put forth by Donald Trump to destroy the East Wing of the White House without any public review or discussion, and to replace it with a ballroom of enormous size that would become an eyesore and an insult to the history and the charm of the White House, the People's House.

It would be incumbent upon Mr. Trump, who has plenty of personal funds, to rebuild the East Wing exactly as it existed before he went ahead with his unplanned and unapproved demolition.

If every previous president of our nation since 1800 has been able to live and work within the White House (including Trump himself) without any problem, then the proposed plan of this president should be totally rejected.

Trump should be required to rebuild the east wing exactly as it was before using ONLY his own money.

This is outrageous and illegal and should result in his removal from office.

The East Wing of the White House, THE peoples' house, has historical significance to this country from its commissioning in 1902 by President Theodore Roosevelt to it's expansion forty years later by his fifth cousin FDR.

Architecturally, the wing added balance to the White House after the 1902 addition of the West Wing by President Theodore Roosevelt. The proposed ballroom, to replace the East will, will be over 40,000 square foot larger than the space it is replacing. This will throw off the architectural balance of the building.

In my humble opinion, the East Wing should be rebuilt using the original blueprint so it is historically accurate. Additionally, the Rose Garden should be restored to its magnificent beauty.

To the Members of the National Capital Planning Commission:

I am writing to ask you to please review very carefully the proposed plan for a White House Ballroom. This 90,000 square foot building is almost double the size of the entire White House and will dwarf that iconic symbol of America. In the architect's rendering displayed by the White House Press Secretary it is impossible to even find the current White House structure.

As a former member of Mrs. Nixon's staff who worked in the East Wing assisting the Social Secretary, I was intimately involved in planning state dinners and other social occasions which took place in the White House. Elegant state dinners were held in the State Dining Room which seats approximately 140 people. An additional 50 guests were often invited to come after dinner for entertainment and dancing in the East Room. These dinners were intimate affairs and part of their magic was the experience of being inside the White House. No one wants to be in an adjunct building in a large crowd with lengthened security protocols. The White House is owned by the American people, and the President is only a temporary occupant who should never be permitted to change it single-handedly.

Last but not least, the very fact of and the optics of constructing a 200-million-dollar building, when many Americans are losing health care, paying higher prices for goods and services and thousands of people are starving throughout the world are in opposition to the values of the culture of the America that we all cherish.

Thank you for your immediate attention to this matter.

Sincerely,
Susan L. Dolibois

The demolition of the East Wing on the White House is disgraceful. Add in that the proposed 90,000 square foot ballroom is so big it will dwarf the rest of the White House is completely ludicrous and an example of the narcissistic hubris that this administration has demonstrated at every turn. This cannot go forward. The gold encrusted spaces we are already enduring are horrible from every viewpoint but this addition is so much worse by any measurable metric.

My understanding is that the proposed ballroom will dwarf the remaining parts of the White House. I object to the way the demolition of the East Wing was done with public input and without following protocol for improvements to buildings of historical significance. I also object to this project because the White House belongs to the people of the United States. It should not be altered due to the whims of one president because it does not belong to the president but to all US citizens. It is our White House and not Trump's.

I would also like to note that the January 6th riot instigated by Trump in 2020 also damaged another historical structure (the Capitol) and the damages were paid by the US taxpayer.

I object to rewarding the capricious acts of this president. He needs to be held to account and not catered to. Destroying the East Wing first and then trying to secure permission for his proposed alteration of the White House should demand legal action against the Administration and not simply acquiescence to his whims.

In reality, this is not an updating but rather a remaking to suit the self-interests of the president regardless of the drastic and irreversible impact on the nation, especially during the country's semiquincentennial celebrations.

The Whitehouse should be RESTORED exactly to the way it was pool and all ! And DONALD TRUMP SHOULD BE \u-10179 ?\u-9041 ?% financially responsible for the restoration. Up front!
. If There is to be a ballroom added, it should be a separate building on the premises. But since he caused this destruction, and the money disappeared he should also be financially responsible for the cost of this addition.,
Up front before construction starts. He needs to be held responsible for his actions and shown that even though he is the president he does not have the right to do as he pleases.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

House with a monstrous "wannabe" palace-imitating behemoth totally unsuitable. Of course, now that the East Wing has been, unlawfully in my opinion, completely destroyed, a replacement is necessary, but its design should be classical, its size should be proportionate to the West Wing and certainly not overshadow the central President's House. I very much oppose the plans that have been revealed for the replacement -- NOT "modernization" -- of the White House East Wing. In designs that have been made public, it is clear that this gaudy monstrosity of a rectangle is meant not as an upgrade to facilities that President Trump had torn down without seeking the proper permitting and oversight, but instead will be one more monument to the glory with which Mr. Trump views himself.

Perhaps the former East Wing was outmoded, but surely "modernization" could have been accomplished without destroying the existing structure. The planned building will overshadow what has been seen as the home of the U.S. president since 1800. Past additions and renovations have been conducted with proper oversight and with an eye to being in line with existing structures. Everything Mr. Trump has done to the White House during his second term has been in very poor taste -- cheap, gaudy golden fixtures in the Oval Office; the horrific "modernization" of the Lincoln Bedroom bath, making it look like it would be more at home in a Holiday Inn in Vegas; the destruction of the lovely Rose Garden, replacing it with a patio that looks like it came straight from Home Depot, all so that female gusts wouldn't have their high heels sink into the grass. He has refused to take into account any sense of history and remade the White House as a shrine to himself and personal retribution against former presidents he does not like.

It is too late to bring back the East Wing, but it is NOT too late to stop Mr. Trump's ridiculous plans to use its replacement for self-aggrandizement. There should be a new historic and esthetic review of these plans, which should be scrapped or remade so that the ballroom does not overshadow the main White House. And under no circumstances should Mr. Trump be permitted to affix his name to the structure in any manner, ala his besmirchment of the Kennedy Center. Stop him now, while you have the chance.

It is unconscionable that the East Wing was torn down without any regard for its historic importance or without any approval from anyone including congress. However the East Wing is now history and I understand the need for more office space in the White House. I do not understand the need for a giant ballroom that would dwarf the White House itself making it look small and insignificant next to the ballroom's giant size. Through the years many important State events have been held in the White House and I have never heard of complaints about the lack of space for these events. I see no need for a giant ballroom, especially in these tough economic times.

If something is to be built on the east side of the White House, it should be consistent with the scale and architectural style of the remaining structure. It should not dwarf the historic residence and it should contain offices and other spaces necessary for the functioning of the first family and the staff. There should not be a ballroom. The color gold should not be allowed.

Most importantly it should be personally paid for by the person who illegally ordered the East Wing torn down in the first place b

Aloha,

As a 73 year old United States citizen, I am deeply angered at the disregard for the PEOPLE's HOUSE. BEFORE nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to help shape the decision.

With all due respect, I ask that the East Wing is restored to the prior historical exterior dimensions and architectural style, update the wiring and other necessary upgrades and make the interior ADA accessible where possible.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.

The White House is the PEOPLE's HOUSE.

With aloha,

The scale of the ballroom is clearly not compatible with the rest of the complex. Bigger is not better. Hiding the addition with trees is not a permanent solution.

A much smaller design to accomodate a much smaller number of people should be pursued.

The East Wing of The White House was destroyed without the proper authorization or review by the current Administration and should be evaluated for potential replacement based on existing blueprints and documents produced at the time it was constructed. Likewise, the Rose Garden, co-designed and constructed by First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy, should be replaced in its original location using historic photos and documents outlining its specific details and materials.

The White House and the Administration should be admonished for its failure to follow established procedures and all plans for existing and future construction plans should be halted and subject to review and revision or cancellation based on a panel of historians and experts on history of architecture and history of The White House.

The destruction of the East Wing was so reckless, selfish, and deeply offensive that many of us felt it viscerally. To proceed with a vanity project of this magnitude would only legitimize the harm done to the original structure, emboldening its ego-maniacal "builder president" to press forward along an already ruinous path . Adults should never reward children for destructive, impetuous behavior.

The proposed ballroom—oversized and ostentatious—stands as an affront equal to the initial act itself. It is neither desired nor necessary on such an extravagant scale, particularly given its ill-considered placement beside one of the country's great houses.

I and countless others (who are unaware of this website) are vehemently OPPOSED to this offensive, arrogant, and dare I say corrupt project. It is a resounding NO from this American.

The People's House should retain the historical architecture of its established style. Never should the thought of mere entertainment overwhelm the center of this refine building's main purpose of cradling the singular power retained in the Oval Office responsibility and power of the Executive Branch of government The White House should never be used as an a$$ in the seats event center. I would think there are plenty of off-site venues to host large gatherings of unnecessary elites. The dignity of a stately dinner or doing is enhanced by a more intimate setting. Restore the East Wing with grace and style and modern quality construction. Approval of any/all changes to the site should be only after careful consideration and direct input of an approved public board or commission i.e. The National Capital Planning Commission and the National Trust for Historic Preservation in addition to direct revue of Congress representing the wishes of the American people. The plans to build a ballroom in place of the East Wing should be scrapped altogether. First, the people's White House should represent our democratic republic and the serious business of government, not drunken parties. Second, making the most visible (and as planned, largest) part of the most iconic building in the country into a place where influence is peddled by rich and powerful people makes a mockery of the entire idea of a republic where law-abiding citizens are "created equal." Third, the current plans for this "modernization" to be even partially funded by private organizations, mostly corporations and billionaires, completely contradicts the values our Constitution lays out in which government -- and its buildings -- are for and by the PEOPLE, not corporations and a few randomly rich individuals.

The plans for the ballroom are a travesty, and the destruction of the original East Wing a crime that most Americans (even the president's supporters) abhored. Please show us that citizens still have a voice in this country and reject the ballroom plans altogether. Thank you.

It should be within proper proportions as deemed by the historical association and esteemed historically minded architects, while still adding timely pieces such as ADA accessibility, energy-saving yet beautiful lighting, etc..
I completely understand the need, especially in the part of a country that gets very cold and very hot to get away from temporary event tents, however it must be a tasteful, understated, and architecturally, appropriate addition.

The White House is not in need of a ballroom of the size proposed, which will dwarf the remaining structure. The East Wing should be restored to it's previous footprint and architectural style. The symmetry of the entire White House should be maintained. The interior should be brought up to modern standards of code and ADA compliance, with design that flows with and compliments he rest of the building's interior.

Ample ballroom spaces are available already within the Washington DC area, so these changes are not a "need", they are a "want." If it is truly deemed necessary for the White House to have it's own ballroom, then it should remain within the confines of the previous East Wing footprint. The symmetry of the entire White House should be maintained. Any gardens that were destroyed by the unauthorized demolition of the East Wing should be restored. Please keep it tasteful, it should not be gilded in gold as if King Midas himself lives there.

The fact the East Wing was demolished without following the proper protocols is an absolute disgrace.

The proposal by the National Capital Planning Commission for a 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House is not only an affront to our nation’s historic integrity but also an egregious misallocation of resources at a time when the American people are struggling to make ends meet. This expansion, far from being a necessary upgrade, stands to become an eyesore that overwhelms the historic architecture of the White House—a symbol of democracy and humility.

In an era where many Americans face economic hardship, prioritizing a lavish ballroom for extravagant parties is, quite frankly, a joke. It reflects a disturbing disconnect from the realities of everyday life. While ordinary citizens grapple with rising living costs, this administration seems more concerned with hosting opulent gatherings and indulging in leisure on lavish golf courses. The desire for a grandiose event space reveals a troubling tendency to prioritize elitism over the needs of the public.

Furthermore, the sheer scale of this proposed ballroom—larger than the Executive Residence itself—demonstrates a lack of respect for the historical significance and architectural harmony of the White House.

This administration’s apparent disregard for the will of the people is evident in its decisions. There is a growing sentiment that leaders are more focused on their own desires than on addressing the pressing needs of those they represent. If we are to honor the legacy of the White House, we must ensure that any changes reflect the values of the American people, rather than the whims of a privileged few.

It is essential that the NCPC hears the public's outcry against this proposal. We must advocate for a vision that respects the past while remaining grounded in the present realities faced by many Americans. Let us demand that the integrity of our nation's most iconic landmark is preserved, and that any future developments stay true to the spirit of service and humility that the White House embodies. The time for lavish excess is over; the focus should be on community, not extravagance.

The White House is not just a building. It is a national symbol - a public home that belongs to the American people, not to any one leader, party, or political era. That is why proposals to dramatically alter its historic footprint, particularly for something as unnecessary as a grand ballroom, deserve serious scrutiny and public opposition.

A massive addition to the White House complex would not constitute service. It would be a spectacle. The idea of constructing a ballroom larger than existing historic spaces raises an obvious question: Who is this really for? Americans do not need a palace-like event hall to strengthen democracy, improve lives, or solve national problems. We need leadership focused on healthcare, education, infrastructure, security, and the everyday realities facing working families.

When public architecture becomes about ego instead of governance, it sends a dangerous message: that power is something to display rather than something to responsibly steward. The White House has endured for centuries because it represents continuity, restraint, and the democratic ideal that presidents are temporary, but the nation is permanent. Transforming it into a personal tribute project - a monument to one individual's legacy - undermines that ideal.

History shows that authoritarian leaders often seek to reshape national symbols in their own image. Americans should reject that impulse, regardless of party. The presidency is not a throne, and the White House is not a canvas for self-glorification.
Preserving the integrity of our most important civic spaces is not about aesthetics alone. It is about values: humility in leadership, respect for institutions, and the understanding that public office is not meant for personal glorification.

If this ballroom is intended to serve the public, the public deserves full transparency about who is funding it. Instead, the reporting shows that donor names have been released without contribution amounts, while other donors remain anonymous. Watchdog groups such as CREW have warned that many donations may not have been properly disclosed under lobbying laws, and members of Congress have demanded answers about whether private contributions are being exchanged for access or influence. This is not simply a renovation question—it is a democratic accountability question. Americans should not accept major changes to the people's house being funded through secrecy and unanswered ethical concerns.

The White House and its grounds should remain what they have always been - a place of service, not a stage for vanity.

It is outrageous that the East Wing was demolished before any public comment thus defying the law; specifically NEPA and section 106.
Any rebuilding of this structure must not occur until there is substantive public input Any new structure should consider:
—doing an inventory of any elements of the old structure that may still exist —reuse of any elements of the original structure that may be available as appropriate —making sure the scale of a new structure is appropriate for the setting —architectural integrity of any new structure that complements the existing White House structure

Agency: Executive Residence at the White House
Installation: White House Grounds
As a design professional, I find the proposed project entirely out of scale with the existing structures. It is orders of magnitude too large, and diminishes the residential scale of the White House. Furthermore, the process through which this proposal is being advanced is dishonest and offensive to me as a federal government retiree who served honorably for 30 years, most of them at the National Park Service where I was proud to adhere to all laws pertaining to actions protecting historic structures.

As an American citizen, I am disgusted by the hasty actions that demolished the existing East Wing without adequate consultation with the public, and with disregard for environmental compliance. And by the way this project is being financed. We deserve more.

The East Wing should never have been torn down. Therefore, now that it is gone, I believe that it needs to be rebuilt exactly as it was. It was a historic structure. Many significant cultural and historic events have happened there.

The proposed ballroom is way too big and would dwarf the original and primary part of the White House. By contrast, the now demolished East Wing was perfectly proportioned. This is so important!

As part of the restoration, any original furnishings, artwork and artifacts with historic or cultural significance also need to be restored to their rightful place.

I firmly believe that the project as outlined will tarnish our most country's most historically important building. The White House has long been an icon - depicted on currency, portrayed in cinema, and visited by millions. To add an East Wing that dwarfs the original building not only looks like a Frankenstein attempt at architecture, but it belittles the historical significant of the building as it stands. Across our country, historical buildings are protected for a reason and to set this precedent I fear would have resounding consequences in a loss of culture, pride, and the American story.

At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence, permanently destroying the historic scale and design of the White House. Any East Wing structure which may be constructed must be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure. The proposed structure is garish, distasteful, and entirely disrespectful to the history and architectural significance of The White House.

Further, the destruction of the previous East Wing without due process was eggregious, as is the pay-to-play funding which is proposed for its replacement. This must stop.

As a direct descendant of several former occupants of said structure, I am aghast and furious at what is being considered for "The Peoples' House."

Let us speak plainly, for plain truth needs no ornament. The proposal before us — to construct a new ballroom at the White House — demands not flattery, but common sense.

Common sense tells us that a building which stands as a symbol of democratic modesty should not be burdened with a hall of grandeur it does not need. The White House was never meant to rival palaces or courts. Its power lies in its restraint. To enlarge it with a massive ceremonial chamber is to forget the very principle it was built upon: that the government of a free people should be dignified, not extravagant.

Common sense tells us that the form of a ballroom — a vast, windowless box — is wholly incompatible with the architecture of the Executive Residence. The White House is a composition of balance, proportion, and light. A ballroom is a structure of bulk, darkness, and span. One cannot marry delicacy to mass without injuring the former. To force such a form upon this landmark is to commit an architectural contradiction.

Common sense tells us that the scale required for such a room would overwhelm the historic grounds. A ballroom is not a parlor; it is a cavern. It demands height, breadth, and machinery. On a site already constrained, such a mass cannot be made subordinate. It would stand as a rival to the Executive Residence itself — a violation of every preservation principle that governs additions to historic properties.

Common sense tells us that the architecture of the White House is not merely a matter of walls and windows, but of meaning. Its hierarchy is clear: the Residence at the center, the Wings in support, the landscape as frame. A ballroom would introduce a fourth major mass, disrupting the clarity that has endured for more than two centuries. It would turn a disciplined composition into a crowded cluster.

Common sense tells us that this proposal duplicates what already exists in abundance. Washington is filled with secure, dignified venues capable of hosting state\u8209 -level events — halls built for crowds, for ceremony, for spectacle. To carve up historic ground to replicate what the city already provides is not stewardship; it is indulgence.

Common sense tells us that preservation is not the enemy of progress, but its guardian. We preserve so that future generations may inherit the symbols that shaped us. We preserve so that the nation's most important buildings remain legible, honest, and whole. A ballroom is not a necessity. It is not a modernization. It is not a public benefit. It is a permanent alteration to a national treasure for a purpose already served elsewhere.

And finally, common sense tells us that when an undertaking threatens the character, scale, and integrity of a National Historic Landmark, the only responsible answer is to say no.

The White House does not need a ballroom.
The nation does not need this burden.
And history does not need this wound.
What we need is common sense when evaluating this proposal.

I oppose building this ballroom at all. If it is built, I oppose it being this large size and oppose its opulence of its decorations.

I strongly oppose building a ballroom attached to the White House and especially one this big. As a Democratic Republic, our government is in place by the citizens of the United States for the good of all. A ballroom attached to 'the people's house' (as the White House is referred to) would be used by only the upper tier of citizens (that make the most money). Because of this, building a ballroom for the use of a few citizens flies in the face of requirements, building regulations in this area, and history. Everything in and around the White House should and historically has been (except for personal use space for living, offices, etc) open to the public. The ballroom would not be and therefore should not be built. The East Wing destruction should not have happened, either.

As a long time Christian, daughter of a pastor and granddaughter of a missionary, I also object to spending this amount of money, even if privately raised, to build something like this. This money should be spent for other things, like making sure all can afford health care, food, housing, heat, etc, not something for just a few people to enjoy.

As a retired couple, my husband and I are watching our finances closely, as our local property taxes, expenses for water/sewer/garbage, electricity, gas for heating house, and food have gone up. Electricity, natural gas, and food (even at discount stores) have increased substantially. My supplemental Medicare insurance went up, too. We know many people around us who are having a difficult time paying rent (property taxes in this state are usually passed through to renters) along with other living expenses. The food pantries are being used more and more in our state and locally. I give to one and our church is involved in serving meals to those in need, so I know this personally. Churches, including mine, are trying to fill the need, but it is difficult with so many in need because of the Federal cuts. These are long term citizens in real need. Locally, a meat packing plant closed that employed hundreds. People are trying to get jobs, but the salaries here are low, too low to pay living expenses because of the rising costs, Having worked in hospitals, I know that they will have to write off care for many people because more people here can't afford insurance and many smaller businesses in this state do not offer health insurance as a benefit (that is why these employees were on Medicaid but no longer are.. A friend of mine, who worked as a nurse for over 40 years, had to declare bankruptcy because of medical expenses. These are real people who have been and are working.

I am a Us citizen, born in North Dakota, grew up in Minnesota, and worked as a Registered Nurse, Nurse Educator, and Medical Researcher in Minnesota, Texas, Oklahoma, and South Dakota. I have resided in South Dakota now for over 40 years, raising a family with my husband and working. I also have Multiple Sclerosis, severe arthritis, a heart condition, and Ehlers Danlos Syndrome (genetic) which limits my activity.

Again, for all the above reasons, I oppose building this ballroom at all. If it is built, I oppose it being this size and also oppose the interior opulence of its decorations.

Sincerely,
Mary E Repp,

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

I am horrified that the current occupant has chosen to demolish an entire historic wing of the White House, in order to make a tribute to themself. It’s beyond comprehension that this wasn’t presented to a board, senate or other preservation groups that would give formal approval. Trump doesn’t own the land or house he occupies. The people do.

I am not in favor of the current plans for the current plans for the East Wing. This plan dwarfs the whole house. The scale of it makes the rest of the house look like a doll house. Bigger isn’t always better. This is the people’s house. Most people are not interested in this gaudy display of wealth. We want to see well constructed artfully planned building representing people who define themselves as hard working artisans not some cheap plastic nod to European aristocrats.

The current occupant of the White House, whoever it may be, does not own the White House. It is a residence provided the occupant by the people of the United States. For the occupant to change the building in a major way without the general consent of the people is a travesty, a bald case of 'go head and do it; deal with the consequences later'. Sad to say, the history of the current occupant is replete with this approach to historical buildings.

The proposed "modernization" project (#8733) is an affront to the historical integrity of one of our nation's most important architectural monuments. It is excessively large in scale, unattractively designed, undignified in concept, and stylistically discohesive with the original building. The unpermitted demolition already undertaken has been sloppy and unprofessional and poses a risk to the remaining structures on the site. The new design is guaranteed to become an eyesore and a magnet for international derision. I urge the commission to reject this disgraceful design and entertain serious, professional proposals for a renovation that respects the dignity and function of this historic site.

A ballroom would be an Oligarch Party Palace--which does not serve Americans except for a grifting autocrat and his sycophants. No president should co-opt the memorials of past presidents, nor should he or she erect memorials to themselves. (And nor should billionaires be able to buy favor with a U.S. president. That would make us a banana republic.)

The gigantic Trump ballroom to replace the destroyed East Wing is an unnecessary, costly project. It is certainly NOT something that the American people are clamoring for, despite Trump's claims. This is an embarrassment and an insult to our shared history and reverence for what America should represent in terms of architecture and values.

A monstrous, glittery ballroom built as a vanity project for Trump's ego is the opposite of what America should represent--freedom, equality, decency, and serving the best interests of the majority of citizens. This ballroom serves only Trump, providing him with a "monument" to puff up his"legacy."

The size of the ballroom will overshadow the White House, making the People's House look like some sort of strange afterthought to the addition.

This should NOT be built!

I am appalled that the Trump administration recklessly, wantonly, and deliberately destroyed part of our White House. Ironically, this is an even more appropriate metaphor for his presidency than the excrement his followers smeared on the walls of our Capitol. Why? Because in this instance, as in most of the decisions he has made, Trump has not only broken the law but has also deliberately sought to destroy priceless symbols and aspects of our democracy, from the electoral process to the Bill of Rights to a performing arts center named in honor of another president, whose assassination was marked by a time of great national mourning. At every turn, he shows utter disrespect for the United States and for our ideals of "equality and justice for all," let alone common decency.

I request that the Trump administration be fined for this malicious and illegal destruction of the East Wing, and be required to restore it to its original state, as directed by experts in architectural and historic preservation that are chosen by professional organizations, not by Trump or by his appointees.

Thank you for considering my request and for working to preserve aspects of our national history rather than altering them to satisfy the whims of a would-be dictator.

It should not be out of balance with the existing West Wing. There should be consequences to the current administration for the negligence in their rush to destroy "our" house. I strongly believe that the White House and grounds belong to all people of the United States of America. The East Wing should have never been torn down, nor should this ballroom be constructed without proper oversight. While additional space may be necessary for state dinners, this should go through proper review.

It appears that not only will this building be much grander than needed, but is funded by 37 companies and individuals including Meta Platforms, Apple, Amazon, Google, Lockheed Martin, and Microsoft, according to Fortune.com. It seems to me that these private donations will buy favors from this administration to serve the special interests of these companies, not the 340 million constituents of the United Staes.

Surely the National Trust has a variety of sources to guide the decisions, and I have included a few that I find beneficial to explaining the true purposes of the project. I did not include Whitehouse.gov as it is no longer a reliable source.

Please do not allow this project to continue, Thank you to the National Trust for opening commentary.

Tearing down of the East Wing broke my heart. This is not modernization of the East Wing, its destruction of the East Wing. It was not necessary to do so in order to add a ballroom. Nor is it necessary for the ballroom to be so huge that it overpowers the White House. Our history matters. The White House is an important symbol of our democracy. While the President has the right to modernize, for example, a bathroom, or add something that does not disturb what is historically there, he should not be allowed to alter the building itself without permission. The White House belongs to the people, not the President. Please put a stop to this.

The White House is the people's house and a significant piece of our country's history. Building a golden ballroom is a disservice to the people, to the sacred history of the space and to the ideology that our country is founded on. The space should be used to welcome the citizens and foreign visitors with a warm aesthetic and an atmosphere of dialogue and service - not lavish decorum, self indulgence, and grandiose grandstanding.

Based on information available on the internet the Executive Residence is 55,000 square feet and the West Wing is 40,000 square feet. Since we cannot get back what has already been destroyed at the hands of the trump administration. I would like to propose the East Wing replacement mirror the West Wing in size and style. Hopefully, using some materials from the original building as to preserve some of our history.

I strongly oppose the proposed project. It is completely incompatible with the character of the White House complex in its size, scale, design and pure garishness. The pre-emptive destruction of the historic East Wing is a possibly irretrievable disaster but does not justify allowing anything like the current plan to go forward. I believe that the project should now be focused on restoring, to the extent possible, what was there before. Or, at the very least, requiring a replacement design that is consistent with the historic executive mansion in its look, size, and design. STOP this disaster before it goes any further.

“The White House.” To go back to a high school English class, the words function as a metonymy, an obscure word for a common usage – something that stands in for something else. The White House is not just an important historical building, part of an important historical landscape, but a symbol of the presidency and even the president. In that way, it is symbolic of democracy itself.

And that symbol of democracy should, therefore, be subject to the highest standards of historic preservation and architectural planning. If we don’t preserve and protect one of the most important buildings in the nation, what do we protect? How can we, in good conscience, create and enforce any historic preservation regulations if we don't protect this symbol of democracy itself?

But the destruction of the east wing of The White House and the landscape around it is more than a violation of historic preservation regulations and norms. It has become emblematic of the abuse of power by one man, elected by less than 50% of the electorate, aided by the powerful and wealthy people who stand to gain from his favor. A huge, gilded ballroom, overshadowing The White House itself, is replete with the ugly symbolism of cronyism and autocracy.

The built environment is a powerful element of public narrative. L'Enfant understood this when he designed Washington. He was a gifted architect, artist and engineer with a beautiful vision for civic spaces. The man who has already wantonly destroyed part of The White House and proposes this inappropriate enormous addition, has none of those skills. And the rushed process of destruction, design, and, according to their own filings in court, construction of infrastructure, has been a bald attempt to evade the expert review of his plans. Please stop this now, while you still can.

And for decency's sake, please don't call it "modernization." You do not "modernize" by starting with destruction.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.
The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.
The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

I write to express my strong opposition to President Trump's plan to remake the historic East Wing of the White House in his own grandiose image. The proposal is so aesthetically offensive and emotionally disturbing that it's difficult to put my objections into words. For more than two centuries, the White House, nestled on its park-like grounds in the heart of Washington, has stood as an embodiment of America's democratic ideals. Modifications and additions to the building have consistently maintained a sense of stately simplicity in keeping with the respect -- not obeisance or dazzlement or awe -- generations of Americans have felt for the building's succession of residents, our highest elected officials. Trump's "pimping out" of the White House interior and immediate grounds to match his garish private resort is desecration enough, but at least those decorative abominations can be reversed by the next occupant. Although Trump has already demolished the old East Wing, allowing him to erect in its place a monument to his own unbridled ego would be a permanent blight on a shrine to democracy cherished around the world.

I am respectfully submitting the following comments on the East Wing project. While I understand that some modernization was required, such as adding ADA-compliant features, communications hub updates, and possibly a new underground bunker for the President and his team that would feature all modern communications equipment - that modernization did NOT require demolition of the previous East Wing. Now that it has indeed been demolished, the process for making historically sensitive changes to national monuments must be followed. There must be a full review of the plan to rebuild, restoring the exterior dimensions and including limits on the size of the new wing, and preserving the architectural symbiosis with the existing building. Independent architecture professionals must be the ones in charge of making decisions that will last many lifetimes, well beyond the current Administration. The White House is a symbol of our country and it cannot be defaced in any way. It belongs to all Americans and must remain a monument that represents all Americans, not just the current Administration. If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city, or use other venues already available throughout the city.

I am outraged that the East Wing was demolished without any public input. Further, the proposed ballroom would be an abomination in its place, far too large. I feel it is simply being proposed to further public opinion in favor of the president, when in fact it may do the opposite. Stop the construction of the ballroom. I am in favor of restoring the East Wing to something more like what it was.

The White House is a relatively modest mansion that is in synch with our nation's republican roots. The proposed ballroom is out of proportion to the White House and drawings show garish decor typical of tasteless oligarchs in other nations. I am appalled and saddened that the current occupant of the White House feels it necessary to inflict his grandiosity and bad taste on future generations.

The profusion of unnecessary flashy ornamentation now trashing up the Oval Office should serve as a warning. Washington DC is NOT Riyadh or Moscow and there is no need for the US to adopt the over-opulent decor of government buildings in those cities.

A ballroom can be built anywhere. A structure of such preposterous size should not be allowed to draw attention away from the White House.

We need to restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style of the East Wing, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. We should adhere to past processes for making needed but historically-consistent changes. And it should not be rebuilt with private funds!

The White House is the people’s house and should not become a monument to one person's ego.

The East Wing as it was prior to illegal demolition was perfect in its proportions, size, dimensions, footprint, profile, cladding, and color.

The only acceptable design of a structure on the site is one that replicates the proportions, size, dimensions, footprint, profile, cladding, and color of the destroyed historic structure.

It’s really simple. There was no authorization to tear down the historic east wing or to dig up the beautiful rose garden. This is America and the White House belongs to all of us. It is NOT a castle. I don’t know what can be done to restore what has been destroyed. I do know that a gold trimmed ballroom is not representative of our country or our people. At least the garish gold trim defacing the interior of the White House can be easily removed and the concrete covering the ground of the former rose garden can be destroyed and a beautiful garden replanted. The destroyed east wing, at this time, just serves as a symbol of what our democracy is becoming. Do we rebuild? I will leave that decision in the hands of the National Capital Planning Commission where it should have been in the first place. Thank you for allowing me to comment.

Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update construction to code. Make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow process for making needed but historically sensitive changes. The White House is the people’s house. Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding. The project should not extend the previous (current) footprint. Rebuild the former East wing in the same style and scale as before, should be in line with the existing White House and West wing. Not overshadowing our house.

If a ballroom is needed could you reuse one of the other government buildings nearby.

While this should have been done BEFORE the East Wing was destroyed so that travesty could have been prevented, my comment now would be that it should now be rebuilt exactly as it was. A gilded ballroom is not needed at our White House, period. Many historic events have been held there exactly as it is, and can continue to be.

The current name East Wing Modernization Project seems like a misnomer now that the current East Wing has been bulldozed with no oversight or input by the public. Going forward, I suggest the plans should be revised in both size and scope to keep with the original Georgian architecture and not dwarf the original White House footprint A massive ballroom which might only be used infrequently to entertain the rich and famous is not necessary.As a parent/chaperone, I brought my then second grade son along with his classmates and their parent to the White House unveiling of the Sacagawea coin by First Lady Hillary Clinton. This people's event was held in a tent temporarily erected on the grounds and was quite lovely. If a permanent ballroom/event structure is deemed necessary, it must be limited in size and not ostentatious in decor. Is it possible for this addition to be built underground? Was that possibility considered? The White House, the People's House, is not a palace. Restoration, not destruction, should be kept top of mind in its design and execution. The current residents are not permanent residents.

I am disgusted by the changes to the White House, as the current administration seems to treat our property as his own. The comment period by NCPC is the first encouraging thing I've seen.

I do not want to have edifices built to the ego-maniac who currently serves as President. I do not want his name venerated in any permanent Capital buildings. What ever gets spent on his memorials to himself, will be lost as future generations have to unwind the damage being inflicted on the United States.

I question how it is that 46 previous Presidents have managed to hold State Dinners, State Visits and respectful entertaining in the White House. Certainly each President should be able to make changes to help make it a workable residence or maintain the structures. This Ballroom is NOT that kind of change. Destroying the Rose Garden is not that kind of change. It is imperative that this administration be reminded, in the most forceful manner, that changes to structures owned by "we the people" REQUIRE pre-approval of the NCPC.

We have NO KINGS in the United States.

I will try to keep any political opinions out of my comments and focus on the reasons I am opposed to the ballroom that would be true no matter who proposed the project. I am very opposed to the ballroom in place of the historic East Wing of the White House. One of the beautiful aspects of the house was its symmetry. It was very disappointing to see a structure that had historic significance destroyed without the kind of care you would expect thoughtful, educated leaders to undertake. A ballroom could be located any number of places without creating the tackiness of an unbalanced, outsized add-on situated in a place that continually reminds viewers of what was in that space previously. There's just something off-putting and deeply unattractive about a building that obviously is "an addition". It doesn't comport with the dignity of a capital city of a country that thinks and plans well. While I have other thoughts about the philosophies that prompted the removal of the old east wing without following the proper legal and ethical framework in place for such changes, the more universally applicable rationale that would stand no mater my politics is that the removal of the historic building section and replacement with a proposed ballroom will be deeply discordant and tacky.

As stated in Preservation Brief 14: New Exterior Additions to Historic Buildings, to build a "compatible" addition to a historic building that meets the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Rehabilition, "the new addition should be smaller than the historic building-it should be subordinate in both size and design to the historic building." The proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House Complex would dominate the landscape, overshadowing the White House.

If we are still following laws and preservation standards in this country, the ballroom addition would be considered incompatible. In any other circumstance, architects would be advised to go back to the drawing board and resubmit designs that are more in keeping with thest andards, which are as follows:

• A new addition should be simple and unobtrusive in design, and should be distinguished from the historic building- a recessed connector can help to differentiate the new from the old.

• A new addition should not be highly visible from the public right of way; a rear or other secondary elevation is usually the best location for a new addition.
• The construction materials and the color of the new addition should be harmonious with the historic building materials.
• The new addition should be smaller than the historic building-it should be subordinate in both size and design to the historic building.

It should have access for those with physical disabilities as well as visual and hearing disabilities. The interior design should also be in keeping with the original design of the white house. This is "the people's house" not the "king's house", so no gold, not ostentatious, a welcoming entrance and a room which can be used for entertaing, but is not dedicated to entertaining.

The destruction of the East Wing is a tragedy that cannot be corrected - there are no "do overs", but a well-designed, well thought out project can ameliorate its loss. Construction of a new building must be subordinate to the White House (not larger) and it must enhance the overall site while filling a need identified by a legitimate group of historians and leaders. It must be designed by architects who are experienced in working on historical buildings and who understand the long history of OUR house. The design of the addition must also involve the input and approval of Congress, the National Parks leadership, and Washington DC historians. Last, a gaudy, gold encrusted "taj mahal" is NOT what the people's house should be. Any new building must be in a style that adheres to the design and style of the White House prior to the current resident's ridiculous, tasteless additions.

The blatant destruction of the East Wing was our first clue of this administration total disregard for following established guidelines. The proposed "improvements" which include the construction of a massive ballroom that will dwarf the main White House is totally uncalled for. The history and provenance of the People's House needs to be maintained. A massive ballroom (vanity project) is not necessary. If the current resident of the White House needs a space to entertain 900 people, let them go elsewhere. There are plenty of venues that can host - not the People's House. The stately dignity of the White House and it's grounds must be maintained.

The current resident should be held responsible for the reconstruction of the East Wing and its grounds to their former state.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.
Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.

public funds for White House remodeling, renovation and additions. This new space will be much better than hosting foreign dignitaries in tents on the lawn.

Thank you for providing details of the proposed modernization of the East Wing. I’m excited that the area will be accessible and built to last another century. I am writing only to ask that the wing be architecturally symmetrical with the west wing and that the ballroom be well away from the People’s house. Finally, that none of it have the garish white and gold currently favored by this administration. Thank you.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical. Gaudy gold emblems do not represent this original restrained design.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. In addition, the Jackie Kennedy Rose Garden should be restored to its original design.

I do not want to see this new building overshadow the main White House building or obstruct the view of other important buildings in the area. It should follow the same architecture style as the other buildings. Also, the funding should be transparent and Congress should be involved, even if the funding is private. Without Congress, private funding can cause corruption. The name should be kept the same - The East Wing.

I do NOT want to see the 900(+/-) sq.ft. Monstrosity of a ballroom that Trump has planned built!!!!! A smaller, more proportional structure equal in size and basic appearance of the west wing should be designed, and approved through the appropriate channels PRIOR to construction. Trump has started this boondoggle of a project, but should be completely removed from the process as his gaudy, unsophisticated and materialistic tastes do not reflect those of most Americans

Donald J. Trump should and needs to be held accountable to destroying "the people's house". It's obvious that the area has been irreversibly damaged. Nobody should be able to assume they have indefinite authority over any historical property. America is not a dictatorship.
Mr. Trump should be forced to pay for any restoration that can be done to this area. When he is no longer on this earth, it should become the responsibility of his heirs to repay the damage he has done. In addition, Mr. Trump needs to be fined for destroying this property, without being able to contest the penalty/amount. This individual is doing damage to our National Parks and all that is included in that jurisdiction.

Please do not let him get away with doing this damage to our country.

It is evident to most Americans that the East wing of the White House was illegally destroyed, and NO ballroom should be erected there without a majority vote from the nation, as well as legitimate oversight and approval of the historical and legal societies which should retain control over such projects.
Most of the public are horrified at the destruction of OUR White House, and do NOT want a fancy ballroom to entertain the wealthy. Al funding for this project should be investigated thoroughly, as well.
So NOT allow building to proceed, make a garden instead, to replace the one willfully covered over in cementt , another space to entertain only the wealthy.

The East Wing should be rebuilt to a size and manner consistent with the previous structure. Not an exact copy mind you, but a new structure that returns the previous symmetry while modernizing for ADA compliance and technological advancements. A "ballroom" is not needed but an enlarged multipurpose meeting and event space would be pertinent. The grounds around the structure should include a botanical garden which would serve two purposes. The first would be honoring the historic gardens which have been destroyed recently. The second would be to act as an extension of an expanded meeting/event space for guests to enjoy.

The new structure should also include the previous office and work areas including a modernized Office of the First Lady/Gentleman for their expanded work.

Lastly, and moving forward, language needs to be strengthen in all appropriate documentation to clarify the purpose and ownership of the White House. The White House is the peoples house and as such is owned by the people. The sitting Presidents "home" is the Executive Residence...not the entirety of the White House. The President enjoys the privilege of this residence at the invitation of the American People. They do not own it!

I watched appalled and furious at the destruction of the East Wing of the White House the "people's house". This was done without input or permission from any agency or department that should have been consulted before demolition occurred. The proposed construction of a new ballroom which would dwarf the White House itself should be prohibited. It would make the ballroom the focus instead of the White House. The Executive Mansion is not a Trump resort or convention center. Room for banquets and entertaining may be necessary, but a much smaller and more restrained building is preferable. One that architecturally blends with and doesn't overwhelm the existing structure. Please don't allow the proposed construction to proceed.

There is no need for an on-site event space of this scale. The White House is not a resort and its primary purpose is not entertainment. First of all, the East wing should never have been demolished without review by the NCPC. That being said, the proposed "ballroom" , at least from the artist renderings, is totally out of proportion with the existing White House. Also, there is no need for something that large to be built. While there were a couple of outliers, the average attendance at state dinners by the last seven presidents was 100 to 300 people. The number of state dinners held by the last seven presidents does not warrant the construction of a separate, single use facility such as a ballroom with capacity for 900 people.

While the current White House occupant claims that he and private donations would fund the building of this monstrosity, it would be the US taxpayers who would have to pay for upkeep, maintenance, heating and air conditioning, security, etc.

While the current White House occupant thanks that the White House is his own private residence & that he can do what he wants with it, it is not his own residence. He is merely a temporary occupant while serving in the role of president. It is my sincere hope that a future Congress will enact laws to prevent this kind of desecration in the future and that it will require approval by the NCPC and Congress for any future president to change so much as a lightbulb.

All in all,I think that the NCPC should not approve this ballroom and require the East wing to be rebuilt in its former design.

The White House does not need a gaudy addition that dwarfs the original structure. The new addition should be of the same size and architectural style as the west wing. The original Georgian architecture was symmetrical and the new structure should adhere to that design principle.

Special interest groups or “sponsors” should not be allowed to fund the project.

It should not be a gaudy gold palace. The White House is the people’s house and the design and style should reflect that. It should be of timeless design and not cater to the temporary occupant’s tacky style or lack of taste.

The concrete patio should be removed and Jackie Kennedy’s rose garden should be restored.

While maintaining the original classical design, it should incorporate the most up-to-date green energy.

This ugly building is too large and tall. It makes the historic White House look small. Why do we need a ballroom for more than a thousand guests? What I would like to see is that historical building be restored to what it was before this demolition happened. At the very least this “Ballroom” project needs to be stopped now.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800. The fact that President Trump bulldozed the East wing (literally & figuratively) without proper review & congressional approval is appalling.

While expanded event space may be needed, the East wing renovation must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure. The final project must follow these guidelines and be proportional to the West wing for visual symmetry, without removing any more trees of historical significance. If an event space can't be accommodated within a proportional footprint, then it should be developed elsewhere and alternatives for the use of a re-built East wing considered.

Good morning.
I am appalled that this chance to voice opinions on this project are being done AFTER THE FACT when guidelines dictate no major changes are to be done without the public commenting.

While more space may be needed to host larger groups, the aesthetics of the addition should not diminish, or outshine, the existing structures. No space created should be larger than what would equal the size/square footage and dimensions of the West Wing.

The need for attendance at a function should not be as great as holding a "rally", that is not what the White House is for. Hosting delegations/leaders from all over the world would not necessitate a ballroom the size the current administration is proposing.

I respectfully suggest that the size and scope of this project not exceed the current square footage of the West Wing so as to keep the balance in place of our House. We, the people, are the custodians of this center and symbol of our government and we should not cater to the personal "whims" of any sitting administration.

Thank-you for your attention to this very important matter as any change or addition will be in place for years to come.

This project as designed is too large for the space on the White house grounds. It will dwarf the White House itself which should be against the law. As designed and shown on TV the project is gaudy and over-the-top in materials and space. While I agree that the United States may need a place to host larger gatherings than we now have, this one is too large and too gaudy for our country. A more simple large entertaining space would be so much in keeping with our values and monuments/spaces in the capital. This has too much marble and Way too much gold. It reminds me of Versailles or some other much earlier European palaces and the gaudy grandeur of the Arabian countries now. Too much is too much. The hasty demolition and complete, willful disregard for historic preservation, the initial lying about the cost to the public, and scope of the size of the building to dwarf the rest of the White House is an attack on America and its values. The project must be immediately halted, and the East Wing of the White House immediately rebuilt and restored back to the exact standards as it was before, down to the last floor tile, loadbearing wall, and dimensions. The cost of this should be one hundred percent funded by the Trump Administration with constant reviews by a neutral committee, and public hearings on progress of rebuilding.

There is nothing modern about the East Wing project, let's not call it that and be realistic about why it was done. The East Wing must be restored exactly as it was, even if the current foundation must be ripped out and replaced as it was before.

The destruction of the East Wing of the White House was a horrible violation of the trust of American citizens. The White House is not owned by the current occupant; it is merely used for the temporary housing of that current occupant.

What Trump has been allowed to do in the White House is an absolute tragedy. The gold leaf, the treasures removed, the treasures added without regard to environmental concerns of their age-related needs is horrifying. The wall of shame he has installed of past presidents is a wall of shame for what he has brought to the White House. It is not a reverent one to the men of history who have tried their best to lead our country in a direction that will benefit everyone; it is a representation of the weakest, least-liked and most despicable man to ever hold the office of President.

I am ashamed of our current government. I didn't want it; I didn't vote for it, and I cannot understand how it has been left to un-due so much of what ordinary Americans hold sacred. The destruction of the East Wing is just another example of the long list of atrocities this presidency has been allowed to perpetrate on this once-great nation.

I eagerly await the midterms when the citizens of the real America can stop this abuse of power.

As a historian, I am utterly appalled at how little thought was given or taken before destroying the entire East Wing. I understand the need for modernization but the White House is supposed to be a people's house, not a palace. A modest ballroom for events has no need to be larger than the rest of the White House. That no care was taken to preserve the East Wing is a terrible precedent. Any new building needs to be done carefully and with consideration for the original. Ideally with some kind of memorial to the previous space. In addition, the loss of character with the gaudy decorations and patio has harmed the beauty of Jackie Kennedy's vision of the Rose Garden. Something needs to be done so no one, not even a president, can do a reckless destruction again. The everyday people in historic districts must follow the rules. Our history, especially in our 250th year, deserves respect. When modernization is required, the space should follow best practices, not destruction! .

Thank you.

I heartily object to this project as it is described- particularly the grandiose size and scope. It seems to be misnamed, labelled as “modernization” as if that was the primary goal? While all Presidents want to leave a mark of their presence in history in some way this one feels out of proportion, frivolous, unnecessary and expensive in a time of great anxiety about affordability by average Americans. I feel like this is something that should be approved by our representatives in Congress and senate to at least honor the constituents they work for and attempt to reflect in some way the peoples choices. Frankly, it feels disrespectful to Americans at large.
A more Modest, less expensive and flamboyant modernization aligned with the original building would reflect authenticity, respect for Americans and proper humility as good leadership can often display.

East Wing "modernization project." What a euphemism! The ballroom should be consistent in size and appearance with the rest of the White House. This is the People's House. The People can't afford Versailles.

I wish I had a concept to attach, but I'm not architecturally gifted, only appreciative.

It is a national disgrace that the current resident of the White House felt he did not need to comply with any rules regarding the demolishment and proposed replacement of the East Wing. No better example could exist of the contempt with which he views the citizens of this country, whose house it is. Our opinions were neither solicited nor desired in advance as required by law.

The White House was never a palace, and never should be, as we are not meant to be a country of royalty. James Madison warned repeatedly that excessive wealth concentration in the hands of a few was dangerous for our survival as a nation. This proposed addition is a monument to exactly that, both in the hasty demolishment by presidential fiat rather than the lawful procedure and in the size of it, which dwarfs the original jewelbox of a building. Understandably, modernization may have needed to be done, but that is no excuse.

Any replacement should be designed to current standards, including ADA, which can easily be done seamlessly in new construction. The structure should be subordinate in scale to the residential portion of the building, and ideally maintain its symmetry. Details should be classical, simple but elegant as in Federal architecture. Gold should be minimal or nonexistent. The building should have a human scale, rather than being so bloated as to suggest "poor folk not welcome here". (The idea of holding inaugurations there is a poor one, as it prevents everyday Americans from participating.) There should be beautiful landscaping featuring native trees and plants.

This is a symbolic building, as well as a functional one. Its structure should reflect the belief that we are a country of laws, not of kings.

When I heard the early news of plans to literally rape and strip of the White House one of its defining features, the wings, I was devastated. I couldn't believe it was true. And, then I saw the footage of the actual wrecking of the east wing. AFTER, we already saw the Rose Garden destroyed, which should have never been allowed either.

PLEASE hold the Administration accountable to the People of the United States. The White House is our building and we should have had the opportunity to speak to its care, its modification, and its future use!

How dare this project be termed the "East Wing Modernization" project?

There are many reasons to oppose the Trump ballroom, including:

* The lies the Trump Administration has told about how the proposed "ballroom" would not affect the existing White House.
* The outrageous destruction of the East Wing with no warning, no proper input and no respect for the fact that the White House belongs to this Nation, not any one president and certainly not one self-obsessed man.
* The purported funding by those who wish to curry favor with the Trump Administration.
* Donald Trump's treatment of the White House as though it is his personal property and he is free to do with it as he pleases.
* The grossly excessive size of the proposed ballroom.
* The "dictator style" of the ballroom.
* The continued norm shattering and waste of history to please one man's ego.
* The waste of public treasure -- in all senses of that term.

One could go on and on listing the serious adverse effects of what has been done and is proposed to be done.

Donald Trump's lawless and self-interested actions should not be rewarded by pandering to his wants.

The only right course of action at this point is to call a halt to further unilateral action by a lawless Administration and institution of a proper process (including qualified historians, architects knowledgeable about creating public buildings and persons qualified to help determine the appropriate functions of a new structure) to create a building in the place of the former East Wing that will truly be in the public interest.

Please do not conduct a review that affords only the appearance of process while serving as a rubber stamp for the selfish, egotistical wants of one man.

Thank you.

The White House is one of our most historic and recognized buildings. Any changes should be consistent with the existing building in size and historic components. An addition that exceeds the existing size and scale of the White House would distort this historic landmark. The need for these changes is not well documented and needs to respect the history, scale, and design of the existing historic landmark.

This project never should have begun without approved plans. Work should immediately cease until a reasonable plan is submitted and approved. The scale of the proposed building is destructive to the entire White House complex. A $400 million "ballroom" on the White House grounds is not needed. The plans for a new building should be modified so that the scale and appearance of the addition more closely match the destroyed East Wing. Perhaps the interior could include a "ballroom" that is more in keeping with the scale of the destroyed building. In summary, I hope that the Commission will be able to (1) Place a stop-work order on the current construction until an approved plan is in place; (2) Accept designs from approved contractors for an East Wing that closely resembles the one that was destroyed; (3) Approve construction of an East Wing that we can be proud of, not one that resembles a gold-decked palace.

The entire historic East Wing of the White House has been demolished, the historic and beloved Jacqueline Kennedy Rose Garden has been paved over, historic trees planted by former Presidents have been torn down, the historic Lincoln suite has been turned into a marbleized sanitarium, the revered Oval Office has become a cheap gaudy tacky replica of a failed casino or demagogue's palace, the White House Walkway has literally been vandalized with demeaning and derogatory slurs on prior Presidents, and who knows what other desecration has occurred or is under way – none of which were done with the required reviews, permits, legal approvals, or congressional authorization.
Apart from any litigation that is or may be taken to delay or stop this continued destruction of this and other historic and iconic symbols of our American democracy, I ask the members of the NCPC to reject all of the plans being proposed for any new construction, alteration, modification, demolition, or other changes to the White House and all associated structures, buildings, and grounds.
The entire White House (i.e., "People's House"), ancillary structures, buildings, and grounds should be reclaimed, restored, renovated, and preserved to their condition prior to January 20, 2025 (not including any other previous unwarranted and unapproved changes made between January 2017 and January 2021), with appropriate upgrades and improvements as appropriate in accordance with applicable codes, standards, and procedural requirements, and coordinated with other relevant agencies and organizations including the NCPC and the National Trust for Historic Preservation.
The expertise of recognized leaders and documentation in the areas of historic preservation, architecture, history, construction, etc., should be employed to ensure all restoration and renovation is consistent with the history of the buildings and grounds.
The proposed supposed "ballroom" or "event space" is an abomination to the history of the White House, its former distinguished occupants, and to the American people who have cherished, honored, and visited its hallowed halls. If there is a need for larger, more permanent space for executive and state functions, it should be placed in a more appropriate location without disturbing and destroying our historic heritage.
You have a solemn duty to protect our shared history, especially this year as we celebrate our republic's 250th anniversary. Your decisions on this outrage to our nation's most iconic symbol of our democracy will affect and impact our history forever. Please act wisely and reject this desecration. Thank you.

The East Wing should be restored to its original form, updated and modernized to current code. The original East Wing was illegally destroyed. A ballroom almost double the size of the Executive Residence is not needed or wanted, and will create an eyesore on a historic site meant to transcend generations. Furthermore, a ballroom will create huge maintenance issues and utility bills, the cost of which will fall on the backs of taxpayers. Restore the East Wing as it was, preferably funded by the current resident of the Oval Office, who started this project illegally to begin with.

The demolition of the East Wing by the Trump administration without the proper due diligence, approvals, and consent of the appropriate agencies one of many disgraces to American democracy, apolitical processes in place, checks and balances, and the American people. The White House is first and foremost, the people's house, not any president's personal estate or entertainment grounds. Plans for an unnecessary ballroom that would be nearly double the size of the existing White House would be a gross misuse of American taxpayer dollars, especially considering the vast majority of Americans would never have the opportunity to set foot in this ballroom. If this was a project that was of interest to The People, they should have had the opportunity to weigh in prior to the project beginning, as required by all other levels of government.

Already, hundreds of years of history has been destroyed by the carless and callous demolition of the East Wing and there is not true way to rectify that other than turning back time. However, to attempt to restore what has been lost, the East Wing should be rebuilt and restored to exactly the way it was with period appropriate finishes as to when it was constructed, with necessary updates to code as applicable including ADA compliance.

I understand that the historic East Wing has already been removed and that a replacement structure is under consideration. My concern is not modernization itself, but use and proportionality.

Historically, the East Wing served primarily functional purposes — offices, staff operations, and public access support. Replacing that role with a largely single-use ceremonial ballroom strikes me as an inefficient and inflexible use of an extremely limited and symbolically important site.

Single-purpose spaces are difficult to adapt over time and serve the public only intermittently. By contrast, flexible office and support space would align more closely with the East Wing's historic function, better accommodate evolving operational needs, and represent a more prudent long-term investment in stewardship.

I respectfully request that the Commission carefully evaluate whether a large ceremonial ballroom is the most appropriate replacement use for this location, or whether a more multi-use, adaptable design would better serve both preservation principles and the public interest.

The White House is the People's House. It does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those.
The White House is the People's House. It is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical. Any reconstruction should include a nod to American history, not DJT's awful taste in things.
The current occupant of The White House has forgotten he is a temporary resident. He works for the American public and lives there as a guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it. In fact, Donald Trump should be financially responsible for repairing the damage he inflicted when demolishing the East Wing without prior approval.
A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished, as functional office space as it was, but not to a ballroom. Ridiculous. When rebuilding the former East Wing, assure it is in the same style and scale as it was, but install functional updates that bring it up to code/modern standards that may not have been possible in the former structure. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. No ballroom. And no gaudy gold. The structure should be made to fit into the original footprint and design. And, while you're at it, replace the Rose Garden.
Finally, prepare a plan to return the Oval Office and that walkway to its original look, no gauche gold ornaments and stupid Wall of Fame or whatever that thing is about former presidents.
Lastly, let your budget to include this line item: Enough burning sage to remove all essence of DJT when he

The plans submitted by Mr Trump do not reflect the needs of the American people. Like his ego, the proposed scope and size of the ballroom serve only one person - Mr Trump and his billionaire friends. That it would dwarf the size of The People's House isn't surprising since he minimizes the work he should be doing to improve the lives of ALL Americans. Instead, vanity is what matters to him. Regarding the proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House, the “people’s house” as it is known around the U.S.A., we the people must have a say, and I say no. The fact that one person took it on his own accord to destroy a portion of the White House (the “East Wing”) underscores the importance of public input. It has already been permanently altered, without input. This in itself is a tragedy, and a violation of law. The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800.

While expanded event space may be needed, additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. This proposed addition is not compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure.

In summary, I oppose this project and the original East Wing should be reconstructed.

Thank you.

This project is an affront to the American public, and should never have been undertaken without going through the appropriate approval processes. The manner in which the East Wing was bulldozed, without notice, should not mean that the rest of the project proceeds in a similar "bulldozer" manner. If it needed to be "modernized" a "golden ballroom" is not the way to do that.

The garish "golden ballroom" as shown in renderings, does not fit into the historical nature of the rest of the buildings of which it would be a part, and reflects nothing more than a sad attempt to imitate similar structures elsewhere in the world. The proposed giant ballroom is unneeded, and will likely go mostly unused.

For the East Wing project to move forward, it should go through all the normal processes. Create a call for proposals, with historically appropriate and agreed-upon design criteria, as well as a reasonable budget and timeline. Review the proposals, call for public input, and award a design. Then proceed with construction: proposals, bidding, and awarding of contracts to construct, and appropriations by Congress to fund the project.

The only reason this is now being called a "matter of national security" is the manner in which it was initiated in the first place, and is only meant to hurry it along without proper consideration or procedures. A golden ballroom does nothing to address that problem.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

I strongly oppose the 90,000 square foot ballroom addition as proposed primarily because esthetically and architecturally it is inconsistent with the architecture and purpose of the White House, our house. The height of the new building should be consistent with the existing structures. The architectural style should blend with, and not overshadow, existing structures. An architect with experience renovating historic buildings should be part of the design team. I also object to private funding for this endeavor, however since the existing structure was destroyed by Trump without any approvals, the replacement should be completely paid for by Trump or his estate as restitution for destruction of property owned by all people in the United States.

I fear on a daily basis just how much wiggle room those who can stop him will give him. While it may be true that the White House could use an updated event space, the scope of the "Trump ballroom" seems excessive. Since the demolition has already been done and something must be built in its place, please advocate for a reasonably scaled, tasteful re-build that honors the architecture of the White House and that will stand the test of time beyond Trump's occupation of the presidency. The White House is the people's house, and should not be vulnerable to indiscriminate demolition by the current temporary occupants. Please design the new East Wing in the footprint of the destroyed building, consistent with the design of the White House. Certainly, updates to infrastructure are important and acceptable. If any of the interior features were salvaged, thoughtful incorporation into the new building should be attempted. Garish and tasteless gilt decoration detracts from the esthetics of the building. Such projects of important historical building renovations should be carefully designed with consideration for function and historical preservation. It is clear the White House could use a larger, more modern event facility. It is imperative that it fit the scale of the existing campus, and be designed and decorated in a style that harmonizes with the current structures. It is also imperative that the design and construction of the facility be the product of a collaborative effort of the groups and agencies which have oversight over the White House campus, and not subject to the whims of any one individual. The White House is the People's House, and as such should strive for a look that is not only timeless but also reflects the dignity of the United States of America.

This destruction of the East Wing of the White House was horrible, a metaphor for what Trump is doing to the country. First of all, this is the White House, not the Palace of Versailles. The huge addition on the East side of the White House will dwarf the building, forever marring the symmetry of the building. He did this as he does most things, on a whim, without legal approval. Restore the East Wing to it's previous appearance.

While it may be true that the White House could use an updated event space, the scope of the "Trump ballroom" seems excessive. Since the demolition has already been done and something must be built in its place, please advocate for a reasonably scaled, tasteful re-build that honors the architecture of the White House and that will stand the test of time beyond Trump's occupation of the presidency. And under no circumstances name it after this president.

The recent demolition of the East Wing is the greatest insult to the Executive Mansion since its burning by British soldiers in 1814. The addition of the "Ball Room", if permitted, would be a not too distant second. As designed, it's a hideous, unnecessary monument to one man's obsession with leaving his "brand" on everything. It would be an architectural insult to the property and, more broadly, the District, and the inventory of Federal buildings. I urge that nothing of that scale or style be permitted. And further, that only proposals that conform to the size, design, and scale of the original executive residence.

Thank you.

Just submitted!

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The country does not need a massive, tone deaf ballroom available only to the privileged few who are invited to certain White House events. It is not appropriate in size/scale or functionality and is wildly fiscally irresponsible. Building this ballroom would unacceptably worsen the grandeur and beauty of the White House.

We should require the rebuild of the East Wing within its original footprint funded by the same individuals who were responsible for its demolition.

I am a former team member of an architectural / engineering firm. There are guiding issues our architects addressed when designing new buildings: How does the design meet the sky/horizon, how does the design meet the ground, how does it welcome visitors, how does it turn corners, how does it relate to its neighbors. The projected design of the ballroom component of the East Wing Modernization Project gets a failing grade, particularly as to how it relates to its neighbors. From a contextual viewpoint, its size fails to acknowledge the historic significance and the importance of the White House. Dwarfing the White House communicates that partying is more important than the responsibilities and duties of serving as president. There should be a way to accommodate the needs of state gatherings without destroying the vistas of the White House.

I oppose the proposed 90,000-square-foot ballroom addition to the White House for the following reasons:

1. The 90,000-square-foot size is out of proportion for the existing site. Any replacement should be in balance with the rest of the White House.

2. The design is out of character with the original design and would stand out like a sore thumb.

3. There is no need for a 650-person capacity ballroom in place of the historic office and reception space that was unjustifiably destroyed by a lawless administration that did not submit final plans to the NCPC or the Commission of Fine Arts as required.

4. The project was fast tracked and avoided the necessary independent review and Congressional oversight in an attempt to implement a project that would not stand up to unbiased scrutiny and would most assuredly not be approved as currently envisioned.

5. This project is an addition to the White House federal parkland. For the administration to seek funding of the project by private billionaires and corporate donors invites corruption and is wholly inappropriate.

6. It is clear that this is strictly a vanity project to satisfy the ego of an authoritarian president who is only interested putting his mark and/or name on as much as he can during his term in office rather than doing what is in the best interests of the country and the tax paying citizens.

Preservation is important and strengthens our communities.
The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. I am extremely upset that a portion of The White House was torn down without public comment or involvement of the National Trust.
Public input should occur before construction makes the outcome irreversible.

I am a voter and US citizen, and I want the present administration to adhere to the existing law. The East Wing should not have been demolished. But since that's happened already, it needs to be rebuilt in such a way that the structure is as close as possible to the previous structure.

Of course, we are aware that due to many reasons, renovations must be ongoing. However, the destruction of public property is against established law. Citizens should not have to pay for the building, furnishing, or any part of the rebuilding project.

Thank you.

The East Wing should be rebuilt as it was proportioned to the rest of The People's House updating basic areas such as electricity, plumbing, security etc. If the resident of The People's House finds it necessary to have "balls." s/he can find many places in Washington to accommodate that activity. If there was a "basement" that should also be rebuilt with modern day security and amenities. All areas should be accessible to anyone who will visit. The architecture should align with and enhance the existing People's House not overwhelm it. The interior should be refined not gold plated. We are a hardworking, sensible country. The People's House should reflect that along with our history(e.g.skip the gold!). So bottom line - rebuild what was there! I am disgusted with the plan as put forward by the resident of The People's House.

The White House does not belong to its current occupant and that person cannot make unilateral decisions about changes to it or its surroundings.

The new ballroom will be a difficult hearing environment (with hard surfaces and distant loudspeakers) for people with hearing loss. The construction time, before the final floor surface is laid, would be the perfect--and cost-effective--time to lay wires for a hearing loop system that can broadcast sound directly to hearing aids and cochlear implants that come in with the inexpensive telecoil receiver.

The U.S. Supreme Court chambers offer this, as does--effective recently--the National Cathedral, and it is wonderful (requiring no need for people to check out or wear conspicuous equipment). For more information, see

The current administration’s proposed plan is not compatible with the existing structure, does not have the alleged private funding and is ugly.

Private funding for public buildings is nothing but access for sale in the current administration and is extremely problematic.

Even more concerning is the fact that permits were not obtained for demolition and the National Historic Trust was bypassed. This administration must be reined in and the East Wing must be returned to its original state.

The East Wing project should be a restoration of what was demolished at the same scale to previously exant architecture. If the replacement wing needs to be scaled up to increase usable square feet, the increase should not surpass the footprint of the main White House building. The White House is the People's House and was designed to be approachable and balanced, not a palace. If there is need for a large gathering place for state events, the wing should provide the highest and best use for the executive branch. If the wing requires significant below ground construction, the national intelligence agencies should partner to oversee the subterranean build out for highest and best use.

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my strong opposition to the East Wing Modernization project and the proposed construction of a ballroom on the grounds of the White House.

I do not believe the White House needs a ballroom or any structure that is so out of proportion with its historic scale and character. A ballroom is an antiquated concept that does not reflect modern needs and represents an inefficient use of valuable and symbolic space. The White House is not a resort or event venue; it is a historic public building and a working seat of government.

I am particularly disturbed that the East Wing was reportedly torn down without clear public permission, permits, or a finalized plan made available for review. This raises serious concerns about transparency, process, and respect for preservation standards that should govern any work on a site of such national importance.

The White House belongs to the American people. Any major alteration to its structure should involve proper planning, legal authorization, and public accountability. Decisions of this magnitude should not be made unilaterally or without open explanation.

I urge you to reconsider the direction of this project and to provide clear information about the approvals, permits, and long-term vision behind it. Preservation of the White House's historical integrity must take precedence over unnecessary expansion.

Thank you for considering my views on this matter.

Sincerely,

Carol Becker

The White House is the people's house. It does not belong to any one individual. While residing there, we expect our presidents to treat it as the national treasure it is. Noone should be allowed to destroy any portion of this treasure. Full oversight by NTHP and Park department is essential in maintaining the historic accuracy and integrity of the building itself.

To allow Trump to destroy an entire wing, tear up the yard and begin construction on a monstrosity of a structure cannot be allowed. In addition to violating the people's house, the fact it is being funded by private donors is alarming. 1) I was very disappointed that the East Wing was removed during the Government Shutdown without an approved plan in place. There should be a penalty.
2) The new building should not be bigger than the White House itself. Just as a bird can't fly with one wing bigger than the other…. Please maintain the same architecture and symmetry of design from the outside so the grounds are visually appealing to all from the streets. Please keep the gold inside to a minimum or at least removable. It is not classy.

I strenuously object to this project because it is predicated on the desires of one person (Donald Trump) rather than what is ultimately beneficial to us, the American taxpayers to whom the White House ultimately belongs.

The White House East Wing should have not been razed. It will forever be a stain on the current administration's legacy that it desecrated one of the most important historic sites in the United States.

I'm writing to express my anger and frustration with the handling of the demolition of the East wing of the White House and the proposed ballroom. While we cannot undo the loss of history the destruction brought us, we can stop the vulgarity of an enormous ballroom being built on what is the people's house.
The fact that an entire wing of the White House was just demolished without the consent of the people is criminal. And the fact that a proposed ballroom by a criminal is allowed to go through any sort of process of acceptance is a historic crime. Luckily, it is a crime we can prevent.
As a citizen of the United States, I refuse to allow it to continue without protest. If a ballroom must be part of the rebuilding of the East Wing it needs to be within the parameters of code, be equal in size to the original East wing and not to exceed current zoning and building codes. The architecture cannot be beyond what is already acceptable within the National Parks current rules and guidelines for any building within the White House compound and should maintain the same architectural style and feeling of the current White House without the additional fake gold applications from the current administration. We, the people, do not want our tax dollars funding a room that a demented, federally indicted criminal wants to sooth his own ego.

I can't believe this project is happening in the United States. Why do we have so little respect for the exacting, high-caliber craftsmanship that created the historic East Wing -- beautiful construction that was demolished almost gleefully? While that destruction was painful, the proposed "ballroom" is insulting and grotesque.

By flattening the East Wing, we threw away taxpayer dollars and thousands of hours of labor. And for what? A hideous, tacky, grift-engorged "ballroom" that's a monument to one man's narcissism and greed.

I urge you to stop this "modernization" project.

What has been done to the White House and is planned by the President for a ballroom is desecration of the Peoples' House. Since the destruction has already occurred, whatever replaces it should give consideration to the esthetics of the total building - it's proportions and symmetry. If it is to be replaced by a ballroom, it's exterior should be the same in appearance and size as the previous wing. I would far prefer that it simply be replaced in its former form and for its former purposes.

The White House has always been The Peoples House. It does not belong to the current occupant. What Donald Trump wants for the White House is immaterial unless he convinces congress to act legislatively. Therefore you must ignore the President in this matter and follow the established procedures for making alterations to The Peoples House.

We live in a democracy governed by norms and the rule of law. We did not vote in a monarchy inspite of what the current president and his allies wish for. Please draw the line hear and make congress act if changes are necessary.

I am so very appreciative of the opportunity to speak on the atrocity of what is planned and what has already occurred with respect to the East Wing Modernization Project. First, I am disturbed that anyone can take the liberty of making such a major move for the future of the White House. This absolutely should not be allowed to happen because no part of the White House belongs to any one person, regardless of their position. The White House belongs to the American people--not to the President. It should be treated as such. Secondly, even it we were in agreement with the major Modernization, now is NOT the time. Too many Americans are struggling to support necessities.

There are priorities. Modernization of any room in the White House is not one of them. Please stop this from happening.

Very simply put: because this project has not been conducted in good faith to the American people nor in best practice, and Congress has not passed legislation in relation to the demolition, construction, or appropriation of funds for this project, it should be mandated that the original East Wing design be restored in line with historic preservation standards (per the National Trust for Historic Preservation). The White House is "The People's House" and should not be treated as some ego-stroking project of this administration. In the year of the 250th Anniversary of this nation, we should be celebrating historic structures, not dismantling them.

The "modernization" of the East Wing is, at this point, a moot issue. Trump illegally demolished a historic wing of our historic federal government building, leaving a wound against our country in its place.
His demented idea of a ballroom is to create a gaudy landmark of his greed and authoritarianism. Perhaps he wishes to install AI systems created to surveil attendees, record actions and statements spoken there, and weaponize them with his corrupt and complicit Justice Department to punish, detain, implicate attendees for his personal agenda of retribution and extortion.
Unless Congress prevents this act of blatant lawlessness, citizens will be paying for this monstrosity for the foreseeable future.
It is possible that in Trumps morally corrupt ideation, he plans to have installed a "system" which he alone can control, thereby holding the entire government and country hostage to his sick "negotiations". It doesn't take much to imagine all the ways this structure could be used to further his authoritarian plans to destroy democracy in our country.

I would like to express my deep concerns on the destruction of the East Wing . The total lack of honesty regarding the project by President Trump is beyond belief. No historical building should be bulldozed without complete permits and transparent plans. This is not the President's property...he is a tenant at the will of the people. He has shown himself above the laws...permits and planning boards of our Nation's historical buildings.
No further action on his grand gold ballroom should be permitted. The East Wing must be restored and Trump must pay for that restoration. The company he hired to destroy the wing should be fined heavily as well. No single person whether President or not should have had the power to destroy our Whitehouse. Trump w I'll soon be gone from office but it is up to you now to decide if this disaster remains to the People's House.

The White House is the people’s house, not a palace. A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

This is not an "East Wing Modernization Project". This is a destroy the classic White House East Wing in violation of historic and regulatory precedents to replace it with a trashy, meretricious "ballroom" so badly designed that at least one architect has quit. The White House does not belong to the President. It belongs to the People. He is only a tenant and has violated the terms of his occupancy. Not to act is to put all of the White House at the whim of the current occupant. What is stop him from tearing down the main building and replace it with a Trump Tower?

The project must be halted immediately. The President must be required to develop and submit for approval a full site development plan that restore the East Wing in harmony with the overall White House architecture, and the President must pay for the reconstruction project with his own funding.

Do not abdicate your responsibilities to the people of the country. Stop the demolition. Stop the current building plan. Require presentation and approval of a comprehensive building plan that restores the dignity of the West Wing and sharply limits the attempts of the current occupant to spread his gaudy imprint across our House.

To whom it may concern:
It’s challenging to know how to fully describe our shock and horror and disgust at the singlehanded, entirely uncalled for destruction of the East Wing of the People's House. Our response remains as it was when the destruction first occurred - visceral and angry. Not since the Twin Towers and the Pentagon were hit on 9/11 have we experienced such outrage as citizens of the United States. It's horrifying enough to see the White House dripping in kitschy gold embellishments and other evidence of temperamental outbursts aimed at previous occupants of the White House, but to see the building itself bulldozed for an oversized, monstrously tasteless and entirely unnecessary vanity project - appalling. While we recognize that the damage cannot be undone - we encourage a full restoration of the White House without delay - and a full accounting of the objects that were in the East Wing before demolition occurred. We the People deserve nothing less - in fact, we deserve far bett! er!

First of all, members of the National Capitol Planning Commission should condemn, in the strongest possible terms, the administration's reckless and unlawful razing of the White House's East Wing.

If a new structure is to be built where the East Wing once stood, it should be tasteful, consistent with existing architecture of the White House grounds, and shouldn't overwhelm the White House residence itself. I'm not sure that a 90,000 square-foot grand ballroom meets any of these criteria. And while additional entertaining space may be needed for official functions on White House grounds, I worry that over time a glitzy White House ballroom will come to be seen as a place for elites and party donors to hobnob with administration officials at private social events behind closed doors.

I would recommend scaling back scope and size of the proposed construction so that the new building looks like a wing of the existing White House, providing some sense of symmetry and balance with other White House architecture. I'd also like to see the purpose and design of the proposed building change from a space purely built for entertainment and social events to more of a mixed-use facility which could also host educational tours, student learning activities, art or science exhibits, or other events held in the American public or national interest.

I would also recommend that, if a large 90,000+ square-feet entertainment or social complex is really needed on Capitol Hill, that members of the National Capitol Planning Commission begin drawing up long-term plans to acquire and develop a space which is more suitable to such a project than the limited space created when the East Wing of the White House was recklessly and unlawfully razed without public input or Commission engagement.

Thank you!

I am reassured by the return to the opportunity to comment on the East Wing renovations, as provided by the National Historic Preservation Act and the Administrative Procedure Act, among others.

I hope there are legal consequences for the current administration's unilateral destruction of the East Wing portion of one of the most cherished architectural icons of the American People's House.

This is not a politically based disagreement with the current renovation plan. Stating the obvious, of course buildings need to be maintained and updated to current uses.

Maintaining the elegant proportions of the current footprint and heights keeps the focus on the People's House aspect of the building as the previous additions demonstrated.

Formal diplomatic entertainment functions should be supported, but not become the primary function of the White House, and as such, the buildings need to be functional but not grandiose.

The East Wing renovation should be fit for purpose, without creating an extravagantly exclusive experiences at the expense of the American people.

This is in keeping with both the historical design of the building and the foundation of our Nation.

The sequencing of this project has been reversed - starting demolition without oversight and the lack of information about it has not made Americans feel like this project is for the benefit of our country. Preservation and stewardship components are happening after the fact vs up front.

As the centerpiece of the project, the massive ballroom raises questions. From what I've observed of our foreign policy and relations in this administration our state activities are not about being a gracious host across a broad group of countries and attendees, so why do we need this enormous venue? There are already spaces that are adequate. The renovations are looking more like a Trump prestige opportunity driven by his own taste and desire to entertain, which I do not think jives with American history, sensibilities, and heritage. I have concerns about the security and operations component and about systems and data centers being built in, around, and underneath this construction. It has been announced that this will be privately funded - taking money from the private sector for these types of projects is a terrible idea. Not only does it not keep us balanced and rational about how much should be spent in the current "waste reduction" environment, but it seems like an opening to potential corruption and at risk of exceeding legal privacy and security rights of American visitors.

The destruction of the East Wing has been a shock. Once a thorough and unbiased review has been made of the site, including an environmental analysis, plans need to be drawn up by a company with NO ties to the current administration. If the idea of a large ballroom is determined to be appropriate, then the review also needs to look at how the East Wing was used in the past and to ensure that the new space can be used for those purposes.
This cannot be an ego stroke to the current president because the White House does not belong to any one administration; it belongs to the citizens.

In the second place the White Hose design for a new ball room was not approved by the authorities responsible for overseeing any modifications or reconstructions operations of Federal Historical Properties. To The Commission,
I write to you today to state my objection to the wanton destruction of a part of our National heritage, the White House.
This building belongs to the people of this country, and while minor changes have been made to it through the years, they have been carried out through the proper process and agreement. Support has been bipartisan and the footprint of the building was never affected.
The current project to create a ballroom by "bulldozing" through anything resembling a thoughtful and democratic procedure makes a mockery of everything the White House stands for.
This is The People's House, not a privately owned residence or casino, to be demolished and changed at will.
I sincerely hope that this project is stopped, and that the perpetrator of this illegal action be made to pay whatever sum necessary to return the property to its former architectural dignity.
Thank you.

Good morning,
Regarding the demolition of the White House East Wing without any foresight, permits, Congressional permissions, etc.
The East Wing should not have been demolished before permissions were given to build a gigantic eyesore of a ballroom that was never needed. Our country does not have balls, huge dinners, etc, every day, or even every year, to justify building a monolith for that purpose. No matter if it was funded by donations from rich people wanting favors from a president who is not authorized to give them. This building would be nothing more than a monument to a giant presidential ego.
While people are homeless, jobless, can't afford basic food and Healthcare, a non-egotistical president would have considered the people he is supposed to govern first, before taking on an generally unwanted project.

Now, we the people, are stuck with a giant pile of rubble where a once proud People's House Wing stood. Either the president rebuilds what was taken from us, or he is held responsible in totality for ruining it. A yard full of sod is not the answer.
Hold this man and his administration responsible for the various destructions done to our house. Nothing else will be acceptable.
Sincerely,
A citizen of the United States

I write to express my anger and disdain at the unauthorized wholesale demolition of the East Wing. This beautiful classic building is one of our primary architectural treasures, a symbol of our nation. In its balanced design is a statement of the ongoing mission of every President to consider maintaining critical balance in this position's leadership. The notion that Donald Trump could, on a personal narcissistic whim, decide to violate this exquisite building, introducing not just an inappropriately overinflated addition celebrating his lust for attention, but then to select a completely different architectural style, on behalf glamour and bling, to make a glittering statement of his Nazi-esque decor tendencies. This is utterly disgusting. He doesn't need a gigantic ballroom to entertain his billionaire donors, further encouraging them to feel apart from and above the American citizenry.
Thank you for putting an end to this wasteful vanity project. Please restore this building to its modestly glorious and appropriately symbolic appearance. Sincerely, Deborah McLeod

No significant exterior changes should be made to such a historic site as the White House without planning permission and pubic input. It is the People's House, not that of an individual president.

The building's dimensions and architectural style should remain intact or, at least, in proportion to adjacent structures. The hiring process of architectural and general contracting firms should be transparent and open to multiple bids.

If a ballroom is needed to exceed the White House's current dimensions, it should be built elsewhere. It could potentially be a revenue-generating (rentalable) site when not in use for government purposes. However, no ballroom or other structure should exceed that of the White House, especially in terms of height.

Respectfully submitted,
Diane Evia-Lanevi

The exterior dimensions and architectural style must be restored to the original with updated wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes. Proper procedures must be adhered to for this historic property.

If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.

I am strongly opposed to the construction of a huge ballroom next to the White House, a construction project which if built as planned would overshadow the architectural symmetry of the White House (prior to the unauthorized destruction of the East Wing) and serve as a continuing reminder of the poor taste of the current administration. I have no objection to a state ballroom somewhere in D.C., of appropriate size to hold state functions, but not there, not at that scale and not merely as an expression of the whims of a president whose sense of style, scale and grandeur are completely inappropriate to the history, tradition and sense of proportion of the executive mansion.

The East Wing should be rebuilt as close as possible to the original. In a time when history is being erased/rewritten, when beloved areas of the White House are being destroyed, allowing the wing to overshadow the original White House would be another slap in the face to Americans who look at the White House as the home of freedom and justice. Full of history and traditions and representing the American people.

We were dismayed and appalled to see the East Wing torn down without input from Historical Preservation experts. We are opposed to the construction of a Ballroom building which dwarfs the Main White House in size and scope. It is overwhelming.

Please engage historical preservationists, historical architects, historical designers to determine the best uses for the new building. Perhaps a SMALLER ballroom might be useful. Office space for the First Lady/First Gentleman are traditional.

The proposed East wing does not fit or blend with the colonial architecture of the White House, the interior is hideous, Greek and not at all appealing to the majority of Americans. The White House is not a European palace and should not resemble one. It is a government building not a social club. Improvements by other presidents never tore down the structure and only added amenities such as a pool and the rose garden. How can a president tear down the East Wing without permission or approval? This entire project is so disheartening to all Americans.

The East Wing Modernization Project should reflect the original scale and design of the previous wing. The project should conform to current ADA standards, incorporate the latest technology and provisions to make it "future proof" so further expensive renovations won't be necessary. Since this is truly the "People's House", it should be open to the public, and be used for public events, not as a gilded set piece for the political Elite. The interior and exterior details and decorative aspects should harmonize with the rest of the White House, an understated elegance reflective of the long history and temporary nature of any single administration, not a monument to bloated excess and the personal taste of one occupant.

The East Wing should be restored to its former design, with modest changes as necessary to modernize, within the original architectural style and layout. There is no need for a decadent, monstrous ballroom that does nothing to serve the needs of the American people and destroys the stately aesthetic of the White House. If an improved bunker, or additional seating for state events are required, then the administration must go through the same process every other president has in getting the plans reviewed and approved, prior to bulldozing the people’s house, in as nonchalant a way as he has bulldozed the Constitution.

I am a descendant of ancestors who fought in the American Revolution (my father was a member of the Sons of the American Revolution). I also am a descendant of immigrants from Ireland and Great Britain. I received a B.S. in History and briefly taught history in middle and high school. I share this background because it shapes my perspective on history and the value of our monuments. The White House is an historical monument, first and foremost. The individual elected to hold the office of President is a temporary guest in the White House and any modifications to the White House and grounds should be subject to approval of the National Trust. The destruction of the East Wing by this president is an affront to the historical relevance of the White House. Additionally, the proposed “ballroom” is an insult to the “People’s House” because its purpose is to entertain the elite and will not be available or open to people of lesser means. The project must be stopped, the ballroom must not be built, and the East Wing should be rebuilt to its original grandeur. History is meaningful and must be respected, admired, and preserved.

While I agree with the need of a "ballroom" for the White House that addition to the East Wing must be in keeping with the principle that the White House is the "People's House" NOT the President's Palace. With that in mind any addition must not dwarf the original mansion. It should be limited to a single story above ground and a minimal square footage to accommodate a state dinner. The current plans being put forward by the President would transform the White House to a European style vanity palace. Further, the project should be paid for by public funds or small donations, not by large private donations by wealthy donors which create the appearance of malfeasance.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby. For example, the central space at the National Building Museum is huge and Union Station has a lovely and large space. If a designated ballroom is necessary, the federal government can select another nearby location to renovate to create a ballroom; it does not need to be and should not be located in the White House.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics—that was a deliberate decision to communicate an important message: the occupant of The White House is not a royal ruler; they serve the people and live there as our temporary guest. They should not be allowed to rebuild it to their own tastes, no matter who pays the construction bill.

The East Wing should be reconstructed in the exact footprint of the East Wing that was demolished. It should be the same in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing must house a ballroom—despite all previous occupants being able to host dignitaries from around the world for decades without one—that ballroom should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

I was appalled by the destruction of the East Wing of the White House and the dumping of the destroyed material on public golf courses. All of this was done without legal authorization. Now in haste the new wing is being planned with no input from the proper channels representing the American people and funded by donors to curry favor with this administration.

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and stewarded by the National Park Service. It has been home to our presidents since 1800 and is perhaps the most significant historic site in the United States. Before the White House is permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to be heard and to help shape decisions that affect our shared national heritage.

This is a legally required federal review process, and public participation is essential. Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must be reviewed by the NCPC and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), and receive congressional approval. These safeguards exist to ensure transparency, accountability, and meaningful public input.

Public input should occur before construction makes the outcome irreversible. As National Trust President and CEO Carol Quillen has stated: “The American people deserve an opportunity to provide comment and shape the project.”

While understanding that additional event space may be needed, the scale of the East Wing ballroom design currently being contemplated is wildly disproportionate to the size of the primary White House structure.

The White House is an historic property, a symbol of our country, and an image easily recognizable worldwide. The White House itself should remain the primary focal point with any additions to the structure itself or within the compound.

If allowed to go through as currently proposed, the ballroom will dwarf the primary Executive Residence, becoming the main focal point of the property. The United States of America should NOT be symbolized by a ballroom. (Not to mention this will destroy the previously existing symmetry of the Executive Residence with the connected East and West wings.)

Construction of the ballroom as currently proposed should NOT be allowed; plans should be reworked to bring it back into proportional scale with the existing Executive Residence and West Wing structures before construction is approved.

Unfortunately, he has vulgar taste in architecture. If the proposed ballroom has to be built, I favor a much more historical approach, something that would blend in with the current style of the White House.

Furthermore, it was reckless and possibly criminal to have destroyed the East Wing of the White House. In the future, I must insist that any remodeling or new construction must meet with the approval of the advisory committee.

Since this agency wasn't consulted before the destruction occurred, I don't believe we owe this administration the privilege of building anything new or larger than the original building. I request as a taxpayer and citizen that the original East Wing be replicated as it was before the destruction, with the exception of any modernization that makes the area safer and more habitable, such as electric upgrades, security improvements, ADA adjustments, and any other structural updates that are necessary to allow the occupants to be safe and comfortable as is reasonable and necessary. No ballrooms by billionaires, no gold-plated monuments to ego, no tacky Vegas-style decor. This House is a place of dignity that honors of our history and values. If this president wants a playroom for his wealthy benefactors he can build it in Florida on his own dime, or theirs. This is the People's House; not the president's personal playground. We demand that our tax dollars are the only money spent on this restoration so that there's no question about who owns the building. State dinners have been held in tents on the Whitehouse lawn in the past and have been quite lavish and beautiful! The current President should not have torn down the attached historic building without authorization. He didn't take care in the environmental impact of such deconstruction of a historic building. This is not his permanent residence and is only on loan to a President for either 4 years or 8 years. As I said the new building should be in size and proportion to its current surroundings. It should mirror current outside style that the planning commission decides best fits the national landscape of our nations capitol. The interior should reflect the standards of the people and not the standards of anyone wishing to be king. In other words color scheme should be muted and tasteful. All offices that were present in the old building should be restored. Any basement area or if true bunker should be restored so that they provide exactly what is needed to save the lives of those who seek shelter within it.

Select another architect that is not beholden to ONE MAN. Renovating a national treasure should not be at the discretion of the President and his billionaire friends trying to remain in his good graces. The U.S. is not a dictatorship and the current administration should be held accountable to follow the outlined process. This is absolutely ridiculous that one MAN is being allowed to dictate the construction of a ballroom to glorify himself.

Sincerely,
Sandra Mock Myers

Since we were not given the choice to leave the White House as it was, I feel this is too little too late. My first choice would be restoring the White House as it originally stood. Should you go through with this disastrous plan to build a ballroom, it should only be to scale and not be gilded in gold. I am hoping that a designer with a taste befitting the People's House will be used and that it will be tastefully to scale and not burdened on the backs of those of us working to pay the taxes.

Modernization shouldn't ignore history. The 'surprise' demolition of our White House's East Wing actually shook this 54 year old to the core. Having seen the Miniature White House when I was 30 in 2001 at the Texas State Fair just post 9/11/01. It was inspiring & "I will see it someday." A handful of years later, in my ignorance, when I went to D.C. I didn't realize you had to "pre-arrange" a WH tour. I have the book, seen shows, movies and interviews. Now it won't ever be the way I imagined.

Please, have respect for our nation & do your best to preserve our past... restore (obviously with updates) the PEOPLE's House to the best of your ability.

There is no cry from our amazing nation to build a monster ballroom which throws the whole esthetic off.

The grandiose "let them eat cake" ballroom's vision is actually a stab in the heart from what I have ever known as a United States citizen and Nevada Native Born.

Build & modernize the bunker... but take a breath &, please, make the EAST WING the most accurately resurrected building in the WORLD! (There will be stories for ages to tell.)

An event space is needed on the White House grounds. This is a fact. Scale, compatibal design, and viewscapes must be the overiding decision points for this undertaking. The current proposed renderings show a builiding which does not consider any of these factors. This is unfortunate and should not be approved by NCPC. Please do not allow the White House and its grounds be Mar-a-Lago'd.

The original East Wing should not have been torn down without prior authorization. None of this project should have been started without a thorough study.
Because no study was done, and no prior authorization was given, all construction should be halted. The White House is an historic building that belongs to the people. One man's idea to build a ballroom that will dwarf the size of the existing structure is counter to all that we Americans believe about representative governance. My personal feeling is that the East Wing should be rebuilt according to current code; but if a ballroom is authorized, it's size should be of a size that is much more in keeping with the existing structure.

There may - and i stress "may" be a need for a larger gathering space for public functions. But i heartily disagree with the authoritarian manner in which this project was carried out. Without oversight, without public comment, and without any kind of approval, this regime went ahead and bulldozed one of the most significant public buildings in the nation.

The price tag keeps going up and up. There is a constantly changing roster of architects. No plans were submitted for approval. Nobody seems to know where the money purportedly raised to build this structure is located, or if it has even been raised yet. And i suspect, inevitably, that the American taxpayers (which are mostly NOT billionaires) will foot the ultimate bill.

I am wholeheartedly opposed to this project - as a fourth-generation American, a citizen, a voter, and a taxpayer. In a just society, the so-called "funders" of this unlawful project would be required to bear the cost of restoring the East Wing in its entirety. We should not be a pay-to-play government, handing out bales of cash from private donors in return for concessions. Yet here we are.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

This is a gross defacement of the White House. The proposed style is entirely incompatible with this landmark. Further, its scope and scale dwarfs the original structure, at almost double the square footage. This is clearly in violation that it must be subordinate to the main building.
I find the concept and proposed execution offensive.
At the least, it requires a major resizing and redesign.

It was bad enough paving over the Rose Garden (although that won't be extremely hard to reverse) … please don't let this permanent abomination proceed as-is.

Respectfully submitted,

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

The White House is the peoples' house. It needs to be appropriate for all citizens, our history and traditions, and all presidents, not just the one office holder.

It is completely inappropriate to build a gigantic ballroom onto the White House. The proposed East Wing is out of scale both to the current building and the symbolism and purpose of the presidency itself. The East Wing modernization project began in disgrace by ignoring normal procedures, public comment, and the architectural history and beauty of the existing structure. As a third generation American, the White House is a symbol of our nation, a temporary home of the president who is supposed to be leading us. The continual destruction of historic parts of the grounds for personal vanity projects is disgusting. Presidents are temporary CARETAKERS of those grounds and they need to be respected for the history they represent and be for ALL Americans. The "expansion "should never have been undertaken. Actual care must be used to restore our nation's home back to what was intended- a place to welcome leaders from within and without our country who are dedicated to bringing peace, true leadership, and respect to everyone.

I appreciate this opportunity to comment on the East Wing project.

It is my opinion that the East Wing of the White House should be reconstructed to its original external appearance, with appropriate updated modifications to the interior. This would restore the visual integrity of the original structure.

I have no objection to the construction of a Ballroom built on property nearby or adjacent to the White House; however, it should not be attached to the White House except perhaps by a Colonnade. The scale and design of the new construction should be complementary to the White House and should not visually overwhelm the original structure.

The interior should be of a traditional design with appropriate ornamentation. Rococo architecture would

NOT be appropriate for this structure! The use of gold leaf and other ostentatious decoration should be prohibited.

Thank you for considering my comments

The dignity of the White House has to be respected. It symbolizes respect for our democracy which is under attack daily by this administration. The people also need to be respected and I appreciate this opportunity. An oversized, gaudy structure is reflective of Donald Trump's ego, not the soul of America.

It's obvious that the East Wing should never have been torn down, especially in the underhanded, manipulative way it happened. I feel it should be rebuilt as it was with modern improvements. Adding an additional building at a reasonable size that is cohesive with the rest of the White House should be separate. Covered access from the White House would be simple to achieve. This would restore the integrity and respect the White House deserves as well as create more space for events.

I have confidence this could be achieved with the money that has been donated without impacting taxpayer dollars.

Thank you,
Suzanne

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to comment on this project. I am both sad and angry about the unapproved demolition of the East Wing and the paving of the Rose Garden. I love and respect history and our national treasures and believe the White House is one of them that deserves our full attention.
Please proceed with caution on this project. This is our nation's house, and any changes or updates to its main structure should require a thorough and measured research and evaluation process that involve architectural construction and historical experts at each step of the process. This is a project that requires thought and care with each step. I hope the addition will not be as large as originally proposed. It should be much smaller and coordinate with the type of construction and materials of the house and its west wing.

Although I would like to comment on how the interior is decorated, I'll place the focus of my comments on the construction of its size and architectural size.

Again, please proceed with caution on this project and respect the history of this building and how it will look if an addition overshadows the size and intent of the original structure. Thank you.

The east side of the WH, which was destroyed without consent or comment, should be restored so that the exterior is visually balanced with the architecture of the rest of the building. Adding height to accommodate expanded interior space would be acceptable so long as it doesn't create security problems. The interior should be restored to accommodate office space as previously used. For the public areas including the ballroom, the period style could be mixed to showcase more modern, American decorating styles such as Art Deco, mid-century modern, California easy living. I prefer the restoration of living trees and gardens instead of the cement patio recently installed.

The East Wing of the White House served as an important historical structure that housed contributions made by female public figures. I am adamantly opposed to and troubled by the erasure of its history. The east wing should be restored to its prior structure, perhaps with the exception of it being updated to be fully compliant with the Americans With Disabilities Act. All of the changes that have destroyed the character of the White House including the addition of fake gilded wall decorations, the destruction of the rose garden, and anything altered its appearance without cause for improvement of safety or accessibility needs to be removed. The White House, its grounds, and adjoining property are part of our national heritage and their integrity should be maintained as such.

The East Wing needs to be returned to a place for the President's spouse and his/her work. It should be a welcoming place, fully accessible and modernized, to welcome guests from this country and others, surrounded by gardens for outdoor activities. If we are smart, it will contain functional and flexible space to accommodate work, hospitality, quiet meditation, and small gatherings. It should be designed with the future of the presidency in mind, and not for any specific President and Spouse. It is the People's House, loaned to each successive President but in the trust of the People of this Country.

I believe the East Wing should be restored to the same footprint as it had prior to its recent and destruction. The only changes should be making sure it is ADA accessible.

As for the ballroom, I believe if it is built it should not be built on the White House grounds, especially if its size dwarfs the White House itself, which should predominate on the site. It could be built elsewhere in DC where it can also function for the people of the US, the public in general. A building that size should be used for more than the relatively rare occasions of exclusive state dinners/functions. If it's a public building it should be accessible to the public.

Hasn't there already been demolition on the "proposed" project?

A ballroom is not a good use of our tax dollars. It's even worse if outside donors are paying for it. Should we be beholden to MORE wealthy companies and individuals? No. If they're so willing to spend money, perhaps more thoughtful projects can benefit.

Nobody asked for comments before the bulldozers began to tear apart our house. What now? A gaudy golden ballroom? No.

Our current administration reminds me of "a bull in a China closet". Dismantle and destroy seems to be their agenda. Turning the East Wing into a ballroom is just one example. Trump dancing around the room with his wife while cameras send the images around the world. This country is TOLD once again we will bow to his mental illness. I don't want a ballroom in my United States Capitol. I want the East Wing to continue to provide space for the business of the people. Thank for the opportunity to speak. That is being eroded more and more with each passing day. Pamela Reuter

Please stop the bastardization of the White House. The People's House exists to serve the People, not the ego of one man. There is no world, real or imagined, in which the proposed ballroom is anything more than a vanity project meant to scar the landscape with an indelible stain of one man's authoritarian pursuit. Not only does this project fail to serve the People, it betrays them. I don't know whose white and gold palace Trump is trying to emulate, Epstein or Putin, but it needs to stop.

Even the name of the project is deceiving - the East Wing no longer exists!

The current plan for a monstrosity of a ballroom dwarfs one of the most important buildings in the history of this country, and places that building in a position of inferiority to an entertainment venue. The current plans cannot be allowed to proceed, especially since the entire project was begun with NONE of the approvals required by the various agencies that should have been involved from the start.

Dear National Park Planning Commission members,

As a US citizen and a taxpayer, I humbly request you to reduce the size of the proposed East Wing modernization project. The proposed building should not be larger than the main section of the White House and should reflect the classical architecture of the White House. The interior design should also reflect the general taste of the White House, not its current occupants. The White House is supposed to be a symbol for our nation, not a vanity project dedicated to a single person.

First of all, the President must be held accountable for the destruction of a national landmark, including the rose garden and the ridiculous cafe seating. He should not be above the law. I realize that's not your job, and that you likely agree; but I feel compelled to include that opinion.

New construction should be in keeping with the scale and design of what was already there. Maintain the visual balance of the original design. Visual attention should not be drawn to a wing because it's ridiculously bigger than everything else. The House should visually be a 'whole'. If it includes an unnecessary ballroom (how often does one truly use a ballroom?!), fine; but priority should be given to restoring the First Lady's space and other day-to-day functional spaces. We can hope there will be a real active/working First Lady in residence again in the near future. The decor should also be in keeping with the tradition of rest of the House — skip the pretentious gold leaf on everything. It can be modernized without losing the sense of history and grace, but we're well past the Gilded Age. It should still maintain the designation as the 'East Wing' and not be named after 'him'. We do not honor those who destroy our history.

If the Kennedy Center is allowed to be destroyed in the same way (which it should absolutely not be), add the ballroom on to that reconstruction. That's actually an entertainment space. That's where it would make more sense. But, again, maintain the tradition of the space. Elegance, not gaudy.

The East Wing of the White House should be carefully restored, not converted into a ballroom, because it is a working part of a historic public institution, not a venue for spectacle. Its offices, visitor spaces, and functional design reflect decades of civic purpose, supporting public engagement, national service initiatives, and the daily operations that connect Americans to their government. Preserving that legacy honors the continuity of democratic traditions and the people who have worked there in service to the country.

Restoration would protect the architectural integrity and historical meaning of the space while ensuring it remains accessible and useful for future generations. A ballroom may offer temporary grandeur, but thoughtful preservation maintains authenticity, stewardship of public resources, and respect for history. The East Wing deserves investment that sustains its mission and legacy rather than reshaping it into something detached from its civic role.

It is my opinion that the president needs to restore the East Wing to be exactly as it was before he knocked it down. He destroyed a part of American history, our history, without a thought in his head for anyone but himself. This is absolutely disgraceful and should not be allowed. Because he did not get approval for the removal or the new plans to build there, it absolutely must be restored exactly as it was before demolition. I'm sure the plans or blueprints of some kind exist in the records somewhere, and that is what needs to be built exactly where it once was.

Additionally, part of this restoration needs to include the restoration of Jackie Kennedy's rose garden. The rose garden was always a noted part of the White House and it is not acceptable for one individual to decide to remove it. Bring back the roses!

-- Its exterior design is ahistorical and vastly out of scale with the existing (remaining) White House.

The White House is the people's house, not the Trump's house or any President who temporarily occupies the residence. The First Family are tennants not owners. They have no right to unilaterally change the White House in a significant manner.

The demolition of the East Wing should never have occurred. The company who did the demolition should be sued and never allowed to bid on any government projects again. The Trumps should be held financially responsible for restoring the East Wing to its original state, albeit now wiring, HVAC, plumbing, and other structural elements will need to satisfy new construction codes.

I am appalled and sickened by the utter disrespect this First Family has shown to the White House and its grounds. There is a difference between restoration and destruction followed by replacement. Aren't there rules about whether buildings in DC can be taller than the Washington Monument? Why is it acceptable for this President to ignore laws, rules, and norms? Where is Congress? Why are there no consequences for the destruction?

The East Wing needs to be restored to its original glory, and the idea of building that monstrous, gaudy ballroom should be scuttled forever!

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

Thank you,

The unauthorized demolition of an historic building, the PEOPLES' House, is abhorrent. When rebuilding and modernizing for future presidents must be done with a mind to the scale and presence of the original architecture. An addition that is almost twice the size of the original, central building denotes that the essence of democracy lies not in the main halls, but in a vanity project of a failing president. An absolute travesty, if not outright crime, occurred when Mr. trump selfishly destroyed a huge section of our White House. Under no circumstances should his crime against our nation be rewarded with the oversized and inappropriate ballroom. The wing should be rebuilt as it was and reopened as a public museum. A small dining room should be added and everyday that it is open to the public, a randomizer should offer a meal to incoming guests; turn what would have been lavish taxpayer funded dinners for cronies of Mr. trump back to the people of this country. As to needing places to hold state dinners…why? Why are so much of our tax dollars going to impress foreign dignitaries, or more likely in the case of this regime…foreign billionaires come to pay off Mr.trump in exchange for whatever they want. There are many federal buildings to use as venues around the DC area that should be capable of holding actually necessary dinners, of which there really aren't any. Taxpayer money should not be used for these lavish affairs. Leave governing and diplomacy to official meetings, not to include unnecessary functions such as costly balls or dinners.

Any decor should represent the entire country and all of our cultures. The White House. What does it mean to modernize? And why do we have to modernize? There is nothing wrong with a traditional home in a modern city. I believe the White House should reflect all of our histories.

Bring back the East Wing, which balances the West Wing. Let's not forget it was the home of the First Ladies and one man since construction. Nothing speaks louder than eliminating the contribution of women to the development and success of this country.

And bring back the Rose Garden and include a community garden. We need a welcoming arrival place for ordinary citizens as well as diplomats to show our true culture and concern for all citizens and guests.

A Ballroom for one man is not an image that The United States of America was founded on, nor needs to project.
The White House, built by slaves, represents the good and the shameful that reflect his and her story without embarrassment, shame or gloating.

We want and need a place we call the People's House to reflect "we the people" of The United States of America.

It was devastating to see pictures of the East Wing being ripped off and destruction with no regard for the history of the White House and those who occupied that space temporarily and respectfully. My preference would be to restore it back to what it was and Donald Trump build his own ballroom away from the White House so he could make it as tacky as possible like Mar-a-lar-go. If that is not possible then the ballroom should be constructed as closely as possible to the scale of the East Wing to match the style of the White House exterior. The interior should match the classic style that blends with the White House not the over the top gaudy gold overlay on everything and Mar-a-lar-go style. I am writing as an American citizen.

The demolition of the East Wing and planned construction of a ballroom addition to the White House has fallen far outside the bounds of what American citizens expect for the stewardship of our shared national historic sites. The White House belongs to the American people, and the process by which an ornate ballroom is being added to the structure is deeply flawed. This monstrosity of an unneeded ballroom was never approved by the people. It's the people's house, not the current resident's. Return the east wing as it was, and put back Jackie Kennedy's rose garden. As I understand it, anything added or changed is supposed to conform to the structure it's added to, not tower over it. Again, we don't need another ballroom. There's plenty of spaces like that in DC. Restore the east wing as it was, for future occupants of the people's house!

The new east wing should be proportional in size to the White House. Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.

Focus on what existing space is lacking, and limit to those needs. A ball room is wasted space with limited use.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.

This is the People's House not the property of the elite. This ballroom is a blatant display of indulgence and wealth. The people of the United States of America are not helped by having our elected leaders attempting to portray OUR HOUSE as if it were the home of a monarchy. If our elected leaders and our government, who are there for US, can be so tone deaf to this, then they should find another job. The gulf between the average citizen and the gilding of our House while they are losing services that our taxes pay for is only acceptable to narcissistic elitists.
Shame on this occupier of the people's house for thinking he has the right to destroy and bastardize our property as if he owns it (and us).

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby.

It is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical. The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure, but be ADA compliant and include no gold appliques or filligree. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, it should be made to fit into the original footprint, design, and aesthetic.

I’m 100% against this project which has already begun implementation without approval. It is a travesty. A modernization or upgrade to taxpayer owned, public buildings must be by the people’s consent and with complete oversight of known, respected, historic preservation experts.
The “tarting up” of the Oval Office has proved to be extremely ugly, a joke in the world, and definitely UnAmerican. I shudder to think of this project handling in the same manner and ‘style.’
Give the People’s House back to the People, not to a wannabe king. We don’t need a ballroom larger than the actual White House. More space to dance while people are dying from lack of health care or access to food benefits, environmental pollution now untethered to any laws which will kill people, unlawfully jailing and murdering of Americans in the streets, is UNAMERICAN. Protecting pedophiles and their cronies is UNACCEPTABLE - and they and their billionaire friends will be the ones dancing, not ordinary Americans who actually PAY TAXES!

This project is UNACCEPTABLE.

The destruction of the East Wing was a travesty. The White House does not belong to any one President, but rather to the people. I want to see a complete review of this project, and have the current President restore it to its original condition. He should also be heavily personally penalized for this destruction.

NO BALLROOM IN THE EAST WING! This addition permanently changes the historic nature of the building.

My thoughts on the East Wing Ballroom project;
The size of the proposed ballroom destroys the architectural integrity of the White House.
Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible.
The White House is the people's house. It has survived for generations without an opulent addition like the proposed plan. If Washington DC needs a larger ballroom facility (though a number of hotels would suffice) it doesn't need to be attached to the people's house.

I'm asking that your organization immediately deny the ballroom from being constructed, and that the Whitehouse be restored to it's previous state. The president had no right to destroy the east wing of the people's house, and he should face consequences for it. Use the money he's supposedly collected from h oh his cronies, money from his own pocket, to rebuild it. As a 4th generation Washingtonian, great grand-daughter of US Senator Thomas Carter of Montana, and someone who has always been proud of our Nation’s capital, it’s baffling to me that any individual can think they have the authority to unilaterally make such sweeping changes to the structures that represent the United States. This is the People's House, not the home of a single individual. Destroying our heritage without regard to the law is unconscionable. The East Wing must be rebuilt, obviously, but let's do it with taste, input and guidance from those in the historical preservation realm. We don't need another example of the Gilded Age.

This ballroom addition is an abomination that is totally unnecessary. Even if it is used three times a year it cannot be financially justified. It is a vanity project for someone looking to put his name on things to cover up the fact that his actual deeds are lacking. It was started without proper planning and review to apparently make it harder to deny the project the legitimacy it lacks. The Government should be building desperately needed office space, not an empty ballroom that is designed to emulate Leonard's of Great Neck.

While expanded event space may be needed, additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure.

Find ways to down size this addition, or seek ways to put portions underground and not visible above ground.

To the Members of the National Capital Planning Commission:

I write to express my strong opposition to the proposed 90,000 square foot ballroom addition to the East Wing of the White House and to formally object to the reported unauthorized destruction of portions of the existing structure.

The White House is not simply an executive residence. It is a National Historic Landmark, a symbol of constitutional continuity, and one of the most architecturally and culturally significant buildings in the United States. Any proposal to substantially expand or alter it must meet an extraordinary threshold of necessity, proportionality, and legal compliance.

A 90,000 square foot addition to the East Wing represents an expansion of exceptional magnitude. Such a large-scale intervention risks permanently altering the historic massing, spatial relationships, and architectural integrity of the White House complex. Additions of this size threaten to overshadow the historic core structure and fundamentally change the character of a site that belongs to the American people.

Equally troubling are reports that elements of the existing structure have already been destroyed without proper authorization or full public review. If accurate, this represents a serious breach of established federal preservation processes and undermines public confidence in the stewardship of nationally significant historic resources. The National Historic Preservation Act and related review frameworks exist precisely to prevent incremental or unilateral alterations to irreplaceable public landmarks.

Before any consideration of expansion proceeds, I respectfully urge the Commission to:
• Conduct a full investigation into the reported unauthorized demolition or alteration.
• Require complete transparency and public disclosure of all actions taken to date.
• Ensure full compliance with the National Historic Preservation Act, Section 106 review requirements, and all applicable federal planning standards.
• Reject or substantially reconsider the proposed ballroom addition unless it can be clearly demonstrated that it preserves the historic character, scale, and integrity of the White House.

The White House is a shared national symbol that transcends any individual administration or temporary need. Once altered at this scale, its historic fabric cannot be restored. Expansion for programmatic convenience should not come at the expense of architectural integrity and lawful process.

I urge the Commission to act with caution, transparency, and fidelity to its preservation mandate.

The new East Wing of the White House should be built in scale with the West Wing in order to create a pleasing balanced appearance. The original building should be the focal point when observing the building. The wings are necessary for current staffing needs but should not be"outshine" the original building.
The interior needs to be designed to accommodate needed staffing as well as a visitors center. This is the People's House and we should have the ability to visit. The current president must agree with this sentiment since he has put labels on all parts of the White House. Why else would such labels be needed?
And above all—no gold.

I would suggest that the East Wing be rebuilt to function as a WH Visitors Center and Museum, perhaps as a part of the Smithsonian complex. This would give more meaning to the name “People’s’ House”. Trump should be fined enough to cover the entire cost of demolition and reconstruction.

I am submitting comments as an American citizen without any training in architecture or construction. I have been horrified by the rogue actions of the Executive Branch in the demolition of the East Wing, which appear to have ignored basic review procedures by the NCPC. Even more offensive to me as an American is the size and scale of the proposed ballroom as it relates to existing structures, all for the purpose of hosting exclusive dinner parties for the world's elite, allegedly funded by the world's elite. Given that the Executive Branch has also successfully demolished critical diplomatic relationships while pandering to wealthy corporate donors, I can only imagine who will be having dinner in this facility - the people who paid for a table.

It is unconscionable to plan for a 'party' space that dwarfs the White House in scale, and is in fact almost double the square footage of the White House. As an American, I would like to imagine that what goes on inside the White House is focused on improving the lives of Americans regarding security, safety, health, happiness, and general well-being. There is nothing about a 90,000 square-foot ballroom that suggests these are the priorities of the current Executive Branch. What it does suggest is that the current Executive Branch is more concerned with pandering to, if not competing with, royalty across the globe.

To me, the images of the proposed ballroom reflect a complete disconnection with the American people. We are a nation in crisis. We have armed, masked thugs engaging in an all-out assault on our civil and human rights. We are afraid to send our children to school for fear of being shot. We struggle to pay for basic healthcare, and are more likely to choose to pay for groceries over paying for overpriced health insurance. Our natural resources are being pillaged for the sake of big oil and big tech, while our monthly utility bills skyrocket. How exactly are we supposed to feel about the callous demolition of a part of our shared history so that a monolith can be constructed for rich people to party the night away?

This issue is bigger than architecture. It is bigger than urban planning. It is a direct affront to the American people.

I do recognize that, as a planning commission, you are bound by existing rules and regulations about what to do with a giant hole in the ground. Everything about this situation sucks, and I'm sorry for you all. I'm sorry for us as a nation.

We all deserve better.

Wishing you all good luck in your endeavors to clean up this mess. Please remain true to history, to procedure, and to the benefit of the American people.

What stands out in my mind is how this project over powers the historic White House original building. Being almost twice as large as the original building, the project totally out of scale with the White House.

Past additions and updates have bowed to the original building by staying discrete and in most cases built into the landscape rather than on top of it.

I question the need for garish gold design in the interior drawings. This type of design does not echo the quiet strength of the American people, rather it insinuates an imitation of royal opulence that again, is the antithesis of the image most Americans are most comfortable with.

Finally, I do see any need for an oversized gathering place for White House social occasions. Will the public be invited to any State Dinners or State Receptions? HA! I see more of a need for better scaled, moderate sized State functions.

While there have been many changes to the White House wings. These were necessitated by changes in how people lived and functioned. We no longer need ice houses and coal storage space. We no longer house slaves. However, over time the changes came slowly and with approval of congress. They were logical changes made legally that reflected the changes in American society.
I disapprove of the destruction of the East Wing. It was a brutal surprise to the people and it changed the image of a historical building. The wings had balance while the destruction of the East Wing and placing of it with an immense ballroom would not. It was purposely built to not look like a castle, mansion, or a grand manor because that's what Dictators have and we are not a Dictatorship yet, nor should our house represent that type of government. I am submitting these comments in the hope that the NCPC will take a harder look at this project. I watched the NCPC's January meeting with dismay as only one commissioner voiced serious concerns about the way this structure will overshadow the White House. In contrast to the public's overwhelming opposition to the destruction of the East Wing for a 90,000 square-foot ballroom, the commissioners as a whole remained passive in the light of information that the foundation footprint could not now be changed, that "maybe" the architect would consider lowering the ballroom height and now, I understand, the plan might include trying to raise the height of the west portico to match the ballroom height. I found it interesting that the First Lady's offices were going to be underneath the ballroom with the kitchen and housekeeping facilities and that maybe in the future her offices might be moved elsewhere. All this done for the sake of a gigantic ballroom.

It is apparent to me that the NCPC has lost the narrative of what the "People's House" should be. This country was founded by people who were more likely to tear down the ballroom at Versailles than to build one. We are a nation of farmers, soldiers, small business owners, teachers, doctors, civil servants. This oversized, Imperialistic structure says loudly to the American people that this house is not for you. I urge the NCPC to consider this project with more of the spirit of the American people in mind.

The destruction of the "peoples" White House in Washington, DC is an act of vandalism. The White House does not belong to the sitting president, it is only a temporary residence the president and congress are responsible for maintaining, as they are it's temporary guardian.

It is widely known and understood the current administration has no understanding of history. They refuse to show respect for those who have come before and those who will follow as residents of the White House. Not only is it a refusal, it is an utter lack of a moral compass that guides intelligent people to care for something on loan to them.

This must be stopped by any actions or means available. To succumb to the petty whims of a petty administration must be agressiively fought and prevailing to protect our heritage is a must.

The administration should be held accountable for the destruction it has already wrought before we even consider its proposal to construct another structure that no one voted for and that would add no value to the national park that is the White House. US presidents are tenants in the White House, not its proprietors. Donald Trump acted unlawfully when he destroyed the East Wing. There should be no further consideration of his ballroom construction project until his misappropriation of federal power and money is legally addressed.

President Trump has already degraded other parts of the White House (see Lincoln bathroom, which now looks like an upscale tourist hotel rather than the handsome and historically appropriate decor he destroyed.) He is not qualified to determine the architectural style of an addition to the White House. The National Trust for Historic Places should move to prevent his imposition of his garish and vulgar taste onto a national monument that we will all have to live with. He has no legal right to preempt proper oversight of his actions in these matters and should be stopped from this overreach.
Finally, this administration has arbitrarily cut funding for essential programs that support all manner of needs in this country. Any public funds spent on his ballroom would be more properly spent on citizens' practical needs. Congress makes appropriations. As for his argument that private wealthy people are funding the construction, that only invites improper influence by people with business interests such as government contracts and personal enrichment and advancement. I consider the Trump ballroom an illegal attempt by an already fatally compromised public servant to interfere with public property for his own egotistical obsessions. I strongly appeal to the NCPC to not only reject this illegal attempt to usurp authority, but to pursue legal action against the president. This is our country, not his personal fife. Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this matter.

I don’t think the east wing should have ever been touched in the first place. It’s history. And now it’s permanently gone. He should have to put it back exactly the way it was. He doesn’t get to redecorate the people’s house without our input. He should have to put the rose garden back too. Don’t let him defile the Kennedy Center like he’s planning to.

When the British burned down the White House on August 24, 1814, the President had fled for their safety - American soldiers were galvanized to shore up American defenses, and led a successful stand in Baltimore against the enemy. When the Russian asset Donald J. Trump directed the destruction of the East Wing of the White House, American citizens argued about it on CNN and Fox News. That should not be the end of this story.

The East Wing needs to be rebuilt as it was. The traitors to the American people who destroyed it should be arrested, tried and held to justice.

It's a tragedy that the East Wing of the White House, The PEOPLE'S HOUSE, was demolished without any consideration from the people. Allowing Trump to build a bunker disguised as a ballroom that will inevitably be funded by taxpayers dollars is a slap in the face to hard working Americans. His "fundraising" is nothing more than bribes from his oligarchy chronies. This cannot continue. This project cannot be allowed to move forward.

I am vehemently opposed to Trump's proposed ballroom as the East Wing Modernization Project. The East Wing and all the history it carried was torn down with no concern except for the aggrandizement of Donald Trump. The proposed ballroom is tasteless, tacky, and was never needed in the first place. It's cost, now estimated at $400 million, is a totally unneeded expense in the economic climate that is so hard for the taxpayers of this country. Although Trump claims it will be privately funded, I don't believe it for a minute, given his track record of grift and nonpayment.

I can support the modernization of adding event space to the existing structure. Now that the East Wing has already been demolished, in my opinion unlawfully, it makes sense that it should go there. The size and scope of the project should take in account the current structure and should not be the dominating feature. The current proposed size is excessive and is being built as a vanity project. It needs to be redesigned to align with the current buildings aesthetics.

As a citizen of the United States, I am a co-owner of the White House -The Peoples' House. As I was not personally apprised of the demolition and dismantling of the East Wing, I offer the following suggestions for the restoration:

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

The current resident of the White House, because they demolished a publicly owned property without prior authorization, should be held accountable for the cost of the restoration.

Thank you for this opportunity to comment.
I am a senior citizen and to my recollection this is the first time I have ever been invited to comment on any project.
As you said in your invitation The White House is "the American Peoples' House" It belongs to us.
How is it possible that one person can unilaterally order the paving over of the Rose Garden to create a patio, redecorate the Lincoln bathroom, and demolish the East Wing to create a ballroom without asking the People first?
In reality, how many American people will get the opportunity to enter a 90,000 square foot ballroom.
Now that the wrecking ball has done its damage, you ask my opinion.
My preference would be to simply patch up the hole with plywood and whatever money we would save by not building a $300 million dollar (That is the figure I heard but most likely that will go up.) ballroom, give it to the people. Help the American people with health care needs, education, and housing relief among other needs.
My second choice would be to create either a homeless shelter or an area with a snack bar where the public can gather for discourse, poetry readings, and musical programming among other things. This would be a welcome alternative to the doomed Trump Kennedy Center.

You know what happened to those who uttered the words, "let them eat cake."

With all due respect, the appropriate time for would have been BEFORE the unwarranted destruction of the East Wing. This administration has run roughshod over respect for law, tradition, and common decency. This is only one example of its contempt for the fundamental values of history in this country. As a US Citizen and someone who respects and loves this country and its history, it was shocking to me that the historic East Wing of the White House, full of history and memories, was ripped down without any input from the tax payers or historical preservation oversight. I understand the need for a large event space to hold state dinners, large meetings, and celebrations. But, there already exist beautiful spaces in and around DC where this is and can be done. If there is a thoughtful plan and legal process of assessing existing space on the White House grounds, and it is found that a tasteful, historically similar structure that does not dwarf but accentuate the beauty of the White House then I would fully support a ballroom being built onto the existing structure. It should, however, never outshine the original White House, which is a beacon of liberty, statesmanship, democracy, and freedom unto the world.

It was a total gut punch to see this destruction of the people's house. The citizens did not know. Who approved this destruction of a national historic landmark? I don't want to see a gilt edged tacky ballroom built which dwarfs the existing building. I want the East Wing restored to its former historical footprint. This abuse of our history should be stopped. There should NOT be any arches built. Our country is not an imperial state with a king. The historical footprint of the District of Columbia has long been a place where all the people could gather and celebrate our history, learn about our struggles to become better and share in the beauty of the area. If I want to see an arch or decadent ballroom, I'll go elsewhere. Put the people's money where it belongs, back into our welfare, not ballrooms for the Epstein class.

The East Wing was demolished without any of the proper considerations that even the most minor of public, historic buildings would have received. I have to wonder what architectural features that might have been saved were permanently destroyed. Unfortunately that is now a done deal; but it’s not too late to recover the structure to its original appearance. Modern infrastructure can certainly be included but it should be returned to its original appearance. A Trump makeover in its overpowering, drama laden grandeur is inappropriate and would stand as a testament to the years of trauma that the Trump administration is has subjected our country to. The White House is the People's House and does not belong to the current tenant who unlawfully destroyed the East Wing without our consent. The East Wing should be reconstructed as it was at Mr. Trump's (not taxpayers) expense. This is what a responsible parent would demand of a child who has defiled another's property. As to the argument that expanded event space may be needed, additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. and proceed only after securing approval from the American people and appropriate agencies. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed garish Mar-a-Lago style ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. I would have been opposed to the complete demolition of the east wing. All of the variations I have seen for new construction, including a ballroom, have been grossly out of scale with the existing white house. Both the placement and the scale of the new construction of the ballroom competes with the historic white house.In such a way that it would not be approved.If it were, for example, a local historic project under review. i recommend that the east wing offices and facilities be replaced in scale with the existing White House. And that should a new ballroom be desired by the american population that it be constructed elsewhere on the site.So as not to compete with the white house.

Respectfully, it's my opinion that the East Wing should be restored as closely as possible to its original design. Form and scale should be consistent with what had previously existed, as should the intent and overall presentation of "the people's house". Historical consistency with an absence of grandeur or ostentatious decor feels a proper representation of what the house was always meant to portray. Modesty and respectful treatment of something that belongs to every citizen of the United States are conditions that should never be violated. The White House was never intended to be a palace or tribute to any one of its temporary occupants, but rather a symbol of who we are as a people, and what we represent to the rest of the world. I respect that improvements and modernizations might be necessary over time, and understand that many changes have taken place, but all have occured within a framework that served to preserve rather than destroy, obliterate, or materially change the building, it's "feel", or what it represents. Plenty of other venues exist that would accommodate a need for more space or seats without desecrating a symbol known to every American. It's also my feeling that some major portion of the cost should be borne by the person who authorized the destruction that has already taken place without proper oversight or approvals. My many thanks for your consideration.

If a ballroom is required, which it isn't, it should be built elsewhere in the city.

The White House belongs to the people, not to its occupant. He is a guest, and guests do not alter their host's house.

This building is too large and ostentatious. While a ballroom is needed it should not look like the Parthenon with columns everywhere. It should fit the look of the White House which was built at the start of this country. The styles should match and not be so gaudy. Is it truly necessary to have a "ballroom" that is so much larger than the house itself? It doesn't blend in at all and is just "too" much!

Betty Ford once said that “ the east wing is the heart”of the White House. The current 90,000 square foot ballroom addition does not reflect the history of the building. The additions should never over shadow the main White House but like the cardiac system of a body support and sustain the rest of the building. I understand that there is a need for a bigger venue for functions but this should be more tastefully done and not overshadow the main building. I also think in this current time, the price tag is too high and the money should be spent supporting the American People. Please deny the current project as designed and ask for a scaled down version

Thank you for allowing the PEOPLE to have input on the PEOPLE'S HOUSE:
Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible.
Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.
Do not allow special interest funds to influence or pay for the rebuilding.
Construction should follow, and NOT extend, the original footprint of the East Wing.
It should also include returning the Rose Garden to its previous layout. The concrete patio needs to be removed as the proper process was not followed and the change was hideous.
Any additions done should reflect and complement the architectural design of the current White House.
The White House has evolved over time, but every addition becomes part of its legacy. It’s worth taking the time to get it right.
The White House is the people’s house.

t should never have been able to destroy the East Wing of the White House and should be penalized for it's destruction. Past presidents have gone through the proper procedures to make changes, to modernize. He is NOT above the law. The "ballroom" he proposes to build has not been vetted to see if any part of it meets current needs for the White House and will be a huge waste of taxpayer money to serve the purpose of boosting his ego. I do not want my taxes wasted in service of a corrupt person. Instead, he should be required to pay back the money spent on the illegal destruction and not allowed to have any input into what plans might be developed to use the space created by his destruction.

The proposed design for the new White House East Wing is too massive and dominates the residence which is the prime purpose of the People's House. The proposed design is not in syne with the rest of the property. Finally, the destruction of the former East Wing was done without input and consultation with the Planning Commission. There is also questions about where the funding is coming from and the lack of Congressional advice and consent. We don't need a Ballroom.

To the National Capital Planning Commission:

I am writing as a concerned American citizen to express my strong opposition to the proposed White House ballroom renovation. As someone who deeply values our nation's heritage, I urge you to pause this project until the American people have been given a meaningful opportunity to participate in decisions affecting this irreplaceable national treasure.

The White House—the Peoples' House—is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by all Americans and held in trust by the National Park Service. It has served as home to our presidents and stands as one of the most significant historic sites in our nation. Every room, every architectural detail tells the story of who we are as a people.

I am deeply concerned about several aspects of this proposed renovation:

First, the potential loss of historic character troubles me greatly. The White House embodies more than two centuries of American history, and any modification risks diminishing the authentic historic fabric that makes it so meaningful. Once original features are altered or removed, they can never be truly restored.

Second, I am troubled by the apparent lack of public input and transparency in this process. Before a site of such profound national significance is permanently altered, the American people deserve to know the full scope of proposed changes and to have our voices heard. The people have a right and a responsibility to help shape decisions regarding modifications to this structure.

Third, I have specific architectural concerns about introducing modern ballroom facilities into a building of such historic integrity. Contemporary modifications could clash with the character and craftsmanship of historic spaces.

I respectfully urge you to pause this renovation project until a thorough and transparent review process can be conducted. Our nation's most important house deserves nothing less than the most careful stewardship we can provide.

Thank you for considering my concerns and for your service to our nation.
Sincerely,
Domenica Genovese
Ocala, FL

I strongly object to the 90,000 square feet ballroom project. The East Wing must not exceed the size of the main building of the White House. I strongly oppose the 1970 country club aesthetic of this administration's East Wing design. I support hiring an architecture and design team with at minimum 20 years experience in historical design, research, and modernization. I do not trust this administration to manage the project; a non political committee should lead the project. Seriously, This Old House should lead the team.

As a DC resident in the past, I absolutely do not think this project should be allowed to occur and the East Wing should be rebuilt to the exact way it previously was.

The right process has not been followed, and no ballroom is needed to host events at the White House. We don't need a Maralago in DC, it's just not needed. No other President has wanted to do this, nor would they ever have dreamed of doing it, with or without permission.

Where are the plan, perspective and elevation drawings? All that is available on the White House website are interior designs.
There are shocking demolition photos available in the media, and hideous plans shared in the media, but the WHITE HOUSE SHARES NOTHING USEFUL.
From what is available to the public currently, my comment is that the planned expansion is GROTESQUE, because it dwarves the rest of the White House. It will be the tail wagging the dog, architecturally, and ugly to look at.
The point of the White House was NEVER TO MIRROR THE PALACES OF EUROPE. It is the house of the PEOPLE OF THE USA, and NOT the President, who only borrows it for 4 years. The closer the design looks like a palace, the further it gets from republican ideals.

This should be designed as a temporary structure utilizing the least expensive materials possible since the prior structure was removed without permission or oversight. The planned structure is obviously to be used to solicit campaign donations to the current tenant or to glorify him personally. It should be removed and the prior historic structure rebuilt along with the gardens. We the people do not need future reminders of the trump Epstein cruelties every time we look at what once used to be a classically designed structure. I suggest tarps and recycled lumber in a size compatible with what is left of the White House and this only allowed if there are no other modifications to the White House property.

When referencing the scale of the project, one should clarify that the 'footprint' of the original White House is approx. 14,200 sq. ft (168 feet x 85 feet). The planned dimensions of the addition is 90,000 sq. ft. which is more than 6 TIMES the size of the WH.

Before approving the final plans, those in the decision making process need to justify such a HJUGE addition that dwarfs the size. How often will the ballroom be used? Does it justify building such a large room? How about annual costs for upkeep etc.

What is wrong with the decision making process that the destruction of the East Wing was allowed without any input?

How will the public be assured that those contributing to the new ballroom will not receive any favors from this president or any other public figure / entity?

I am writing to oppose the currently proposed alteration to the White House, appropriately called the People's House. I believe the title "East Wing modernization" is inaccurate. Modernization implies upgrades to an existing structure. Tearing down the existing East Wing is destruction, not modernization. If in fact, ALL parties concerned, agree that additional function space is required, it must and should be seamless in style and form as The White House. The current administration that occupies the White House touts the 250th anniversary of the United States of America. We are babies compared to world cultures. And those cultures, throughout Europe and the Far East know how to retain significant public spaces in order to magnify their culture. The White House is exactly that in the United States. Again, thank you for your efforts to retain the character of this important cultural icon.

While I agree the White House can benefit from a larger meeting space, I think the addition is still looking out of proportion to the original structure. It should be shorter than the original main section, and the outside entrance appears too showy. The interior as pictured is more representative of a palace than of the people's house, and would be more pleasing to the eye than over embellishment if it were more traditional. It should represent our country, not castles of the old world. As Lincoln said, this is a government "Of the people, by the people, and for the people". Simplify! Firstly, I find it horrific that the East Wing was torn down without opportunity for public input. The building is in fact a living historical location since it is where the President of the United States (POTUS) resides and works, and is timeless as it spans multiple administrations. It is ultimately funded by taxpayer dollars and major changes should be considered by those who pay for them. Some of the interior changes are very distasteful. The signage added at the Walk of Fame is partisan and totally inappropriate. That is a wasteful use of the People's money to stroke the current occupant's ego.

I would like NCPC to consider the overall dimensions of the proposed ballroom in the East Wing modernization project at the White House. The main building should not be dwarfed by the proposed ballroom. The overall layout of the White House buildings should be considered in its entirety for symmetry and balance of the White House complex. I am not in favor of a ballroom footprint that would dwarf the serious nature of the main building and the Oval Office.

I reiterate displeasure that the East Wing was demolished without opportunity for public comment. Destroying the existing structure without input was inappropriate because now we do not have the opportunity to request the project remain in status quo. It is too late so now we have so request no action be allowed, or action be allowed with restrictions in sizing, design, etc, or allow what the current occupant desires. Therefore, I am stating my opinion no action should be allowed until there are better options proposed.

The demolition of the East Wing of the White House represents a profound loss to our national architectural heritage. This structure was not merely an appendage to the Executive Residence—it was an integral component of a carefully evolved historic campus, reflecting generations of civic stewardship, architectural continuity, and national identity. Removing it severed a tangible link to the story of American governance and erased a piece of the cultural fabric the Trust has long fought to protect.

Proposals to replace this historic wing with a large, obtrusive ballroom would compound the damage. Such a structure would disregard the White House's established architectural language, overwhelm the scale of the historic grounds, and undermine the integrity of one of the most symbolically important buildings in the nation. A project of this magnitude, especially one perceived by many as a personal vanity initiative of President Donald Trump, does not serve the architectural, historical, or civic interests of the American people.

The White House is a national landmark, not a private estate. Its preservation must reflect restraint, continuity, and respect for the generations who will inherit it. I urge the National Trust to take a clear stand: the protection of our shared heritage must outweigh any short\u8209 -term political or personal ambitions.

Direct quote from the NCPC website. BEFORE. BEFORE permanent alteration. The American People never got to give their opinions on the East Wing before it was demolished. It was done illegally. The White House belongs to the American People, NOT the president. The East Wing needs to be rebuilt as it was, where it was. It must be constructed to a high standard, with strong, high quality building materials and modern tech/improvements only where needed. The East wing represents a small part of receptions at the WH. Presidents should be able to make minor cosmetic changes, but not overhaul and decimate entire buildings.

Now that it has been destroyed, we need to put something back in place. It should fit in the size and sensibility of the WH and West wing. It could house some additional updates space for WH and 1st Lady offices.

Trump should lose his ability to participate in any meaningful changes to this plan. He should also be held financially responsible and have to pay back his demolition cost as well as a rebuilding cost.

We do NOT need ballrooms at the WH. It is a place of government. There are plenty of venues in DC that the WH could use if it really wanted to have a large gathering.

The project is vastly too large, at least 2x of the footprint it should be and dwarfs the White House. It is completely inappropriate for the site. It turns the White House complex into an event space / catering hall that will be used for overtly political purposes by current and future administrations. The architecture could have been done by AI; not interesting or original. The best thing I can say is that the circulation plan seems to work given the site constraints but would work much better and be more elegant and dignified if the "modernization plan" were half the size.

I am a developer and if this application came before any local P&Z Commission it would get denied unanimously. Not the best of the American ethos.

The damage already done is horrendous. At this time it would be preferable in my opinion to either leave it alone or rebuild the structure that was demolished in the same style and aesthetic as closely as possible. Any building should be done ONLY under close supervision by the proper authorities from architectural and engineering plans completed by firms completely independent of the current administration, and work done by firms contracted by an independent oversight firm to ensure no changes, additions or subtractions to the plans happen without approval from this body.

This project is an affront to the American people.Tearing down the East Wing of our White House was not something the citizens of the U.S. agreed with or wanted. Allowing a narcissist to destroy our capital, tearing down our history for one ridiculous structure after the next, is criminal.
Turning Jackie Kennedy's beautiful rose garden into a patio was horrendous enough. Acquiesing to the building of some monstrous ballroom that will dwarf the White House and display to the world the indifference and carelessness of this person for our country's treasured places, who puts his selfishness before all and simply wants his name plastered on everything possible, is beyond the pale.
Enough is enough.This person has not followed any of the rules in place to protect our historic places, or anything else for that matter.
The result should be that the White House, occupied by our presidents for over 200 years, be restored to its original form immediately. Not everything should be modernized. Some should be maintained and cherished. You wouldn't tear down and modernize Notre Dame, the Taj Mahal, Buckingham Palace. Why the hell would anyone want to destroy the White House?
This is what happens when you elect someone who thinks his trashy buildings hold some appeal for anyone but himself and then stand by and allow him to turn our White House into another campy Mar-A-Lago. No, thank you.

This is an abomination to the people' house. Do not approve this. Stop it. It's a vanity project and a grifting opportunity for the worst President in history. The proposed "ballroom" would dwarf the rest of the building. It is aesthetically awful. And I shudder to think of the Caligula like interior. The fake gold industry will prosper. Everything else will shudder at the utter lack of taste and obscene money spent to try to fill the whole in this tyrants soil. Don't be complicit. This proposed monstrous ballroom should NOT be approved. It should NOT be bigger than the Whitehouse, it should NOT be Trump's ballroom, and it is NOT necessary.

I deeply resent that the East Wing was demolished without this regime going through the proper avenues. This administration is running roughshod on this country and wasting the taxpayer's money that could be better spent elsewhere.

If it is deemed necessary, it should NOT be built with private donor funds that implies a quid pro quo, and it should NOT have donor names anywhere on it. Even if built by donor funds, who will furnish it, staff it, and maintain the upkeep? The taxpayer, I am sure.

If it is deemed necessary, it should NOT be built according to Trump's designs and wishes, it should be done by bid and awarded to the contractor that can make it the least intrusive and can build it according to the National Historic Preservations standards. It should complement the White House, not overshadow it.

I stand strongly against this ballroom that the people will never be in a position to enjoy. It will only be the oligarchs that would have the privilege of going there. It is a massive waste of money and resources that could be better used elsewhere.

The scale of the proposed ballroom dwarfs the existing structure. It would make what is arguably the most important building in the United States look trivial and ridiculous. Not a slab of concrete, a ballroom, a patio, or more green space. Nothing that accentuates one mans administration. Please. We have witnessed history with a select group of Monks walking for Peace to Washington. The message: be mindful, one step at a time. And in Washington DC, the People's House lay in rubble. The White House tumbled in destruction....for what? Pride? Power? Taunting? When I look at the photographs I feel betrayed. This is NOT A MONARCHY. Ballroom? Bunker? The fact that "bunker" is whispered is terrifying.
Look at America now. Monks walk for Peace, reminding us we can rise and be compassionate. As they walk, ICE runs rampant, swooping up children and citizens, creating chaos and terror. Citizens are dead at the hands of masked men with guns, pepper spray...citizens are suffering from a broken insurance system, and grossly inflated prices. The "government " tells us, "well get things changed." No change. Without insurance 1 DOSE of my medicine is over $2,000.
How? Read and listen to what the rest of the world says and think. "Let's give Trump a custom jet, then we can control him." " Maybe if we do business with his children no one can associate us with Trump senior." Oh, and let's not forget pardoning. People tried and convicted of crimes regarding Jan. 6. People lost their lives, people sustained life altering changes, "pardoned ". Trump called for violence to overthrow an election that had been acknowledged, monitored as fair and open. And now, like icing on the cake (you can have your cake and eat it too.) he builds his own Monument to his grandiose vision of himself. The destruction must be stopped, rebuilt. This is The United States of America. Stop him. Give the people of the US "their house".
Sending YOU courage and strength of conviction with morals that are just for everyone. Follow the Constitution and show us you know what it says.
Respectfully, Kathryn, NYS

The whole premise of the ballroom is not necessary. Who has ballroom dancing these days? If it is a space for large dinners, the intimacy and selectivity of such functions becomes lost if they are the scale of events that could be held at the Washington Hilton. They are not properly campaign events due to the Hatch Act. Entertaining of foreign dignitaries, is more special when it is at a smaller scale and highly selective in terms of attendees. We have been able to get along without a ballroom for 200 years, so why do we need one now? The building is primarily a residence with intimate entertaining spaces and some closely affiliated official functions. Turning it into a "party space" is an unnecessary expense. Funds, both government and private, should directly benefit the American People, especially those in need, and not the rich and powerful.

The White House should be the dominant architectural feature on the property and everything else subservient to that. The proposed ballroom is totally out of scale. Such modifications to the White House should be essential for the functioning of government and the requirement to change it should arise from the people, not from a limited term tenant!

Asking for public comment on an alteration after having already destroyed the structure in question is laughable. Here we are, however, so here is my input: the building should be restored as it was.
Barring that, any new construction should be done to the most stringent codes, and strictly adhere to the historical cultural Neo-classical aesthetic of the original White House. Avoid garish decorative additions that only appeal to the current, temporary resident. He's our guest.
The scope and scale of the project must be approved as law requires, and not exceed the needs and requirements projected for the project. NO HIDDEN ITEMS, and no scope creep.
Ensure full accessibility and ADA compliance, and include publicly accessible areas (because again it is the People's House).
This should all be done within a strictly overseen budget, using open bidding contracts. The money for the project must be put into an escrow account, to ensure contractors are paid. All contractors should be vetted and qualify for high security clearance, and be publicly posted. The site should be repeatedly swept for any unwarranted devices.
Again, this is an insulting exercise to ask for our input after the destruction is complete - nearly in the dead of night. We the people will not forget.

Please do not allow a 90,000 square foot ballroom to be built. It's my strong opinion whatever structure is built should be the same footprint as was the East Wing and fit in with the classic style of the White House. It's the "People's House"- not Donald Trump's Golden Palace" and this administration should have to follow the rules. It was a gut punch to see the East Wing bulldozed (without permission, etc). A rich people's ballroom that dwarfs the White House and Capitol is, to put it lightly, inappropriate--and another gut-punch to the American people.

I do not want taxpayer money going toward a ballroom. I do not want private money going to a ballroom (private donations in these days for such projects are at bottom bribes).

The East Wing has traditionally been the space for the first lady's projects and offices: so the bulldozing of the East Wing, well, another gut punch for women.

It's my understanding that the East Wing was also a favorite section during tours of the White House for regular people, i.e., not just for the rich; now that's gone.

What happened to all the paintings and historical furnishings, etc, that were in the East Wing? Where's the inventory? Where are they stored?

Bulldozing the East Wing was essentially bulldozing part of our history; it was a travesty. If anything, a exact replica of the East Wing should be built in its place--and funding for it taken out of the private coffers of the person who has been making himself and his cronies rich by abusing his office, our laws, government regulations, our history, and our democracy.

No ballroom please. Most of the American people hate this intended project. We did not vote for this.

In my opinion, the ballroom at the White House should never have been started without proper discussion, planning and pre-approval. This project is unnecessary and ridiculous in scale! But that time is passed and there is no choice but to move forward now to fix the destruction. So, a ballroom it is. But this must not be an obscene monstrosity permanently attached to the people's White House! I don't care who is paying for this, but especially if taxpayer money becomes involved in any way, scale and costs need to be controlled and limited! There is absolutely NO need for a 90,000 sq. ft. ballroom dwarfing the White House! This country has managed to make it 250 years without being able to throw "magnificent" and grand parties in a dedicated party palace. I'm sure we'll manage to go on a little longer without the world record holding, largest ballroom ever. The American people have much more mundane concerns in their lives than where the rich and powerful and influential get to party in Washington. Things like food, shelter and healthcare! There are very important things that should be on the agenda rather than this gross vanity project!!

But since there is no choice but to go forward and fix the damage now, and since a meeting space is a practical idea that should have been discussed prior to any work, then any commissions and groups involved in this project now MUST make sure that the scale and type of architecture compliment the White House. If the building can only entertain 250 people and not 1,000, so be it! The scale and look of the building is much more important than how many get invited. This building should serve a reasonable purpose and throwing tacky "look at me" parties isn't it!! Sincerely, Valerie Radatz, a concerned U.S. citizen

I taught U.S History and Government for over 30 years. I have visited Washington, D.C. and the People's House, our White House. It is a beautiful testament to our history. It is agonizing to see it without the East Wing, especially when you consider the history of that particular space of the White House. While I understand that perhaps there is a need for an addition of a larger meet/greet space, I do not agree that it should be almost twice the size of the White House. The White House stands as a beacon with the Capitol and the Washington Monument. That is the way it should stay. New plans should be created that are tasteful and maintain the history of the White House.

I appreciate being able to express my feelings as a citizen of our country. Thank you for the opportunity.

I'm writing to lodge grievance retrospectively at the appalling arrogance of summarily destroying a public historic building without clearance, consent or guidance. Through that East Wing entered thousands (millions?) of school children on tours of "the people's house," myself, my children and my grandchildren included.

Now, faced with the construction of a scarcely-needed accessory structure on this PUBLIC HISTORIC site, it is vital that form and function address an actual need, not merely one individual's whim and grandiosity. That said, the massive mausoleum currently proposed, utterly out of scale and design with the existing PUBLIC HISTORIC surroundings, will permanently stain the grace and simplicity of our public lands with an ugly, unneeded lasting testament to vanity.

Most people grant that exclusivity offers greater cachet and value than milling throngs at events hosted by our nation's leadership, and the District abounds with more capacious venues if and when needed. The sole purpose for a hall of this scope can only be to placate a pretender dreaming of Olimpiastadion cheers.

And honestly, must we gaze on a permanent monument to all of this, once that person is gone?

Besides being an architectural and historical monstrosity, the proposed ballroom would deny access to all Americans who are not wealthy or politically connected enough to be invited to events in this space. It would become the president's personal party room. The funding for the project is questionable as well, but wherever the money comes from, this is a colossal waste of resources.

Regarding the rebuilt East Wing:
1) Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring etc. and make interior ADA accessible where possible.
2) Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.
3) If a ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere on the property or in the city.
4) The White House is the people's house, do not allow special interest money to be used for the project.
5) ultimately, the East wing should match the historic proportions of that which was demolished, so it do not detract from the overall appearance of the White House.

To the Commission,

I do not support the planned East Wing Modernization Project.

there are several reasons, however first, the plans as shared through press conferences and news reports would over power the White House and would look awful. This was not planned with the existing structure in mind, and would dramatically change the footprint of the existing structure(s). Additionally, the way this project has been implemented so far is deeply problematic, and the people responsible for flagrantly breaking the law should not be rewarded for their actions. And finally, there are serious questions about how much money was raised, if it was bribery, and how much of our taxpayer dollars would be spent on another vanity project for this administration.

We don't need a massive ballroom. This is wasteful and has already led to unnecessary destruction of federal property. The president should be held responsible and should have to pay to rebuild the structures he demolished out of his own pocket.

Sincerely,
Jessica Murphy

Dear Madam/Sir,

It was with great sadness that I saw the demolition of the East Wing. While I understand the need for renovations, the White House is an historic building, and as such, needs to be dealt with using care and respect for the history and traditions of property. I grew up in the Washington D.C. metropolitan area, and visited the White House on several occasions (meeting President Ford and President Carter). It was an honor that I will never forget. The addition of an enormous ballroom would not only dominate such a beautiful, and once symmetric, building it would simply be an abomination. With the changing times, the need for a large ballroom has perhaps grown, and may be simply addressed by using innumerable facilities in the D.C. area.

With respect, I beg the Planning Commission to carefully consider what is most needed, as well as what would best suit the limited space upon which the White House sits. A large addition requires an immense amount of parking for guests, security issues, and most important for a building which is part of our nation's history, a destruction of the grace and proportions of the White House. The East Wing is unfortunately gone, but it is possible to build an addition which respects the original building and graces the land upon which it sits. The current proposal, which I have only seen general renditions of online, does neither. Please respect the "People's House"!

Thank you for your time and careful consideration,
Mary Steck

Our White House holds the history of our nation. This new "ballroom" dwarfs it and really only serves as a monument to one man. Bet his name will also be attached if it's ever completed. We are not about one man. We are about the People. To add insult to injury, the normal process of making such changes has been subverted. Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, make the building ADA accessible. I would like to see it done as a historically accurate restoration project. Interior design should reflect the historic tone of the White House and should be chosen by a design team appointed by the Historical Commission. Anyone attending an event can as easily travel to an off site event space as they can to a White House ballroom, therefore a ballroom or event space should be built elsewhere in the city or area. I am deeply saddened that the historic East Wing was demolished. I don't believe this would have been allowed had the proper review process been followed. Further, I would like to see all who were involved in sidestepping the Historical Commission held accountable and fined if at all possible. Further, The President is a temporary resident of The White House, not an owner. Every spring, I would take my children on the train to Washington, to revel in our nation's capital. The destruction of the East Wing weighs heavily on our minds. This was the heart of our people's house. The huge ballroom will only be used occasionally. Its size outweighs the White House, boisterous, ostentatious, out of character.

What would the founding fathers think?

Proceeding without clear public engagement and transparent funding disclosures raises serious concerns about accountability.

Before any further demolition or construction occurs, there should be independent oversight, published financial documentation, and a preservation review. If those standards cannot be met, the project should not continue.

As an American who is passionate about our history, I would like to see the building restored to it's original condition. If that is 'off the table' then I believe the new structure should not be larger than the main structure, as this would be asthetically horrible and undermine the importance of the main structure. Further, it should be understated and elegant, without gold leaf and no single President's name should adorn the facade.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

While it is too late to prevent the utterly devastating destruction of the historic east wing, it is imperative that what is rebuilt is done thoughtfully and in keeping with the current architecture. A large ballroom is not what the White House or this country needs at this time. The footprint of the replacement structure should not be larger than what was removed. Restoring the rose garden and outdoor space is as important as the new structure. The symbolism of beauty as well as the harmony of public and private space at the White House (the people's house) feels important at this time.

White House is sacred to my family and the American public. We were devastated when we saw on the news not only the East Wing being torn down but also the portico. All that history! President Trump mentioned building a ballroom on White House grounds and NOT touching the existing structures? What happened to that plan? The new plan for the ballroom is excessive, totally overshadows the White House and should be scaled back to a foot print smaller than the White House. You don't need 38 to 40 foot ceilings and at 90,000 you can probably seat 2000 people which is totally unnecessary. Please, go back redesign smaller and more representative of the original design. Also, a two story West Wing portico? When does this stop? Also funding, we don't want a White House that has political advertisements of who gave what. If new infrastructure is needed go to Congress and get it approved. Thank you for your consideration.

For your consideration on the matter of The Modernization of The East Wing:

As a citizen of these United States of America, I am outraged that this project has been implemented without the proper protocols put into place for pre approval. The White House, along with The East and West Wings are among the most classic examples of historic edifices on The National Register of Historic Places. They have always been national treasures, irreplaceable parts of our Nation's history. To see The East Wing destroyed in the careless matter that it was, was a shock and awe moment for many of us Americans! The planned ballroom never received the proper pre approval of the planned architecture and the scale in size in reference to the dimensions of The White House (The People's House, as it has been referred to). As a citizen, as a tax payer of this Country, I feel this project should be immediately halted and not allowed to proceed. I will even go as far to say that The East Wing should be reconstructed, piece by piece, as if it were decimated by a fire or other catastrophe. Its removal was unlawful! Unauthorized measures were taken by the main occupier who took liberties to portray himself as the owner of the property, rather than a temporary tenant! The history and integrity of this infamous structure should have been held in high regard of it's invaluable historical significance. The proper channels should have been taken to obtain step by step authorization, including the very approval by The National Registry of Historic Places. It is not too late to halt what could be a horrific infringement on our very rights as Americans to uphold institutions and properties that belong to all of us, in our hearts and in what we hold very dear.
Thank you for your consideration of this matter.
Respectfully yours,
Sharon Gamelli

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony on an issue that is not only about architecture, but about history, stewardship, and the fundamental character of one of the most important civic buildings in the world.

The demolition of the East Wing of the White House—undertaken without meaningful review, public comment, or engagement with the appropriate planning and preservation bodies—is nothing short of an irreversible loss. It represents the erasure of decades of institutional memory, historic continuity, and the lived experience of the First Families and the American public.

The East Wing was never simply an annex. It was a place of purpose. It was where the Office of the First Lady was located—a space where generations of First Ladies carried forward initiatives that shaped national conversations and improved lives. From Lady Bird Johnson's environmental leadership to Rosalynn

Carter's mental health advocacy, from Nancy Reagan's preservation efforts to Michelle Obama's work on military families and childhood health, the East Wing was where those efforts were conceived, staffed, and executed.

It was also where history met humanity.

It was home to the White House Family Theater, a quiet and deeply personal space where First Families gathered not as symbols, but as families. It was where children watched films, where moments of normalcy existed within an extraordinary life. These are the kinds of spaces that rarely make headlines, but they are essential to understanding the White House not as an abstraction, but as a lived place.

Equally important, the East Wing was where we welcomed the American people.

Hundreds of thousands of visitors each year entered the White House through the East Wing. Schoolchildren, veterans, families, and citizens from across the country and around the world passed through its doors. It was the threshold between the public and their government. It was where the abstract idea of democracy became tangible. It was where the People's House became real.

That phrase—"the People's House"—is not accidental. It reflects the explicit intent of George Washington himself, who insisted that the presidential residence not be a palace. He rejected designs that were overly grand or monarchical in scale. He understood that the legitimacy of the presidency depended, in part, on restraint—on the symbolism of accessibility, humility, and civic purpose.

To replace the East Wing with a grand ballroom of a scale that dwarfs surrounding buildings is not simply an architectural change. It is a philosophical departure from that founding intent.

The White House was never meant to compete with Versailles. It was meant to stand apart from it.

This is not an argument against change. The White House has evolved over time, as it must. But that evolution has historically occurred within a framework of stewardship, review, and respect—for history, for precedent, and for the public. Decisions affecting the White House complex have always recognized that it belongs not to any single administration, but to the American people and to history itself.

That is why process matters.

The absence of transparent review, the lack of public engagement, and the apparent bypassing of preservation and planning norms are deeply troubling. The National Capital Planning Commission exists precisely to ensure that changes to the monumental core of our nation are undertaken thoughtfully, transparently, and with due regard for their lasting impact.

Once demolished, the East Wing cannot be restored. Its walls carried stories. Its rooms witnessed moments of national and personal significance. Its spaces reflected the human dimension of the presidency and the civic dimension of democracy.

We have not simply lost a structure. We have lost a place where history happened quietly, every day.

Future generations will judge not only what we build, but what we choose to erase.

I urge the Commission to fully examine the process by which this demolition occurred, to reaffirm the principles of transparency and preservation that have long governed the stewardship of the White House, and to ensure that any future changes honor both the historical integrity of the complex and the founding principle that the White House is, and must remain, the People's House.

Respectfully submitted,
Andrea Mokros

The East Wing of the White House was demolished without permission or a plan. That house belongs to the people and the current occupant has no right to alter it without permission, yet this has already taken place. The current President's vision is not practical nor a proper use of public nor private funds. Private donations for a project like this are not appropriate and appear to be bribes as nearly all of the donors have government contracts or business interests with the government. There is no financial oversight. The White House is a residence and a work space. The need for a ballroom of this scale is wildly unnecessary and does not take into account the historical nature of the building nor the aesthetics of the surrounding properties. The government should stop construction immediately and create a more reasonable space for entertaining in line with a democracy, not monarchy.

I urge the Commission, in the strongest possible terms, to condemn this president's gross misconduct in destroying the East Wing. The White House belongs to each of us, the American people, not to any single person, and surely not to this president.

He acted without respect to history, established process and oversight, and requirements. We woke up one morning to bulldozers raking down the East Wing.

In destroying the East Wing, this president caused severe damage, literally and figuratively, to our Nation's Capitol and to its people.

Precedent will be set in how the Commission rules on and responds to this egregious act and display of one person's ego.

I strongly urge the Commission to use its full authority and scope, to publicly denounce this president's desecration of our beautiful White House, and to act in every possible way to demand and ensure it is restored to its original state, including demanding that this president fully pay for all restoration.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment and for your serious consideration.

This project is grossly overdone and not in line with architectural standards for the White House. It also raises questions as to the sources of funding to be used to finance the project. It is stated that it will be funded through private donations however these "private" donations will come with the expectation of special treatment for the donor.

I oppose this project as it has nothing to do with modernization, but instead building a grandiose ill fitting ballroom who's only purpose is to try to fill the empty void inside of Donald Trump where a soul is supposed to be.

America does not need fancy ballrooms to "enhance" the White House, the White House is an historic building where the President is supposed to reside to serve the American people .. not a place for a grifter who thinks he can impress with tacky gold gilding so he can take bribes for pardons, decrees, and other paybacks.

Allowing this to go forward would reward this administration for already breaking the law wherein they destroyed the east wing without prior approval. And now they want to say "oops my bad"?

The proposed scale of the ballroom would make it a monstrosity .. widely out of scale with the rest of the White House and other national monuments in the DC area. The simpleton in the White House somehow thinks bigger is better which is not always the case.

The White House is the people's house .. it belongs to the America people .. not to the temporary resident who is crass and tacky. The East Wing should be restored to it's original size before Trump destroyed it without permission.

It is my understanding that the due diligence and design phase of a "modernization" project to one's property should occur BEFORE demolition for said project. This pitiful effort to collect input from the American people about what they desire from a project that they never asked for, wanted to pay for, or frankly never even dreamed of. This vanity project of a gilded Despot will be remembered as a monument of the obscene.

That being said, and outside of demanding that the East Wing of my house be returned to its prior glory of warmth and history, I have demands. I demand that the architecture and artistic integrity of the White House remain steadfast to the traditions of the property. This is to say that we maintain the austerity and humbleness of Americanism (re: no gold plating or otherwise oligarchal embellishments). I demand that the builders and employees of this project be paid handsomely and with great respect, unlike the enslaved men and women who built and rebuilt the house after the fire of 1814. I demand a restoration of the Rose Garden, the destruction of which is a desecration of inexcusable proportions. I demand ADA-compliant access including gender neutral and family bathrooms. I demand that the walls be full of art and the halls echo with the music of our people. At all times. I demand that the facility be fitted with a large-scale commercial kitchen that is capable of feeding thousands of hungry people who gather outside its doors because the we're forced to pay for this god forsaken project instead of food for their family.

This is a disgrace. This is Nero playing the violin while the capital burns. This was not your decision to make at a property that was never yours. I humbly pray for your forgiveness as you gather data to justify building an empire of dirt.

The size, scale, and proportion of the new ballroom overshadow the historic White House. While I can respect the desire for a permanent space to host very large gatherings at the White House without using a temporary tent, this design must be scaled back significantly if it is to be built adjacent to the White House so as not to overshadow - almost literally - the executive mansion.

The East Wing was torn down illegally which is really the first order of business.
The United States does not need a huge, intrusive, out-of-scale ballroom to entertain rich and powerful people when Americans don't have healthcare and supportive government programs to help with enough childcare, food assistance, and FEMA assistance among others.This is simply a vanity project with no consideration of the architectural surrounds or the will of the people of the United States. The White House's East Wing is an integral part of our nation's history and its demolition is an attack on the generational growth represented in its quarters. What was demolished was over a course of several days dismisses the invaluable service of First Ladies like Eleanor Roosevelt as she worked tirelessly to advocate for the WASP and Tuskegee Airmen during a time of national and global need. Now this president seeks to erase this history in favor of a poorly fashioned ballroom intended to dwarf the Peoples' House. I cannot be allowed.

As the White House belongs to the people of the United States, I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the East Wing Modernization Project, although it feels a little late in the process. I think the East Wing should be returned to a footprint similar to what was there before it was bulldozed - balanced and mirroring the West Wing in size and architectural design. I am assuming upgrades in electricals, mechanicals, ballroom kitchen area, security, etc. would be welcomed. However, the design should be in the Neoclassical style it had been, to include the East Colonnade, gardens, circular driveway, portico, ballroom, etc. If the ballroom needs to be enlarged for the comfort of guests, it should be done in a modest way, with nothing overly grandiose and showy (no over-the-top gold leafed ornamental features) which do not reflect American values or ideals. I think Americans were proud of and supportive of the level of grandiosity of the former design and do not want something in the style of the Baroque Palace of Versailles. It is not the time or the place for such ostentatiousness.

Personally, I think the destruction of the East Wing to create a ballroom as an ediface to this "Epstein" Administration is most simply a vanity project. But if it must be constructed it should follow the architectural style and design of the remaining portion of the White House and should serve the functions of State rather than the ego of any specific person.

Taxpayers of all stripes have paid from their wages or savings over time to create an elegant symbol of the prestige of the Presidency and of the Executive Branch of government in this White House. It's regrettable, shamefule even, that our current president finds it "not good enough" for his purposes. Let this project, then, maintain the gravity originally imbued in the original building and forego any sense of filigreed ostentation as might befit a monarch. Rather, let is represent the earnestness of everyday Americans, whose House it truly is, not with airs of golden flourish designated by an open-for-business president, but with the dignity of the historically strong, enduring, freedom-loving people of the United States.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

First, I am appalled that any ONE individual regardless of title could direct destruction of any historical building without proceeding through proper channels and submitting paperwork, especially in our nation's capital! These events in the past always required much scrutiny and took a lengthy time. With this in mind penalties should be invoked anyone who was involved with the recent demolitions and pave overs. It was extremely distasteful to remove the gardens, pave them and then use that area as a car dealership space.

Next, the East Wing should be replaced with updated security and technology while maintaining the integrity of the building and historical details. It should definitely be ADA accessible for all. Some limitations should be established for decorations in hallways and offices. As stated previously, no changes should be made without a historical committee or perhaps civilian representatives from various areas of our country. The current administration has demonstrated an excessive desire to cover everything in gold. For many, myself included, this has gotten out of hand and has become distasteful. We removed ourselves from kings and are not interested in recreating the Palace of Versailles. A motto to follow would be "Everything in moderation."

With the upcoming anniversary of our nation near, please consider artwork and items of interest representative of all 50 states and our multiple territories. In this way the People's House would truly represent the People, provide a learning experience as well as being inviting to all who visit. These could be changed from time to time by location or updated by the states and territories.

As for the ballroom, while I accept a larger entertainment facility may be necessary I would recommend this structure not overshadow the historical buildings. Most of these were built before we had equipment that allow for our extremely large buildings. At one time buildings were limited in size, for example 6 stories, because we had no elevators. If this group decides the blueprints of the current ballroom are acceptable perhaps a different location should be found so the building stands alone instead of overshadowing our historical buildings.

Finally, NO building in DC should be named for a living individual and the name choice should be submitted to a supervisory group composed of a mixed group including some civilian representative of our nation selected at random.

Thank you for allowing the people to speak and considering our ideas.

We, the taxpayers, pay for the State dinners and do we really have so many of them and with so many invitees, to warrant this monster of a room? No need for a gilded mausoleum of a ballroom. Add more meeting room space, but also add additional offices. The building should NOT overshadow our House of the People, the White House proper. The United States does NOT need to prove itself via gaudy cheap gold trim and trinkets everywhere. Decor should be dignified and understated. This should be a building for serious offices, and working functional meeting space. The space should also double as an entertainment space in terms of dinners, etc. There should be a space for emergency personnel and any equipment they might need to treat emergencies on the spot until transport can be arranged, either for medical personnel coming in or taking patients out. In addition, there should be sufficient restrooms to accommodate the maximum number of people allowed.

Although much damage has already been done, please consider rebuilding the East Wing of Americas home as it was, it never should have been destroyed!
The White House is one of the most historically significant buildings in the United States, and the East Wing is part of that legacy.
The East Wing reflects architectural decisions and expansions made during key periods of U.S. history, especially the early 20th century.
Altering it risks erasing or diluting physical evidence of past administrations and eras.
Architectural Integrity
The White House complex was designed as a cohesive whole; changing the East Wing could disrupt the balance, symmetry, and intent of the overall design.
Even "minor" alterations can create inconsistencies with materials, scale, or style that are difficult—or impossible—to undo.
Cultural and Symbolic Value
The East Wing houses spaces closely associated with the First Lady and staff, giving it symbolic importance beyond its physical footprint.
It represents continuity, stability, and tradition in American governance—values that are undermined when iconic structures are frequently altered.
Legal and Preservation Standards
The White House is protected under federal historic preservation laws and guidelines, including oversight by preservation bodies.
Changes would require extensive review and could set precedents that weaken protections for other historic sites.
National Identity and Public Trust
The White House is not just a working building; it's a national symbol that belongs, culturally, to all Americans.
Significant changes may be perceived as prioritizing temporary needs or preferences over long-term stewardship.
Slippery Slope Concerns
Approving changes to the East Wing could open the door to future alterations driven by political trends rather than preservation principles.
Once altered, original features cannot truly be restored—only replicated.
Functional Sufficiency
The East Wing already fulfills its intended roles (offices, entrances, ceremonial functions) without structural changes.

Modern needs can typically be met through internal, reversible updates rather than architectural modification.
International Precedent
Many nations preserve their executive residences with minimal external change to reinforce legitimacy and continuity.
Maintaining the East Wing as-is aligns the U.S. with global norms for preserving seats of government.

The construction of this disproportionately sized ballroom is an absurd request from this reckless president. Demolishing the East Wing with zero oversight should have come with consequences, but here we are.

As sixty percent of the country lives paycheck to paycheck, it is a slap in the face to any American paying attention that something this opulent and excessive would be constructed at The People's House. This important place of American history does not belong to the current president. He is a temporary resident.

I understand that this being paid for by private, corporate donations rather than taxpayer's money. Given this administration's proven track record of using American assets to benefit the president, I find this entirely unacceptable as well.

What deals were made that benefit him, personally, rather than the Country as a whole? Does anyone know? Or will the trend be allowed to continue for him to be in violation of the emoluments clause?

I strongly disagree with the scope of this project and the "Let them eat cake" message it sends to American citizens, struggling to exist in this increasingly poor economy. At THE LEAST, this president should be held accountable to the existing procedural oversight that Congress has to oversee White House construction.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

The majority of the square footage should go back to restoring the East Wing. And then if a ballroom is needed can be added with some of the remaining square footage, as long as it is in line with the size and scale o the rest of the building. It should be constructed with similar materials and design elements to look like one seamless structure. It shouldn't have his name on it due to the overall destruction he cause and for violating the process.

This is an unnecessary project that takes away from the historical significance of the original design of the east wing as a working area for the First Lady and installs a monument for the ego of a convicted felon and rapist. The project does nothing for the American people and stands to dwarf the orginal historical nature of the White House and surrounding area. This project will become a gilded eye sore of tacky gold spray paint giving a cheap casino look to a once historic living museum.

The White House and East Wing must me restored to it's original state and this ego driven narcissistic project needs to stop. The project has ballooned to be a monument to a authoritarian tyrant who gives no regard to the American public and would rather send money on unnecessary self serving vanity projects than doing any real infrastructure projects for the rest of the American people.

The East Wing must be replaced and should not be larger than the White House or the West Wing. It's exterior architecture needs to be the same as the White House style and the White House should be balanced in the center of the grounds. It seems ridiculous to me to have a ballroom for 1,000 people. The logistics of serving that many by White House staff would be a nightmare, as would checking that many people through security..
The plans shared by the president show no thought or care for the American People. The house and grounds belong to all of us and not this president and his wealthy friends. If he wants that big a ballroom he should build it on his own property.
I also demand the Rose Garden be replaced. It, too, belonged to the people.

While I think the White House should be beautiful and large enough to be both home and office to the President, I also feel it should be representative of the country. Most of us have very little interest in a ballroom, much less one built for the satisfaction of one man's ego. If we must fill every inch of the space, let it be with something useful, something to benefit more than the socially and financially elite.

Thank you.

To those involved with the East Wing Modernization Project,

• The destruction of the East Wing should never have taken place without consultation of the American citizens.

• Clearly it is a “vanity project” by the Trump administration.

• I am not an architect but I do know what is appropriate for the White House which stands as a monument to the United States and the World.

• The destruction of the East wing was and is obscene.

•. Whatever is installed should be architecturally in keeping with the original building.

I feel the demolition of the East Wing is an outward symbol of the destruction of the American Democracy.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

Rebuild the former East Wing in the same style and scale as it was, but install functional updates that bring it up to code/modern standards that may not have been possible in the former structure. Make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.

Remove the gaudy, cheap looking gold leafing throughout the White House. It is undignified and classless.

Thank you for taking comments on this project!

The destruction of the East Wing was obscene. Don't make it worse with the addition currently under consideration. It is too large, too ugly. It dwarfs the White House-- the People's House, not Trump's House. The proposed ballroom is a monument to a temporary resident's ego, designed to dominate the main building. Please, listen to the people. Do not approve the current plans! Ideally, I'd want the East Wing back. If we can't have that, demand a more modest, proportional plan the respects the main building.

Regarding the East Wing modernization project:
-Standard processes and approvals through governmental organizations should be followed
-Do not allow for investment and payments through private organizations and businesses who can draw future benefits or influence through said donations
-Restore and preserve sight lines to all sides of the White House as outlined
-Allow for public hearings in regard to final plans and elevations
-Secure ADA access
This ballroom extension is absolutely unnecessary and does not benefit the general American public.

The scale of this project is incompatible with the existing White House. The design does not in any way attempt to fit in with existing architecture of our historically significant White House. If more space is needed it must be done in accordance with policies and reviews that were built in to regulations that have been ignored in the illegal destruction of the East Wing and the design proposed with no review or sensitivity to how a ballroom could be designed so as not to overwhelm existing structures .
This project must be stopped immediately and any proposed new construction done with full input and review from appropriate boards, commissions and public comment as outlined in existing regulations.

While we may need a new space for entertaining it needs to enhance the current architecture of the White House and not overshadow. It should reflect America thru the decades, its people, not just one era or color scheme no copying styles or sizes of buildings from around the world. Bids and drawing should be submitted for the people of the United States to see and possibly vote on by the people to reflect US then a committee to review the top 5 choices. Choice of firm to build and architects to draw should bids from companies all over the, not friends of current administration and yes, they will have to be vetted.

This building and new offices for the First Lady will need to be built to last the next 50 years, so we need to think about what the possibilities will need to build in for the future ie wiring, WIFI, lighting, security, ease of internal moderation without tearing the entire structure down. Need to also look at energy efficiency, use of well-made materials to last.

The White House, formally known as The Peoples' House, is just that-the Peoples' House. It does not belong to any president. He has the privilege of living in it during his tenure. At no time should a section of the historic House be torn down to create an eyesore without the approval of the People and the NCPC. To build a "Ballroom" that wouldn't be available to the People is a no go for my family and me.

We do not need to build and maintain an extravagant space for very occasional use, surely there are existing nearby facilities that can accommodate large events. Additionally, the proposed size overwhelms and detracts from the look of our beautiful existing white house. The president received no permits or approval for the destruction of public property (owned by the tax payers, not by him), and every legal avenue should be perused to ensure that this restoration is paid for by those who thought it would be a good idea to tear it down. The taxpayers should not bear this burden. Also, the companies who partook in the demolition of the East Wing shall be investigated and fined accordingly. The East Wing is a part of American Heritage, not a part of a building owned by any one person or President. The East Wing is a part of American Heritage, not a part of a building owned by any one person or President. The bulldozers destroying the East Wing was a symbol of the American democracy itself being attacked. Dictators take monuments of the past and replace them with statues and monuments of their own image. The proposed ballroom will be gaudy, tacky, and reminicient of the gold lame discos that is seems to be the taste of our president. As an historian I value our national landmarks. The destruction of the East Wing cannot be undone. I ask that whatever is constructed in its place should be subordinate and in the spirit of the main structure. In a world where the federal government claims to not have the funds to care for the health and welfare of its citizens, they should not be using their funds to build an ostentatious ballroom. Make this new space a place for learning or the arts.

This project has not gone through proper process and should be paused until a fully detailed plan can be developed. The East Wing is part of our-the people's- history. Alternative plans should be reviewed and most importantly, historic preservation professionals should be leading the project at all stages.

Ballrooms existed in the 18th century. There is a reason one was not built at the White House, which is that the founders were repulsed by the extravagance of Versailles and the European monarchy. Building something like this now, in our 250th year, is an affront to their vision.

Full disclosure- I used AI to organize my thoughts.
I object to the current East Wing modernization project for several reasons.

First, it appears that the demolition of the East Wing proceeded without review or approval from the appropriate federal preservation and planning authorities. Major alterations to historic federal buildings — particularly one as significant as the White House — should undergo formal review to ensure compliance with established preservation standards. The absence of transparent approval raises serious concerns.

Second, I am deeply concerned about architectural compatibility. From the renderings that have been released, the proposed addition appears to overwhelm and visually dwarf the historic main residence. The White House is not simply a functioning building — it is a national symbol whose proportions and classical design have been carefully preserved for generations. Any addition should be subordinate in scale and consistent in style.

Third, the proposed interior design, based on released images, appears overly ornate and inconsistent with the restrained elegance historically associated with the White House. The concept resembles an exaggerated Gilded Age ballroom rather than a space reflective of the building's established character.

I also question the necessity of constructing a new ballroom at all. Historically, presidents have successfully hosted large formal events within the existing White House footprint. For example, during President Reagan's administration, state dinners and formal receptions — including those honoring Prince Charles and Princess Diana — were held without the need for a separate grand ballroom.

Finally, I am concerned about the motivation and legacy implications of this project. This was not a publicly discussed need, nor one broadly requested by the American people. Given the scale and permanence of the addition, it is reasonable to ask whether it serves an institutional purpose — or a personal one. Once constructed, will this space be branded in a way that associates it with a single individual rather than with the presidency itself?

For a building that belongs to the American people and represents continuity across administrations, any significant structural change warrants transparency, restraint, and broad public confidence.

I am strongly opposed to this unlawful desecration of one of our national historical landmarks. No President should have the right, with or without public funding, to alter, remove or demolish a landmark as sacred as our White House without legislative approval. Recent loss of the Rose Garden was outrageous and bad enough, but now loss of the whole, historical East wing is nothing short of unauthorized desecration. Unfortunately, the damage has already been done and it is not clear what remedy is available to properly amend and restore things.

What has happened to the White House is a tragedy. As a DC resident I have been appalled at the utter lack of respect for a historic landmark. The White House isn't owned by the President; instead it is their responsibility to be the caretaker of this public monument. The proposed work does not enhance the White House, and it does not serve the people of this country. The East Wing should be replaced to be as it was, with little change to the previous floor plan. The White House addition is a travesty. The proposed “ballroom,” with its ever-inflating price tag, will destroy the symmetry and aesthetic of the White House. There is no need for a “ballroom” that nearly doubles the size of the current White House. Rebuild (at the expense of the person who knocked it down without authorization) and modernize the interior of the East Wing, and if a “ballroom” is needed to entertain foreign dignitaries, build it at a moderate size where it cannot be seen from the front of the building.

We do not need anything like that. In our country and no one president should be allowed to make this decision alone and dictate his gawdy sense of taste on the project. It is not in the best interest of the American people who will never get to even use it and it completely ruins the classic sense of the White House and the history that that building holds for all of us American people to have a 90000 square foot gilded ballroom that dwarfs the White House! First Ladies need on-site office suites in the East Wing, and all Americans need access to tour the White House. The President would like to have indoor party space which he already has in the East Room. There is a long history of tents on the south lawn for larger parties. A 90000 sf, multi story building attached to the East side of the original residence would look entirely out of place, destroying the entire symmetry of the structures and requiring rebalancing at the west end with even more expense and a terrible result. The entire thing must be rethought from start to finish with only 2 considerations: restore the East Wing and create a larger event space building well south of the Residence with surface access for the public.

As a citizen of these United States for 76 years, I wish to urge the NCPC to consider modernization of the People's House. The East Wing of the White House must serve to welcome all citizens to this historic residence and seat of the Administrative Branch of our government. As such, its humble beginnings must be honored. It has served to welcome humble citizens since its beginnings, and there are other well-appointed rooms in the White House designed to welcome foreign dignitaries and delegations as well as elected representatives and invited guests as well.

The proposed 'ballroom' eclipses the existing White House in volume and detracts from the historic purpose for which the Residence has served. While appropriate celebrations are certainly appropriate to the purpose and design of the White House, extravagance must never overshadow the dignity or scope of the serious nature of the business to be conducted there. It is not meant to be some sort of 'resort' for entertaining the elite, nor a frivolous party venue.

Rather, the serious and business of this Nation's history and governance must remain the foremost consideration of any and all renovations. As such, the proposed 'Modernization Project" (AKA preposterously mischaracterized as a 'Ballroom') is completely our to character and denies the very dignity, reverence, and simple elegance of the historic structure and must be denied. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

I oppose the proposed giant ballroom. It doesn't appear to be the proper scale or style of the current White House. I am horrified that the East Wing was demolished at the whim of the current president without any input from congress or any historic committees. I also question where the funding is being sourced and how it will be accounted for.

I grew up in an historic home on Nantucket and I am very familiar with both the necessity for preservation and requirements for updated systems. First, the renovation of the White House East Wing should only be done in the original footprint of the building unless improved security and/or systems are mandated. All height must be preserved and exterior structure be appropriate to the restoration. While I would like the interior to be preserved as well, I do understand the necessity to look to the future for specific needs. These changes should be based upon needs of the people for transparency and inclusion. I would suggest multiple exhibits done on a rotating basis for public's education. Thank you for the opportunity to speak to this issue and see that the American people have an input into the design and build of this historic building addition. This is SO important.

I fully support a building that maintains the integrity of the historical residential structure. The White House has always been a symbol of American democracy throughout the world. Building an East Wing that overpowers the residence destroys that image and is so very unnecessary. Do not waste public money in any way to build something that should never have been taken down without saving historical integrity. This is the people's house and should be designed modestly to reflect not only its actual "need" but to be a visual "accent" to the other buildings. Thank you

A little late to the party aren't you? You should veto the ballroom or reduce its size and tie in the architecture to the house. The main house is the focus, not the wings. Where are these guests going to have their transportation parked? Not all will arrive in a limo. Trump has no vision, except that bigger and gaudier, the better it will.be. He has trampled on historic property.

His arch of whatever is much too large and his name is to be removed from John F Kennedy's Memorial.

"Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to help shape the decision."

Key word: BEFORE. Nothing about this is BEFORE.

The White House was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics with symmetrical proportions. The destruction of the East Wing destroyed that symmetry. The proposed ballroom is 90,000 sqft; it would be a gaudy architectural behemoth hulking over the White House and is the very epitome of bad taste.

Because Trump Administration razed the East Wing without going through the proper avenues to get approval from the NCPC, the Commission of Fine Arts, and congress, the only just solution is that the new ballroom be denied and the East Wing fully restored. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure.

It was shameful for the East Wing to be destroyed without any public comment, and the proposed replacement is an abomination. No structure should be bigger than the White House - the Peoples' House - and the reality is that while modernization may have been needed the proposed $400million replacement is too huge . We really don[t need such a large building to hold thousands at a state dinner. Any replacement building should be no larger than the White House, should contain limited in any gold paint or gilding (we are not a monarchy) and should not be named after anyone.

I am writing the commision to express commentary on the East Wing modernization project. The White House is a well recognized international al symbol of the US. It's history and architecture deserves respect and preservation. I realize that updating historic structures is indeed necessary. However, that update should be kept within the scale and artistry of the original design. A 90,000 square foot ballroom would overwhelm this beautiful icon. It should be built elsewhere. Also, our founders rejected a king, therefore I feel that gold and distasteful overembellishment is inconsistent with our revolutionary history

So what can be said about the East Wing Demolition and the illegal plans to build another garish, golden calf in the place where history was destroyed? First, We the People can state that there is an established process for such projects that was NOT followed and the perpetrators should be fined or charged as appropriate. Second, We the People have a special place in our souls for "The Peoples House" and want it treated with the respect and dignity that it is deserving of. That was not done in this project, there was no thought given to what the People would want done! There is validity to America's need for an appropriate venue in which to house state dinners and entertain foreign dignitaries but this project did not follow the procedures clearly defined by this Committee. The historic East Wing has already been torn down. It cannot be restored to its original history, so we are left to determine what We the People would have done with the gaping wound upon OUR House that now exists. My fervent hope is that this Committee will find a way to thread this needle appropriately. To find a way to restore space for which the East Wing was originally intended and suit to purpose and to provide a new ballroom for the FUTURE, not some ugly, garish golden calf that the current administration thinks of as displaying opulence and granting some air of royalty, because in America we DO NOT HAVE ROYALTY. We the People do NOT bow to a King! Therefore, this is not a palace! We the People do NOT have a Queen and the People's House belongs to us. So I implore those with saner minds to force this building project to be in keeping with the heart and soul of America. No Gold, except to display our Amber waves of grain. No royal purple, except that which shows our purple mountains majesty. Create a place for real patriots dreams, that see beyond these troublesome years we find ourselves in. Create a space that projects Americans in all of our diversity and glory. A space that does not honor one man, but instead honors ALL the men and women who have died defending our nation. Make this a space ALL AMERICANS can be proud of, please. Thank you!

As a former resident in the DMV, I have many memories of visits to the White House starting when I was in high school. It broke my heart to see the East Wing torn down with no respect to its history. Any planning should start with how often a state dinner is even held. The proposed ballroom is a monstrosity that would dwarf the White House. I fear the current resident would use the space for WWE fights or other undignified events mentioned previously to be held on the White House lawn. Restore but modernize the East Wing using the guidelines of people who are professionals who respect history and realize what takes its place should be dignified and reflect it being the people's house and not a style more in keeping with a failed casino mentality.

Professional designers should be consulted on the function of the space and flexibility for the future. Not Gaudy but tasteful. Everything does not need to be glitzy gold and marble. The design should take into account ALL of the United States. Make it honor all states, all regions, all of our history. And be useful and functional.

The size should not be larger than the residence. It needs to be proportional and appropriate to the buildings around it. The design should be in accordance with the rest of the historic buildings.

It is must not look like a gaudy palace for kings. It is the people’s house not Trumps house.

The donors MUST NOT get any benefit from their donations. They must NOT use it as a charitable deduction on taxes. There must not be a pay for play or quid pro quo. We want an independent fiscal audit of every dollar in and out.

The East wing of the White House should only be updated for structural reasons. Please return the building size and facade to match what was there previously. This part of “the people’s house” should welcome visitors (dignitaries and citizens alike), should house offices for the President’s spouse, and the basement should house secure facilities. That is all. No ballroom is needed, as this is a house and office building for the President and her/his staff. We can use one of many other federal buildings in DC to host large events. Again, please return the East wing to something that matches the West wing and NOT anything larger in size or scope. Thank you.

But it should be in the same building style as the White House and not some contemporary box. Also, the list of who is paying for this should be made public as well as who will pay for the upkeep of this monstrosity. He is adding costs for the American public for a building that wasn't needed. I'm sure there is plenty of unused space within Washington DC that could have been renovated for a ballroom space. The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

However, merely stopping this misconduct isn't nearly enough. Whoever authorized the project to begin without proper oversight also must be held accountable, to the full extent of the law. There was a time when the executive actually followed the law. We need to return to that.

It is very unfortunate that a portion of the White House was demolished seemingly without approval from anyone except the current occupant who, in my opinion, had no right to grant that approval. Other alterations he has made to the residence demonstrate a level of taste that is not in keeping with the historic nature of the building. The proposed addition of a ballroom is completely out of scale with the existing structure. The renderings shown recently show a structure the design of which has nothing in common with the White House. The design, and in fact, the entire project should be scrapped. The concept of a one thousand person ballroom is unnecessary and seems to me to be nothing but the egotistical pipe dream of one individual. I am of the opinion that the original structure should be meticulously restored to it's original condition and that this work should be done at the personal expense of the individual who ordered the demolition in the first place. This is the people's house. In no way should it use to express in any permanent way the design ideas of one individual nor should it in any way be considered a monument to an individual.

The White House belongs to the people of the US, and I am outraged that the present administration has demolished the East Wing without regard to its historical and cultural significance. It should be rebuilt to honor the First Ladies who worked there, adding a modest event space in keeping with the original decor and architectural style. Every effort should be made to retain its original character. And there should be legal consequences for this administration's willful destruction of the People's property.

The East wing should not be larger than the Executive Residence. A ballroom addition is fine. But it does not need to outshine the existing structure. Please create an East wing that compliments the White House.

No additional building should overshadow the White House itself. The entire ballroom proposal is repugnant and cheapens the dignity of what the White House represents . This is the house provided by the people for a president's use and not a private playground for an ego driven occupant. The entire project is shameful, extravagant, and unnecessary.

Dear Friends,

I am aggrieved that I cannot be with you in person today; and while modern email is a poor substitute for a little eye-to-eye communication, it must suffice.

The only ballroom our dear leader needs is in those too tight golf pants he wears. Moreover, the desecration already committed upon the East Wing is only out matched by his daily diaper blowouts.

Ah, I suspect you may take umbrage at my colorful descriptions, I don't blame you. The image of a 300 pound orange pustule poured into a pair of formerly white trousers is indeed offensive as is the mental image of a dotard gleefully squishing through his daily assaults on the Constitution; however, that is the truth.

Truth ain't pretty, much like the destroyed East Wing.

Respectfully submitted,

Bill Schmidt

The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800.

Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must comply with the National Environmental Policy Act, and receive congressional approval.

While expanded event space may be needed, additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure.

Thank you for the opportunity to have input to this project. The long-believed idea that the White House is the People's House has always been important to me. It has been a place of hope, of respect, of believing the people in that house were in fact truly working for the betterment of this country and for the people who live here. The current Administration has taken away that feeling of belonging. I resent the Administration taking down the East Wing the way that it did. I'm always up for upgrades and that type of thing, but that's not what happened here. I don't see that the "People" need a ballroom. The "People" do not benefit from a ballroom. What would I recommend then? Since the East Wing has already been destroyed, maybe a nice garden would be warranted. Let it replace the one that was also destroyed. There are many fine establishments and venues in DC if the Administration needs the space a ballroom provides. And that by itself would greatly help the DC economy.

Respectively, I request the East Wing of the White House, known as the People's House, be replaced to the size comparable to the size that was demolished. It should NOT over shadow or overwhelm the central or main structure of the building. Upon completion of the building, it should remain being called the East Wing, even though it may be used for official gatherings as dinners & meetings.

The interior furnishings and decorations of the wing should be consistent with NCPC planning of other federal buildings and keeping in line with the historic preservation of White House structure.

As a site note and as an American citizen, I never spoke to the need of a giant ballroom for the White House nor have any of my family and friends.

Thank you for the opportunity to share my thoughts. First of all the White House is the People’s House and does not belong to DJT. It is well known that he doesn’t follow laws or policies nor does he have the authority to make a major renovation without input from the Preservation group who ensures the historical structure isn’t damaged or destroyed. Perhaps a ballroom is needed but not 90,000 feet with 40 foot ceilings. We all know it is all about him. The White House isn’t Marl-a-Lago and the ballroom, if designed and approved by those in charge of any major structural changes to the White House, doesn’t need to be gilded as is DJT’s taste. His changes to the Oval Office and other areas are disgusting though hopefully temporary but the ballroom will be a permanent fixture and needs to be tastefully done.

I am against the 'Trump' Ballroom

Anything built near the White House should be done in the same style of the White House and should compliment the existing structure (what is left).

No one person should have free reign to change, tear down and design anything concerning the White House and lands.

It should be in a size that adds to the aesthetic of the current structure, not over power it and definitely not satisfy the gaudiness and be 'the biggest thing' which seems to be the love of the current resident.

All of the Gold accents that are Trump's favorite things should not be the decorative form. It should have elegance and be HISTORICAL in design both inside and out.

All of the billionaires money should be limited to a much smaller amount per person, ($500,000 each) and the public should be allowed to donate to building structure and be involved in the design.

Most important - The East wing should be rebuilt as close as possible to the original.

All the Gold additions to the White House should be removed and accents taken back to the historical design of the building (not necessarily original as before the current resident redecorated).

Most important it should be the will and design of the people not the will and design of the rich and laws passed so that this never happens again in the future.

The East Wing Modernization project is an abomination. It destroys the historical proportions of the White House, altering the appearance of this national landmark for the sake of stroking the president's ego. The funding of this project by private donations is extremely concerning and as it is under judicial review, potentially illegal. The destruction of the historic east wing of the White House was an abomination & affront to the American people. The horrible “ballroom “ trump should not be allowed to be built. He should be held accountable for his egregious actions.
A building added on to the White House should be built similar to what was there. But since the opportunity is there, to build it in the similar style but larger but still in proportion. And making it to the needs of today.
I am appalled that republicans were ok with what trump did. He had no respect for history or the value of architecture & antiquities.

The so-called modernization of the East Wing of the White House should not include a completely out of proportion and gaudy ballroom. The East Wing should be rebuilt to the previous size and dimensions inside and out. Tearing down the East Wing without permission has permanently destroyed part of The Peoples House and should be rebuilt as it was previously by a Historic Preservationist but with improved functional modernizations (HVAC, electrical,plumbing,etc). I do not want to see an "addition" of a ballroom that alters the overall aesthetic or design of The White House.

I live in a town with a strict historic covenant. Any property in the district must have materials and plans for restoration or remodeling approved before the work is done. That includes colors of paint, historically compatible materials etc, We even have a tree committee to approve of tree removal on properties in the historic district.

That is why I was shocked to see our beloved Whitehouse lose its historic East Wing removed without an intense period of debate. And now I am shocked to see the plans for a huge ballroom addition that will alter the footprint of the original wing and look imposing and unbalanced beside the current Whitehouse.

I ask for strict oversight of historic preservation rules to be followed in this project. The new building must blend in with our beloved Whitehouse. It must be built with historically compatible architecture and materials. It must celebrate the people of America- let us never forget that the Whitehouse is the "People's House"- not a monument to one man or party. Each President is a caretaker for a few years, but the Whitehouse stands year in and year out for "We the People".

The East Wing of the White House needs to be restored back to what it was before it was destroyed. The funds should not come from taxpayers. This was done illegally and the perpetrator should be the one responsible to pay for it. There is no need for a ballroom bigger than the building itself. Any updates needed in electrical, plumbing etc. should be made with the historical setting in mind to minimize any change to the architectural detail. I am opposed to the addition of Trump's "ballroom" to the White House grounds. It is not necessary, and it would destroy the beauty, grace and balance of the White House itself--which is the People's House, not Trump's latest project to tart up.

I was horrified to see that Trump tore down the East Wing. That is an historic part of the White House; many of the previous First Ladies did very important, patriotic work there. He has no right to disrespect them and their contributions by tearing down their offices and putting up a hideous, monstrosity, glorifying his ego....

I also think what Trump has done to the Oval Office and the Rose Garden are horrible/tacky. The Oval Office now reminds me of the Harry Potter set, not a seat of serious national business. They are just not in keeping with the standards of elegance and relevance they have been in the past. In short, stop messing with our history and our historic buildings....

Restore the East Wing to its original dimensions to preserve the architectural balance of the White House. Provide within and below the East Wing the facilities that existed prior to its (unl)awful demolition. The People's House does not need an enormous ballroom; the original event space was large enough. If anything must be updated and modernized, let it be electrical, plumbing, hvac, and communications. This must be a RESTORATION project, not a renovation project.

For many many years I have been fascinated by pictures from official White House dinners. To see our presidents graciously entertain foreign dignitaries and Hollywood elite was inspiring and things that dreams are made of.
The room that this function was held in always seemed large enough. There is no need to waste money on a new building.
The destruction of the East Wing that was done without permission after he told us that it would not be touched was a slap in the face to all Americans. I thought there were laws about destruction of government property with real consequences.
I feel that any monies pledged or received for the construction of an unnecessary ballroom should be used to restore the East Wing and if there isn't enough money from private donations then I feel that trump should have to pay for it.
In conclusion I say NO most emphatically to the 90,000 square foot ballroom monstrosity.

I am sickened by the illegal destruction of the East Wing of the White House. My wish would be to have Trump pay out of his pocket for the reconstruction of what he destroyed. In lieu of that, a new East Wing the same size at the existing West Wing should be built under the guidance of architects and the National Trust. A ballroom can be built elsewhere if necessary.

Do not allow this ballroom to be constructed. I have been a student of American history since childhood and have deep respect for our history and historical buildings. Nothing gives me more pleasure than visiting Washington, DC and touring these places. I had the privilege of living in the city for several years while a graduate student at The George Washington University, and my biggest thrill was the day President Reagan waved to us from Marine One as it was landing while we were playing touch football on the Ellipse. My opposition to the demolition of the East Wing and this proposed ballroom are not political but are from my love of history. The East Wing had always been the location of the offices of the First Lady. This project makes the assumption that like the current holder of that office, future First Ladies will not be engaged in the well-being of our country and need offices. If the past tells us anything, this is not so as past First Ladies set their own agendas of issues they wanted to use their position to work on. Often these were advocating for children or were health related issues, and I believe that future First Ladies will want to do so as well. Modern First Ladies are well educated women who want to put their skills to work for the people, and the East Wing gave them the offices to do so from. The proposed ballroom is too large for something a future President may have no use for, and it's footprint is too large to fit with the beauty of the White House. It will be an eyesore, and could be rendered unnecessary by the next President who will be inaugurated not long after building will be completed. So it will barely even be used. Over the centuries updates and additions to the White House have been done. But they have been small and/or easily retrofitted to something else. And they have NEVER been of a size and scope that dwarfs the building itself. The proper thing to do is to rebuild the East Wing as it was and bring back the important and necessary spaces that have been lost. Thank you.

This is a public space of national significance, and must be considered cautiously and thoughtfully.

The final plan must be of scale, consistent with design, scale and long-term needs, and by consensus of national historic and architectural experts.it must comply with NEPA and other oversight organizations and first be approved by Congress.

The proposed plan is none of these. Demolition was illegal, plans have been drafted in secret, and this process is untrustworthy and inconsistent with our national interests.

Please oppose both this design and this exception to rules and established procedures.

The proposed design itself is wholly unacceptable. It is outrageously too large, too ostentatious and inconsistent with architectural style and dimensions. Restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style, update wiring annd other HVAC and building infrastructure to bring up to present codes, and make interior ADA accessible where possible. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes.

If this were just an ‘East Wing Modernization Project’ it would be fine. But it’s not. It is a complete tear down of the East Wing and the addition of a 90,000 sf ballroom. This ballroom will be almost twice the size of the White House itself, making the White House appear tiny next to it. Public comments and review should have been done before any alterations were made, to include tearing down the original East Wing. I keep hearing about a 90,000 sf ballroom, but I don’t think that’s the only thing that will be built there. What are the dimensions of the rest of the East Wing? Why was Trump allowed to tear down the original East Wing in the first place. He doesn’t care about laws, rules, or the Constitution and thinks he can do whatever he wants. I’ve also heard that the new construction will be at least two stories high, which will make the entire complex look off kilter. It’s a ridiculous vanity project, one that he has already named after himself. What about the other ridiculous building projects he plans with his name on them? What about renaming the Kennedy Center after himself? I am totally against building this project as it is currently designed. It is not in keeping with the original design and will make the White House, the PEOPLES HOUSE, not Trump’s house, look ridiculous.

I am writing to express my strong concern regarding the proposed White House ballroom project and the process by which it has advanced.

The White House is not merely an executive residence; it is a national symbol and a historic treasure belonging to the American people. Significant alterations to such an institution should involve transparent public input and careful deliberation. I am troubled by the perception that major decisions affecting this historic property have moved forward without adequate opportunity for public feedback and national discussion.

Regardless of the Commission’s ultimate determination regarding the project itself, I respectfully urge that no portion of the White House complex be named after a sitting president. The White House represents the office, not the individual who temporarily occupies it. Preserving that principle is essential to maintaining its symbolic role as the people’s house rather than a monument to any one administration.

Thank you for your consideration and for your responsibility in safeguarding our nation’s historic institutions.

Respectfully,
Bill Newbold

While expanded event space may be needed on White House grounds, additions must respect the historic scale and design of the White House. At 90,000 square feet, the proposed ballroom would exceed the size of the 55,000-square-foot Executive Residence. Additions to historic properties should be compatible in scale and subordinate to the original structure, and a 90,000 square foot addition would overwhelm the Executive Residence in an entirely inappropriate way. It would destroy the character and historic footprint of a sacred space, and this project should be denied and sent back for redesign.

The White House, the People's House, does not need a ballroom. It is neither a hotel nor a convention center; DC has plenty of those. There is public space available nearby (I believe it's the Commerce Building) and the central space at the National Building Museum is huge. Union Station has a lovely and large space.

The White House, the People's House, is not a Palace. It was deliberately designed and built with modest dimensions and restrained aesthetics. Visitors to DC are often surprised at how small it is. The Georgian style is intentionally symmetrical.

The occupant of The White House is not a King; he works for us and lives there as our temporary guest. He should not be able to rebuild it to his own tastes, no matter who is paying for it.

A new East Wing should be constructed to replace the East Wing that was demolished. It should be similar in size, shape, and placement to the West Wing, to maintain the symmetry of the entire structure. If it is determined that the East Wing should house a ballroom, so be it--but it should be made to fit into the original footprint and design.

The White House is one of our country's most important national monuments. The size and scope of the planned ballroom diminishes the importance of our nation's history by its very distraction from the original residence; a place where world events have been shaped. The new ballroom is less about needed space and more about building a monument that no one would ever be able to visually ignore and many see as a monstrosity. The East Wing Modernization Project, as planned by President Trump, should cease. If there is a need to fix electrical, plumbing, etc. where the gaping hole currently exists, it should be done and the facade replaced in the style of the White House. There is no need for a ballroom to be attached to the White House. It can be built elsewhere in the city. Away from the White House might even be easier for guests to arrive and depart from for dinners and whatever events a ballroom would be needed for. Despite all the glamour the Presidents current and future may desire, we Americans are a simple people - farmers, mechanics, small business owners and the like. I do not support the East Wing Modernization Project primarily because they sidestepped the necessary processes to begin demolition of a historic building, but also because the size and scope of the project is inappropriate for the existing compound. Small changes are reasonable—a massive ballroom of this size is not. Likewise, the occupancy capacity for this plan poses, I would think, security liabilities for the White House itself. What event would possibly need an occupancy capacity of that size and is it necessarily and cost efficient to have such an event at the residence of the president of the United States when other venues are available? Moreover, would events like this be happening regularly enough to justify the cost of construction? If not, it's wasteful spending on what amounts to little more than a vanity project.

The size of the new addition should be scaled down to be an enhancement of the existing structure and not be larger than it. The architecture should blend with it and not be overly ornate. One person should not have the deciding voice but a panel of historical, architectural, and design experts should shape the project.

I believe that the East Wing modernization project as currently designed does not provide the proper balance to the original White House. The start Wing should be built in a promotional manner to the West Wing and the main House. This is our nation’s home to our President and needs to be designed for the long-term.

Return the outside of the building to its previous state to balance the overall look. Interior improvements could be modernized to include an event space that fits the overall look of the White House. An outdoor space could be added adjacent to the east wing to create more event space. Update electrical, plumbing, HVAC as needed.

Overall, it should be returned to its previous appearance with internal modernizations as needed.

I continue to be outraged by the destruction of the East Wing and the way it was handled. It is like those responsible said "just tear it down, then they won't have a choice and I'll get what I want".

I agree with the learned architects that the new building should be compatible in style and size and not overshadow the White House. That said, my opinion is that, as proposed, it is way too big. My personal taste tends to be minimalist and I would like the background to be restrained (NO to gold trim!) and simple with well executed lighting and beautiful chandeliers. It should be a blank canvas to work with for each event so that they are unique and memorable in their own right.

I know that you will do your very best and for the White House and the citizens of this great nation. Wishing you good weather for construction and hoping that youknowwho doesn't sue or indict you.

Thank you for taking on this challenging project.

50.000 square foot east wing renovation would be an abomination to the White House. It is too large, gawdy, twice the size of the principal structure, would overwhelm the White House grounds, and for what? It is a disgusting proposal to build a disgusting monstrosity that should be reversed immediately. AND,… it is a public disgrace to force the whims of one individual on the entire American public. As a proud Marine Corps veteran the east wing renovation is a disgusting attempt to highjack U. S. History and American culture.
Put back the original at its original scale.
Plus get rid of that tacky gold leafing currently applied all over the White House. It is a tacky, tasteless disgrace.

Thank you for inviting comments on the proposed East Wing modernization project. The White House is the People's House. It serves not only as the official residence and offices of whoever is president but as a living symbol of American democracy. It is neither a palace nor a monument to aristocratic wealth and power. It therefore does not need to be lavishly ornate or dazzlingly impressive. In fact, to represent the American people, it should not be either of those things.

The former East Wing should not have been demolished without approvals. Thankfully it's not too late to plan its replacement wisely. It should complement the historic White House, not exceeding it in size or height or attempted glamour. It can be a welcoming, functional, and dignified place to host guests from other nations without being anything close to 90,000sf. Please scale it down from the original proposal.

The East Wing used to be the point of entry for ordinary people coming to Washington DC who chose to visit the White House, experiencing for themselves one of the immense privileges American citizens have in our participatory democracy. As a nation, we should not trade that symbolic access for a ballroom designed to entertain the wealthy and powerful elite.

The hasty demolition of the East Wing was a blatant disregard for the system of checks and balances. Please consider adding policies to your process to prevent things like this from happening again.
With regard to the ballroom, I currently have zero confidence that the President and his staff has any respect for the National Capital Planning Commission's expertise or authority. Please work hard to make sure that a prudent path forward can be achieved.

It is difficult to emphasize just how egregious the disregard of the demolition process has been. The White House is the PEOPLE'S House, and blatant indifference to longtime regulations that protect our nation's heritage has apparently become a sad reality in these United States.

That travesty having been accomplished (obliteration), it is hard to visualize a reinstatement of professional architectural and government standards at this present time. On the oft chance there will be a return, one hardly needs to state the obvious that any addition that projects to the FRONT, or towers OVER the current White House would be wholly inappropriate. Why not just demo the entire thing (White House) and start over?

I was heartbroken to see our Peoples' House so thoughtlessly and unnecessarily desecrated because of a whim of one person. I would hope that the new event space would not dwarf the current White House, that it be of modest proportions, and that the architecture compliments the current building. (Seriously, how ofen would a ballroom be used, and why cannot current spaces in the White House suffice, as they have for all these years?). I would ask that the planning commission take time in decision making, remembering that the current occupant of the White House will only be there for a few more years, but that what will be built will be permanent. Finally, I would ask that, as much as possible, the green space around the addition be restored...it was thoughtless and disrespectful to destroy the gardens planted by First Lady Johnson dedicated to First Lady Kennedy.
Thank you for considering my opinion.

"Before nationally significant places are permanently altered, the public deserves an opportunity to help shape the decision. The White House is a National Historic Landmark and National Park, owned by the American people and home to our presidents since 1800.
This review is also required under federal law. Major construction projects in Washington, D.C. must undergo review by the NCPC and the Commission of Fine Arts, comply with the National Environmental Policy Act, and receive congressional approval."

The East Wing has already been demolished. So who is going to hold Trump and his administration accountable? There's no going back- it can't magically be reconstructed with historical significance as it once was. This is a huge loss for White House history. It's also a huge loss in national public Trust in our federal government and its processes. I can't emphasize enough how extremely disappointed I am that this unilateral decision was made and official processes were ignored. But that seems to be how the Trump Administration operates. And too many lawmakers and those in the general public don't care, as in their eyes, he's akin to God and may do as he pleases.
History will not look favorably on what has already been done to the White House, or in general, on the decisions and actions of this administration.

First, change the title of this project to the Donald J. Trump Vanity Project. The American people have not been breaking down the doors to tear down the East Wing to build an oversized, ostentatious ballroom. The East Wing had enormous historical significance as it was the operational center for some of our most famous and productive First Ladies such as Eleanor Roosevelt, Jackie Kennedy, Rosalyn Carter, Michelle Obama and Betty Ford. That is not the President's home to do as he wishes (to the structure), he is a temporary tenant. What other temporary tenants have a right to change the structure of the house they live in, when they do not own it. There has been no evidence that such a structure is needed, no evidence that this modernization is in keeping with the significance and history of the building. The East Wing has already been torn down via Executive Order. I recommend strongly the East Wing become a National Monument, and placed into a state of formal Arrested Decay, similar to the state in which the Kennecott Copper Mine in Wrangell St Elias National Park and Preserve has been placed.

My recommendation is neither specious nor frivolous.

Our nation faces its deepest political division since the Civil War. Reminder 'monuments' to that devastating period of our history were effected, in the hope that terrible period would never recur. Battlefield memorials are obvious. But, so, too, is Arlington National Cemetery; it serves as a rebuke to the Confederacy, and to the ideals upon which it was founded. The historian Heather Cox Richardson has described in detail the Confederacy's anti-democratic and counter-Revolutionary ideals — among them most prominently, that men are NOT created equal.

Our nation requires a rebuke of our present political state. This state includes the unlawful destruction of the East Wing of the People's House. I can think of no better way to effect such a rebuke-reminder, than to leave the White House exactly as it now stands.

Most sincerely,

Albert K. Henning, PhD

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the modernization project of the East wing,
I think it is wonderful that the White House will have a proper event space for delegate's from all over the world to meet and a visitor's entrance that are not trailers.
I do think that the proposed plan is extremely GRANDIOSE and out of scale with the White House and the West Wing. The proposed height of the structure is too high with relation to the White House. I'm not exactly sure why they can't lower it since the interior is just the top of the ballroom.
I did watch the committee meeting and it seems as if it's all getting done in different phases which are not being brought to at one time to this committee. It would seem that an overall plan should be brought to the committee all at the same time.

I also find it extremely concerning that this is being privately funded. This is the People's building, not the billionaires building and should be funded by the federal government.

Dear Committee Members,
I am writing to express my strong opposition to the proposed ballroom project associated with President Trump.
This proposal reflects a troubling disregard for the historic integrity of our national spaces. Buildings of national significance are not blank canvases for personal legacy projects. They represent the collective history, values, and democratic principles of the American people. Alterations of this magnitude demand restraint, preservation-minded leadership, and a commitment to protecting the character and symbolism embedded in these sites.
Additionally, I am deeply concerned about the financial implications of this project. At a time when public funds should be directed toward pressing national needs, allocating substantial resources to a ballroom expansion is difficult to justify. Fiscal responsibility must remain a priority, particularly when the expenditure does not clearly serve the broader public interest.
I urge the committee to reject this proposal and instead uphold the responsibility to preserve the historical and cultural integrity of our national landmarks while exercising prudent stewardship of public funds.
Thank you for your consideration.
Sincerely,
Christina Fowler

This country does not need a gargantuan ballroom for parties at the White House. Restyling the East Wing can include a much smaller space for gatherings, plus it should include office space and meeting rooms for the future First Ladies, her staff, and the planning of other projects that are relevant to the welfare of this democracy. It should be historically "styled" to reflect its standing as part of the Peoples' House. The Peoples' House is not a "party house" - oversized and gaudy ballrooms do not serve the American Public. There is important work to be done to preserve this nation. Return the East Wing to its rightful functions. Restore the grounds, including the Rose Garden and let's move forward and away from the travesty that was inflicted upon this important National Symbol.

I strenuously object to the project in its present form which is unwarranted and ill planned. A ballroom is the vanity project of a person who is only a temporary occupant of the people's house. Its size diminishes the existing structure, and is not necessary for the building's intended use. The East wing should be restored to the uses that serve all of the American public.

Return the East Wing AND the Rose Garden to their previous status. The scale of the proposed ballroom is ridiculous and overshadows the White House. Perhaps funding for the rebuild of the East Wing could come from the personal coffers of the person who had it illegally torn down.

The big beautiful ballroom will detract from the true purpose of the peoples house. The scale and size of it will create an imbalanced look. It will serve no purpose and the look will scream ostentatiousness that does not reflect what the true purpose of the building is meant to represent.it is the temporary home of our leader. A place where they live and work. Not a place designed to hold outrageous wealthy parties while the average person struggles to get by. The gold decorations added to the White House have already destroyed the look along with the petty posts under photos of previous leaders. This is not what the founding fathers had in mind when they built the house of the people, by the and for the people. The ballroom is neither of these. It's being built to stoke and satisfy one mans ego. It must be stopped and the building returned East wing rebuilt for it previous purpose, as a place for the 1st man or woman to use.

Please restore the East Wing to the facility the American people know and love. The current construction activity was not approved by the relevant authorities. Put the ballroom elsewhere in the city. It could probably go in virtually any commercial property and then you just add some gold touches here and there to appease.

Finally a smooth path to record public comment. This particular issue is somewhat like closing the barn door after the horse has left for the forest. Projects like the East Wing should be fully vetted prior to demolition, It Wasn't. The scale of an addition to a national treasure should never overshadow the original. Expediency of desire should Never subrogate to history and decorum. I personally find the entire concept of the ballroom, in its current form and intention, to be a disgusting abuse of power and a demonstration of extremely poor taste. The fact that it is being floated with bribes does not validate its completion without a complete re-thinking of the scale and proportion.
Thank you for the opportunity to submit input.

Thank you for this opportunity to comment on the East Wing project. I would like to see the East Wing restored to its original architecture and scale, with modern wiring, ADA compliance, etc. I do not feel that we need or want a massive ballroom that will overshadow the White House. Please consider returning the East Wing to its original purpose. If the entertainment space is to be expanded, it must be in scale with the original building. I would prefer to see the Rose Garden returned to its original state as well, rather than a massive patio, which is cold and sterile. This is, after all, the people's house, not a palace, and should reflect that.

Architectural plans should be presented for approval and comply to standards used elsewhere for restoration of historical buildings. Since it has been publicly stated that taxpayers money will not be used because "private" donations have been secured, those funds should be used. If not located, Donald Trump should be held responsible for breaking the law and regulations and should be held responsible for construction costs. No gaudy gold decor should be allowed. I was heartbroken to see a historic building demolished before proper steps had been taken for this project. I would like to see the building restored with similar architectural style to match the White House, and for the new building to remain smaller than the White House residence so that it does not overshadow our beloved landmark. The exterior entrances should reflect ADA accessibility compliance in a thoughtful, perhaps even artistic, way.

Please make sure the building remains reflective of its purpose to serve our citizens throughout many generations and administrations, and avoid any architectural styles which appear to be heavily leaning towards subjective personal taste.

The White House is the people's house and should be the primary visual on the White House estate. The East Wing (and West Wing for that matter) should not dwarf the main house. Rebuilding and modernizing security, fire, electrical are fine, but the same aesthetic of the White House should be continued on the exterior of the new East Wing.

To put it plainly:
East Wing smaller (shorter, less prominent) than White House.
Aesthetic should match the exterior of the White House and East Wing - not "modern design."
Under no circumstance should any president's name be attached to the exterior of the East Wing / Ballroom.

A massive ballroom overshadowing our historic whitehouse is neither appropriate nor tasteful. While the damage has already been done, I strongly believe that the replacement East wing should be appropriate to the setting and role of the whitehouse. If we ignored how we got here, treating those like a fire or other natural disaster, we'd be looking toward a modernized wing which echos and respects the historic setting it replaces. This is no different. The replacement should be a aesthetically appropriate, and should follow the historic lines of the east wing.

The East Wing must be rebuilt to its original specifications as it holds cultural significance to the entire U.S. if additional event space is needed, it must be built using the original specifications then add to it in a conscious manner not to opaque the overall structure of the White House. Maybe do a modular space that is multifunctional. All health, safety and environmental protocols and regulations must be followed.

Good Morning,

I am writing to express my deep concern re: the abrupt destruction of the East Wing of the White House, a house that belongs to ALL citizens of the United States.

The drawings and renderings that have made public show a disproportionately large and visually unbalanced design for reconstruction. The very fact that the demolition occurred suddenly and without proper review and authorization is troubling and, sadly, without recourse.

At only proper way to proceed is with full review that is managed not by the current resident of the White House but by the NCPC and other governing bodies.

Please, do your job.

Sincerely,
Lucy Simonds

I am GREATLY opposed to the proposed 90,000 square foot ballroom addition. I wonder at how the east wing was allowed to be demolished in the first place and would like to know what penalties will be assessed to the company/individuals who participated in it's destruction without permission or the required public comment process. I believe the east wing should be restored to is original form.

I am also GREATLY opposed to the construction of any arches.

I am also GREATLY opposed to the addition of Trump's name to the Kennedy Center and believe it should be removed promptly. As this was also done without permission, what penalties will be assessed to the persons/company that put the additional name on the Center?

The gaudiness of the proposed addition is blatantly out of proportion with the White House. No local building should dwarf the White House, a symbol of and for "the people." The fact that we've been able to do without the proposed ballroom all along suggests the need is only occasional, in which case, it seems entirely feasible to rent such a space, many of which are available in DC and surrounding suburbs, thus putting that money into the local economy on an ongoing basis. The current project's funds could and should be devoted to one or more of the cut programs for children or into programs that will benefit The People rather than their so-called leaders. The funding sources for the proposed ballroom seem rather dubious, according to news reports, and I suspect Trump, as his long history clearly displays, has zero intention of paying the contractors who will perform the work, which seems unlikely to be completed within the term of the current administration, which may indicate Trump's and his minions' intentions to cancel future elections and remain in office. Finally, it's time to teach our presidential toddler about consequences for his refusal to obey the laws and norms he swore a sacred oath to uphold. He tore down the East Wing of the people's house without approval or permission from the appropriate agencies or any regard whatsoever for norms of behavior by our leaders. Someone with some cujones should be willing to tell our Orange Mussolini NO, you misbehaved, now you can't have your ballroom. Conclusion: NO ballroom!

~Renee Nicole Good and Alex Pretti and all the other DEATHS caused by his GOON SQUADS

~The "Trump-Kennedy Center"

~A Memorial Arch to Himself

~Selective Whitewashed History at Historical Sights

~Abruptly Ending Scientific Research Of Great Importance Without ANY Review

~Abruptly Ending Foreign Aid Programs - Except Israel's!??? - Without ANY Review

~Withholding Congressionally Administered Funding from colleges and universities until they acquiesced to his petty demands of obeisance

~Armed ICE goon squads presence being needed to save Americans from "thousands of dangerous criminal illegal immigrants" being utter bullshit to justify a personal army attacking communities who voted against him.

And so much MORE...

The whole lot of them needs to be rounded up, marched into jail, and charged with HIGH TREASON!!!

And you want us to focus on a building addition that the dope has already completely DESTROYED without getting our permission.

Like most average Americans, the White House has held a special place in my heart. Built by slaves, it has graciously housed living history since John Adams' time.

It is a national treasure with unparalleled history, and it is now on the chopping block.

As part of our National Park system, the White House belongs to the people, not to Donald Trump, despite what he thinks and says.

He has no legal right to demolish large parts of it, and certainly no right to turn it into his own personal gilded castle. He has Mar-a-Lago for that.

Since its construction, the White House has stood as a symbol to the world of shared power between the government and the people of the United States. Now it has become a symbol of wealth and exclusion. The title of the project “The Modernization of the East Wing” is a bandage to hide the real intent of the destruction that has taken place already. What ever was destroyed must be rebuilt with high historical accuracy. True historic preservation says that no updates or embellishments should be done unless it’s a repair which must look like what it is replacing. Turning the East Wing into a party venue is an insult to the working men and women who built this country. The United States does not need a ballroom because only dictators and kings throw state dinners. Almost 350 years ago we fought a war to get rid of a king and all that monarchies symbolized and now we are backsliding with this idea of a ballroom. There are people in this country who live in historical homes who would have faced serious consequences from local preservation societies if they had done a tenth of what was done to the East Wing. I strongly urge you to put back what was demolished and fine all the people who had any hand in it’s destruction because that’s what would happen to anyone who destroys historic buildings in the way that the East Wing was destroyed.

Its one thing to allow a President to change decor at the White House without approval but it's another thing to demolish a very large portion of a historical building without any approval or oversight. The safeguards put in place so things like this don't happen need to be more than guidelines and put into law so this can't happen again. In my mind this building is a representation of this nation's character and should reflect the history of this nation not the opulence in one man's mind.
These plans should be rejected and redesigned to represent the character and architecture of the building. In my opinion the nation doesn't need a ball room that large and I believe the rooms that were destroyed were more significant that this proposal. The public entrance and the First Lady's offices need to be restored and if there is space for a large room for state dinners so be it.
Thank you for allowing me to commet.

This renovation should proceed with Congressional oversight including consultation with professionals in historic architecture. The building should take into account form and function, not just size, and should be upgraded to be accessible by all and use modern, energy efficient materials. I don’t know how you penalize the destruction of the original structure but it is unfortunate that reviews and procedures were not followed before demolition. Importantly, we must account for every penny of funding for this project to be sure it is not yet another avenue for Presidential bribery.

The destruction of the East Wing to build a gilded ballroom is an abomination. This project is an ego driven alter. For years the White House has managed quite well, and if additional space is required it should be done in keeping with the original structure and style. Further, the East Wing needs to be restored. Once the current resident is gone, the next First Lady (or Husband) will require the space.

A new ballroom at the White House would be a thoughtful and forward-looking addition to the historic residence. Designed with a modern yet timeless aesthetic, it could provide a versatile, state-of-the-art space for hosting official ceremonies, diplomatic receptions, cultural events, and community gatherings directly on White House grounds.

By expanding on-site event capacity, a ballroom would enhance operational efficiency, reduce the need for off-site venues, and allow the Executive Residence to better accommodate large delegations and distinguished guests. With careful architectural planning, it could complement the historic character of the White House while incorporating modern technology, accessibility features, and sustainable design elements.
Overall, a well-designed ballroom would strengthen the White House's ability to serve as both a working government space and a symbol of national hospitality, creating new opportunities to host meaningful events in a setting that reflects tradition, professionalism, and progress.

Thank you, President Trump!

While it has been stated that the initial cost of this massive ballroom is to be paid by private funds, the ongoing maintenance and repair will, no doubt, be borne by the taxpayers unless there is some sort of large endowment fund established for such a purpose. It is unfair, undemocratic for this project to continue without following an established process as done for other White House projects. This is the property of the people of the United States, not the current resident. The Constitution clearly intends for Congress to control the purse. Deny the project unless and until Congress allocates funds and provisions for the future are made.

This is the people’s house. Tenants can paint but never destroy.

The East Wing should be restored largely as it was, with updates for accessibility and general modernization. The First Lady’s offices should be restored, as should the Rose Garden (landscape/gardens should also be protected). Restored exterior elevations should be indiscernible from the original. The interior should be finished in a period style in keeping with other areas of the structure.

Any ballroom should be located so as not to disrupt the visual appeal of the White House when viewed from the front in particular. Off-site locations should be considered.

Under the circumstances, all renovations and rebuilding should be paid for from the president’s personal bank account and no expense spared. This is the people’s house.

I am opposed to the proposed modernization project for the East Wing. An updated, underground secure facility might be necessary, but the size and stated purpose of the proposed project appears excessive, and does not comport with the meaning or intent of the applicable guidelines for an addition to historic structures. The main structure is perhaps the most symbolic of our nation's capital, and any addition to it should be consonant with its modest style.

This project, unfortunately, should never have begun. The public was not given a chance to share comments before the tearing down of the East Wing. Now the POTUS wants to build a ballroom that may not cost the taxpayers money but will certainly buy favor for the people donating money to the project. This project should instead be built as a gallery or museum space for visitors and at a minimum should include replanting of the trees that were torn down and perhaps a new rose garden since the POTUS decided to pave over the previous one. There are many great options for projects that will benefit the people of the United States without making the POTUS beholden to private donors. Sincerely,
A concerned citizen

Thank you for the opportunity to provide public comment.

After reviewing the video of the January 8th NCPC meeting on this subject, I have the same concerns as Commissioner Phil Mendelson.

1. The proposed size of the East Wing project is too large in scale and diminishes the Executive Residence. An event space for 1000 is excessive. It should be cut down to perhaps 600, and the gathering foyer does not have to be so large. From what I have researched, it appears that most State Dinners all over the world are generally scheduled to have 150 guests. While the idea of "breaking bread" with the entire Congress is a laudable ambition--actually far, far, far, more appealing than hosting a UFC event--it would be a rare exercise. This appears to be more of a party center, and we the public should not be paying for an "event space" that surpasses the scale of executive work space.
2. I do appreciate consideration of ADA compliant entrances and exits, and the development of utilitarian space such as a commercial kitchen.
3. I am very concerned about NOT having a complete plan presentation when there is also ongoing discussion of proposed changes to the visitor entrance, enhanced pathways to the West Wing, and especially changes in Lafayette Park (the only peaceful view of the White House for the public). The scope of the project appears to be much more than "the East Wing" and complete transparency is required.
4. I would also like more information on proposed proximal landscaping on the south side of the complex (not just information about the grove of trees limiting sight lines from the street).

To whom it may concern: When I saw the pictures of the demolition of the East Wing on the news, I almost cried. It is as if someone had destroyed a part of a national building with a bomb. The protocol of restoring or altering a PUBLIC building had not been taken. It was as if some entity had decided to destroy my own home without my consent. The White House is not a private property personally owned by one person. It belongs to all Americans. With all that needs to be fixed in this country, building or not, the last thing we need is a ballroom, let alone one that even the architect said was too big. Purpose behind the building, matters. Aesthetics, matters, the LAW, matters. Precedent, matters. And now that the demolition has been done, illegally, to say they must finish the work for national security purposes is disingenuous. If national security was an issue, they would have followed the proper protocol in the first place. I am totally against a ballroom or any such structure being built in the East Wing's place. Any upgrades to the "bunker" underground ought to be scrupulously checked and approved by LEGAL protocol BEFORE included. A national public structure accessible to all Americans and/or a structure for the NATIONAL work of the First Lady/Gentleman would be appropriate as a replacement for the current building wreckage. Living in the White House, President or FIrst Family or not, does not give the residents or federal workers a blank check to do whatever they want with it. If we allow this ballroom construction or any edifice to be erected against the legal protocols, aesthetics and proper legal vetting of the financing of said project, then we are creating a corrupting precedent. Thank you for allowing me to state my case.

The White House is the representation of our country. The east wing should not have been destroyed. No matter who is in the White House I do not believe a ball room is representative of what this country is about. It should be rebuilt as it once looked. Updated for security and even an under ground bunker if necessary. It should be of the same size as it was with the offices as before. It should not be larger than before or change the look. I would not want any president to hold banquets as the new proposal suggests. This money should go for money needed for updating transportation for airports and roadways. It doesn't matter if the money is donated. Donors to this might expect something in return and this is not how the United States operates. Return our peoples house as it was.

The East Wing Modernization project should not be approved.

1. The Trump administration did not consult with NCPC prior to destroying the existing East Wing of the White House. This alone should be the basis for a lawsuit against the administration.
2. The proposed structure will overwhelm the aesthetics of the White House itself, making the People's House look small and weak.
3. The event space that Trump wants to construct - his gilded "ballroom" - will be a reminder of Versailles and a "golden age" that does not represent the lived experience of the majority of the American population. Frankly, it will be ugly and tacky.
4. The funding for the renovation, from private citizens and corporations, seems to act as a quid pro quo for access to President Trump and White House officials.

Please put an end to this, and demand that the Trump administration restore the destroyed East Wing to its original condition.

Tearing down the East Wing of the White House was one of the most horrifying things I could imagine. To begin, demolition should obviously not have occurred until a full historic design review was completed. I've lived in a historic district where changing an exterior paint color on my house without approval would have resulted in fines and work stoppages. Why is this different?

Please restore the exterior dimensions and architectural style of the East Wing and Rose Garden. Of course, updates should be made to modernize the electrical, HVAC, lighting, etc. in space, make it ADA accessible, and improve security. Follow past process for making needed changes while ensuring historic appropriateness.

Should it be determined that a ballroom can be built while maintaining the integrity of the building design and proportions and making sense within the historical context, large private donations to fund this project should not be allowed as they appear to be currying political favor.

If a larger, modern ballroom is needed, construct it elsewhere in the city.

Thank you for allowing the public to comment on potential changes to The People's House, a federal property. In my opinion,

1. Any project on federal property should follow existing laws and policies. This will be stating the obvious but bears restating.
2. Unless there is an emergency, work on properties that are part of our national heritage should be done deliberately and properly and not be done in artificial haste. In this case, there is no emergency. Let's tap the brakes here.
3. Any project on federal property should use federal funds. Private money creates conflicts of interest (aka grift) and the impression of private ownership.
4. Due consideration should be given to keeping the property in service to the public, not to a select few. How would taxpayers be using the proposed space?
5. Please be transparent about projected ongoing maintenance and capital costs of the proposed space, and indicate who will be responsible for these costs.
6. Any project proposal should consider how it could blend into and enhance, not dward, the existing site.
7. The White House, simple in scale, has always shown the world that our president lives in a house, not in a palace. This should continue to be the case.
8. No person should be above the law. Please do your best to show us that this is still the case, even if the White House has already been vandalized and parts of our national heritage destroyed without any intelligent consideration or discussion.
9. As a lover of our national heritage, I request that the committee work to ensure that any White House project represent our nation in the best possible light and not look like a cheap casino.

The former East Wing should never have been torn down in the first place. This was done on a whim without any of the proper authorizations. The White House is the People's House, not the plaything of any occupant, including the current one. With that said, and since he was allowed to get away with it with no repercussions, my feeling is that an attempt should be made to restore the previous building as completely as possible, with the cost coming out of the private funds of the current White House occupant. As a proud American citizen, I value our history and our culture of due process. The White House belongs to us all and any proposed alteration requires public debate and consent.

I demand that the rules be followed and that the proposed defilement of our most historic public building be stopped. The lack of accountability by this president is unacceptable.

The proposed ‘‘modernization’’ is out of scale with the existing White House and ugly! This design is inappropriate and must be rejected!
Sincerely,
Linda Saul-Sena

What an absolute disaster. The White House is the people's house, and we had no say in the destruction. This is a historic house, and what was lost is a major piece of history. To be replaced by an oversized, gaudy, unnecessary ballroom.
It was never presented for approval, much less approved. This is one man's egotistical folly, a mane who won't even be in office to see its completion. Funding is questionable, at best.
We must stop being cowards, and demand restoration to its previous state at his cost.

The East Wing of the White House belongs to the American people — not to any one president. It should be restored to its original function and historic character, not rebuilt as an ornate, gold-trimmed ballroom/bunker. All those responsible for the illegal demolition should be held accountable.

This is an eyesore, a vanity project by a megalomaniacal sociopathic narcissist to overcompensate for smal hands and an even smaller phallus, and serves no interest to the taxpaying America public. It will be an eyesore of gaudy tacky fake apray painted gold, and an affront to the eyes, a cheap casino knockoff addition that will dwarf the historical structure of the known White House.

Why should we allow a convicted rapist and felon to disgrace the white house any further? The East Wing as was was vital to the firstnlady and daily white hiuse operations, and should be restored as it was to maintin the symmetry of the building.

Restore the East Wing original exterior dimensions and architectural style to honor and respect the history of our Country and of the structure. Ensure wiring, plumbing and security features are updated to modern standards. Make interior ADA accommodations where needed. Follow past process for making needed but historically sensitive changes. The building should be modernized to allow those who will work in the facility to have all necessary facilities in order to complete their required tasks. Restore exterior landscaping to enhance historical aspects of the structure. Do not allow golden embellishments; but rather hire architectural firm that designs and manages construction of historical buildings.

The White House is the people's house. The individuals who hold offices and positions within the government are temporary residents of the building; they do not own and must make any changes with regard to the history of the building and the laws surrounding the maintenance and upkeep of the building.

If there is truly a need for a larger entertainment facility, it should be constructed elsewhere in the City. The White House is the office building of the people's government employees and the temporary home for the holder of the office of President.

New Federal building projects should set a very high standard and encourage architects to add a structure that is cutting edge in that it adds to the history of architecture representing our current time period and not just a pastiche of previous styles.
It should be appropriate in size and respectful to existing and. Neighboring structures

It should not damage or destroy existing structures

It should uphold and follow all building guidelines.

The White House ballroom project fails in all these categories and should be halted and any future project be thoroughly reviewed

Commissioners,
I believe that allowing the proposed ballroom to proceed as designed would be a grievous mistake. It is seriously overscaled relative to the existing White House and West Wing and will be very costly to undo in years to come.
I'm also concerned that the East Wing was demolished without any opportunity for review or comment. This sets the bad precedent that people can simply ignore the existing review process and proceed on their own. Washington, DC is not Dodge City!
Sincerely,
Peter Borgemeister

Why I Oppose the East Wing Modernization Project
1. Unregulated Demolition of the Historic East Wing

The White House is not just a functioning executive residence and office—it is one of the most iconic historic structures in the world, symbolizing American democracy and continuity.
My opposition begins with the unregulated demolition of a major portion of that structure.

Lack of Proper Oversight: From what has been publicly disclosed, this project moves forward without the level of historic preservation oversight that should accompany changes to a National Historic Landmark. The East Wing's architectural and historical integrity deserves more protection than routine administrative approval.

Irreversible Loss: Once you tear down or radically alter historic fabric, it is gone forever. Demolition—even partial—entails a permanent loss of heritage that no modernization can truly replace.

Precedent: Allowing major demolition without stringent preservation standards could set a dangerous precedent for future modifications to federally protected sites.

Historical buildings are not museums, but they do warrant more thoughtful stewardship than this plan appears to offer.

2. The 90,000-Square-Foot Ballroom: Unnecessary Scale and Purpose

The proposal includes a massive new ballroom addition—nearly the size of a professional football field.

Questionable Necessity: The White House already hosts state dinners, receptions, and large gatherings. There is precedent for hosting events without requiring huge new additions. The size and scope of this ballroom exceed what is reasonably needed for official functions.

Cost vs. Value: In a time of rising public expenses and competing budget pressures (from infrastructure to healthcare to national security), committing massive resources to a single construction driven more by desire than necessity is fiscally irresponsible.

Security and Congestion: A venue of this size brings logistical and security challenges, potentially disrupting the surrounding neighborhood and straining Secret Service resources.

A modern administration should be able to host dignitaries and events without building what amounts to a private convention center.

3. Pay-for-Play Concerns and Donor Influence

One of the most troubling elements of the project is the perception—if not the reality—of a "pay-for-play" dynamic involving donors.

Donor Access and Special Treatment: Reports have circulated that certain wealthy donors, fundraisers, or political allies appear to have privileged access, influence, or informational advantage regarding this project. Even if no legal violations occur, the appearance of favoritism undermines public trust.

Private Influence on Public Architecture: When private money and connections start shaping public, symbolic landmarks, it raises questions about whose interests are being served: the American people's or those of elite insiders.

Lack of Transparency: Key details about contributions, how donors were selected for consultation, what influence they exerted, and what benefits (if any) they derived remain unclear. This ambiguity fuels skepticism and erodes confidence.

Public architecture—especially the White House—should not become a vehicle for special interests.

4. The Design: Tacky, Out of Touch, and Unfit for the White House

Aesthetic disagreements are subjective, but in this case many critics (and I include myself) find the proposed design to be out of step with the dignity and architectural heritage of the White House.

Inappropriate Style: The proposed ballroom's design does not harmonize with the neoclassical and historic character of the rest of the White House complex. Instead, it risks looking like a generic convention center slapped onto a world-renowned historical site.

Lack of Elegance and Restraint: The White House represents not only executive power but national identity. Its spaces should reflect that, with timeless, refined design—not flashy or ostentatious elements that draw attention to themselves.

Public Perception: Many people perceive the design as tacky or overly grandiose—in a way that feels self-indulgent rather than representative of national dignity.

Architectural updates should enhance the legacy of the White House, not undermine it through poor stylistic choices.

Conclusion

In summary, I oppose the East Wing Modernization Project for the following reasons:

Unregulated demolition threatens historic preservation and sets a troubling precedent.

The 90,000-square-foot ballroom is an excessive and unnecessary addition that misallocates public resources.

Pay-for-play dynamics with donors undermine transparency, fairness, and the public trust.

The design aesthetic is out of touch with the heritage and dignity the White House should embody.

This project should be reconsidered with full transparency, rigorous oversight, strict preservation standards, and a design that truly honors the history and symbolic role of the White House.

While there may have been some updating and modernization of the East Wing needed, the total destruction of a historical structure is devastating. It may be the president's residence while in office, it belongs to the people of the United States. So much of the White House and the grounds have now been destroyed and the cost, both financially and historically, is overwhelming. Future generations will never know what the true meaning of what the White House represents, all they will know is that they see a man tearing apart what he wants like it's a giant toy. Watching the East Wing be ripped off within a matter of days- before anyone even realized just how devastating the destruction would be- was heartbreaking. NEVER in my 68 years did I imagine I would see anything like this. We the people need to have the right to determine the course and scope of major changes to our House.

A giant ballroom on the White House would symbolize that the American government prioritizes the concerns of the rich over the majority of working-class and middle-class Americans. The space would be better used to address the needs and concerns of the American people, not in entertaining the wealthy, the powerful, and the famous. Is our Government fully captured by Big Money? It seems like it might be - so much so that, with this ballroom, they are willing to mock us, the citizens, with how little our concerns matter.

I believe the East wing of the White House should be totally restored and replaced back to its most current iteration prior to its unauthorized destruction. NO addition of a ballroom should be included. IF a ballroom is considered for inclusion it should be built with the proper proportions to the surrounding structures, with similar, tasteful, decorations within the internal ballroom space. Thank you for taking the time to read my thoughts and consider them.

Please greatly reduce the size and scale of the ballroom to be added at the east end of the White House. What funds will be allocated for the building's operations and upkeep in the years to come? From where will those funds be taken? Current costs to provide gatherings in the Rose Garden hardly seem enough to cover the operational costs of a building twelve times the size.

Will adequate parking space for guests and staff be provided and where will it be placed? Will the building be available for private party rentals? If so, what sort of security measures will be needed between the ballroom and the White House areas?

It seems that this enormous building, even if built using private donations, will only become an albatross on the future White House operations budget.

Respectfully request that the ballroom be scaled back in size to meet the symmetry of the original WH: under 20k sq ft.

The people's house should be a welcoming affair for domestic and foreign dignitaries/people and showcase, without direct attribution to one president, a place to host lovely dinners and events. The theme should align with the historical significance of our country and not gutted and gilded in gold. That's an affront to our melting pot roots.

Finally, the Jackie Kennedy Rose Garden should be restored as a place of remembrance and peace. No one person gets to eliminate history and dominate our house.

Please do not let the man currently in the White House to continue to treat it as if he owns it and doesn't even need to obey local zoning laws. This is the People's House. I'm so angry that he was allowed to demolish the East Wing without any repercussions. We do not need a gigantic ballroom just to soothe his inflated ego. I personally think he should be required to put everything back the way he found it, at his own expense. Barring that, the National Park Service should, with NO pressure from the current office holder, determine what the current needs for meeting space and others uses are, and entertain proposals/designs for the project, the winner to be decided BY THE PUBLIC. This new construction should not be named for the current office holder, who seems to need to put his name on everything he owns and even things he doesn't. Perhaps to satisfy this need, the new building should have an exhibit named for him, documenting the former building and its destruc! tion.

To whom it may concern,

The East wing should be reconstructed back to it original form. The tearing down of the East wing was a slap in the face to the people of the United States. While it needed to be modernized, it did not need to be taken down. As far as a new ballroom, it should be constructed in a different location and decorated in an historical fashion. None of the Gilded nonsense that has been put in the Oval office. It needs to be tastefully decorated to gracious standards in keeping with the dignity of the Capitol of the United States of America. I believe protocol having been completely disregarded, should be accompanied by financial penalties and blanket denials of future projects. (The beg for forgiveness rather than ask for permission process has resulted in a destroyed/ completely razed building). I believe the East wing should be restored as the ballroom and made ADA compliant and I do not think any additional structures should dwarf the existing 55,000 square feet of the White House. All of the modifications should comply with building codes and approvals through committees.
It is a publicly owned capital building and should not be treated as a personal real estate asset.

I was appalled at the wanton destruction of the East Wing with apparently no approval.
Since it must be replaced, and event space is needed, an addition of an appropriately sized and scaled event space would seem logical. This space should be in keeping with the historical nature of the building and should not ‘‘dwarf’’ the residence.
I also think, that since Mr Trump promised to fund his project privately and purported to have 400 million dollars towards it, he should bear the cost of the destruction already done, without approval, and fund construction of a new space.
